Reagan Struggle Fails

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — President Ford won the first crucial test of strength at the Republican National Convention Tuesday night in a tight, tense vote that rejected Ronald Reagan's effort to force disclosure of the President's prospective running mate by Wednesday morning. It was a show of the strength that could propel Ford to the Republican presidential nomination.

For Reagan had banked heavily on a preliminary victory to turn the Ford trend and crack the President's delegate ranks. The challenger's campaign manager said the roll call would show where the power was.

And it was with Ford, narrowly but apparently securely.

The stakes were high, the atmosphere electric, as the roll was called, each state's count drawing a round of cheers, from Reagan partisans for the yes votes, Ford supporters for the no votes.

The vote was 1,180 against the Reagan amendment, 1,069 for it, with 10 delegates abstaining.

Ford already had moved past presidential nominating strength in the Associated Press count of delegate commitments and preferences.

The vote on Reagan's rule showed Ford even stronger, and his backers erupted into cheers. "Ford's gonna win," they shouted.

"That does it," said Bill Taylor, the Florida chairman, as he announced his state's votes after the alphabetical call of the states had been completed. It brought out the Ford banners in force.

In advance of the roll call, the focus had been on Mississippi's delegation, officially uncommitted in the presidential contest. By the time that delegation figured out its verdict and cast 30 votes against the rules amendment, the decision had been made.

A Ford manager had said in advance that victory on the rule would be a clear indication Ford will win the nomination, "and probably by a greater margin than expected."

John P. Sears, Reagan's manager had said defeat in the first test "would create problems," and that seemed an understatement.

But Reagan had another issue to test, an attempt to amend the platform with language that would amount to a rebuke of the administration for its handling of detente policy toward the Soviet Union.

It was a raucous convention session. Rival cheers, chants and jeers underscored the stakes in the debate over advance disclosure of the President's running mate.

Reagan strategists picked the issue, and their tactics magnified their defeat. Their amendment would have ordered Ford to do something Reagan already had done, with his advance selection of Sen. Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania as a running mate. Under it, Ford would have been required to name his man by 9 a.m. Wednesday, about 12 hours prior to the presidential nominating roll call, instead of awaiting nomination before disclosing his choice.

"Texas casts 100 principled votes aye," said Ray Barnhart, chairman of the all-Reagan Texas delegation, as he voted on the losing side on what Reagan had billed as a right-to-know amendment.

But the issue wasn't principle. It was power. And that belonged to Ford.

Reagan supporters took the platform to argue the rule would reform vice-presidential selection, "get this secret out in the open," avoid another Agnew, another Eagleton. Ford defenders called it a desperate power play, an attempt to change the rules in the middle of the game.

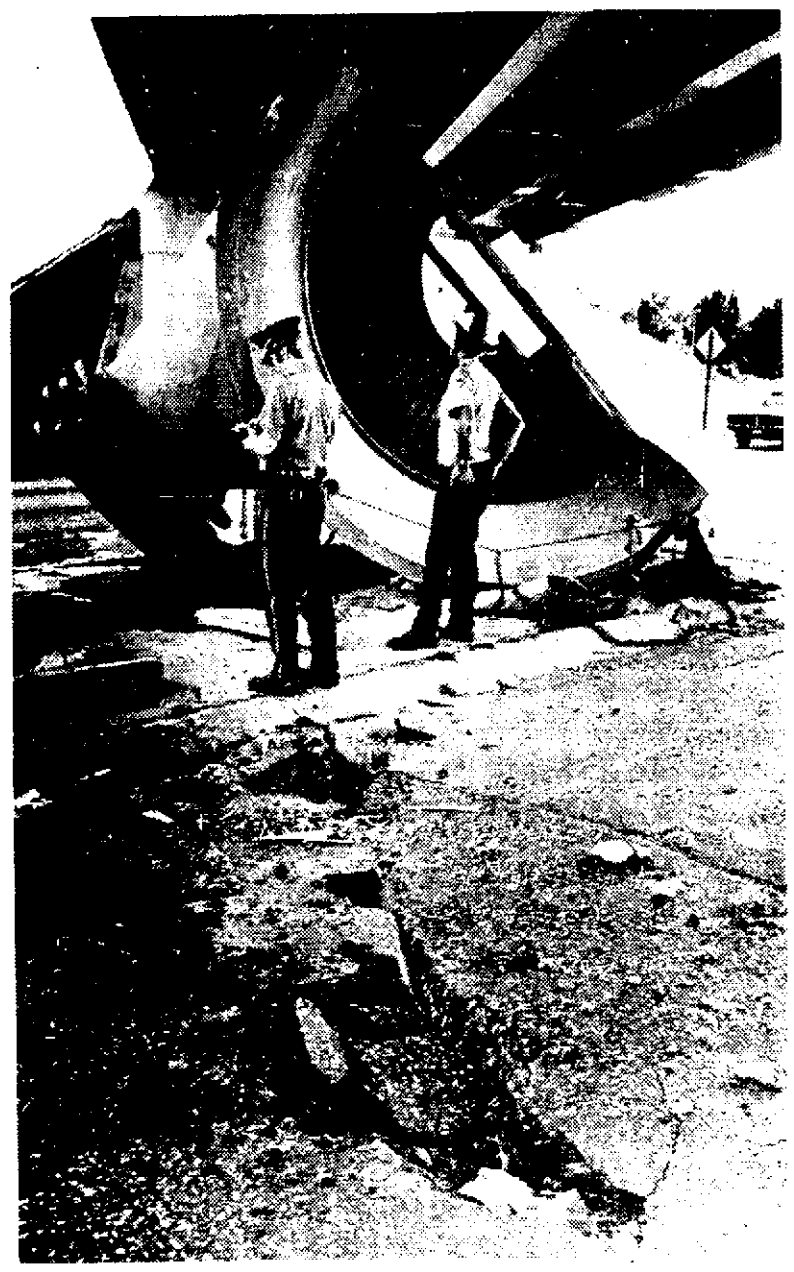
A. Lynn Lowe of Texarkana, Ark., who backs Ford, said he opposes the a mendment because he wants Reagan to be the vice-presidential choice.

He said the rule change would preclude a Ford-Reagan ticket.

Sen. Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, Ford's floor manager, took the rostrum to underscore that argument, saying he doesn't know whether the President would choose Reagan but wants him "at least to have that opportunity."

The tension on the convention floor flared in the New York delegation, where Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller found himself in the middle of a brief scuffle. Richard Rosenbaum, the New York GOP chairman, said a Reagan delegate tore out his telephone to Ford's convention command post. "I want that man arrested," Rosenbaum shouted to Secret Service agents. "That's what the Reagan people are like."

Mississippi delegates voted in caucus to side with Ford, against the Reagan amendment, then argued on the convention floor about a report that Ford's campaign chairman was writing off the South as a GOP target in the race against Jimmy Carter. They decided to caucus again, then decided not to. The confusion seemed appropriate on the hot, noisy convention floor.



Truck's Load Too Tall

A large generator was knocked off of a flatbed truck when it proved too tall to clear the bridge at 14th and Cornhusker Hwy. Tuesday afternoon. Flying debris struck the windshield of a following car, causing minor injuries to the driver, and a few moments later, a minor three-car crackup occurred on the opposite side of the divided roadway, police said. The surface of Cornhusker was torn up too. (Staff Photo by Randy Hampton)

Nebraska Delegates Keep Commitments

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Kansas City — Nebraska Republican delegates stuck with their commitments Tuesday night in what was probably the climactic vote in the long struggle between President Ford and Ronald Reagan.

A Nebraska delegation which will cast 18 votes for Reagan Wednesday night gave the Californian 18 votes in his crucial struggle in vain to force Ford to name his vice presidential choice before the presidential balloting.

Seven Nebraska votes were cast against the proposed rules requirement.

On Wednesday, Nebraska will cast seven votes for Ford's nomination.

The 18-7 split on presidential balloting is mandated by state primary election law — although there is no penalty for any delegate who violates his commitment to the primary voters.

But delegates were free Tuesday to cast their votes as they wished on the Reagan rule proposal.

The Nebraska Reagan majority caucused in the lobby of the Alameda Plaza, Reagan's headquarters hotel, earlier in the day to cement its position.

"I want anyone committed to Reagan who is not willing to vote for (the rules proposal) to say it right now," delegation chairman Milan Bish of Grand Island challenged the delegates.

A quick poll of the delegates on hand for the lobby caucus indicated that the Nebraska bloc would remain united when the issue was finally put to a vote.

"Let's hang tight tonight," Bish declared.

"Now the fun begins. We've been a little conciliatory, but now we are going to play it tough."

Bish was chairman of Reagan's successful Nebraska presidential primary campaign last May.

The rules proposal was what Bish acknowledged to be a final strategic move designed to swing the nomination Reagan's way.

And beyond that, Reagan delegate Gerald Stromer of Kearney suggested, it would (if successful) force Ford to reveal "who and what philosophy" the President would place in position to succeed him if he won a final term in November.

Republican delegates should know in advance whether Ford would choose "a 'lib' or a conservative" as his running mate, Stromer said.

Hours later, in the steamy din of the emotional convention floor, after delegates had alternately cheered and booed speakers favoring or opposing the rules change, Bish announced the 18-7 Nebraska split in the roll call confrontation.

Probably, almost certainly, it was the final gasp for Reagan, who stomped Ford in last spring's Nebraska primary to win control of the Cornhusker delegation.

On a night when Betty Ford danced with Tony Orlando in the presidential box, much to the delight of the Ford partisans, it appeared to be all over.

But, unless released from their commitments overnight, the Reagan delegates will keep Nebraska in the Californian's camp Wednesday night when the final deed is done.

2,000 Die In Quake On Philippine Island

Manila, The Philippines (UPI) — The death toll from a catastrophic earthquake, 10 powerful aftershocks and 24-foot tidal waves in southern Mindanao Island climbed toward 2,000 Tuesday.

The government's National Disaster Coordinating Center and the Red Cross, working together on casualty lists, said at Midnight that at least 1,699 persons died, and the toll was continually rising. Many victims drowned in tidal waves that swamped coastal areas.

Dr. Vicente Galvez, Red Cross secretary general, said the mounting casualty toll indicated the disaster could be the worst to hit The Philippines since World War II. The three cities of Cotabato, Zamboanga and Pagadian and more than a dozen coastal towns were devastated.

There were no reports on the fate of American missionaries who worked at schools and churches in Mindanao. Thousands of persons whose homes were washed away were housed temporarily in school buildings, churches and government offices.

In a nationwide radio and television speech, Marcos proclaimed a state of calamity on Mindanao Island and the Sulu Archipelago.

He mobilized all government agencies, including military units, for relief and rescue operations, and ordered medicines, food and additional relief personnel airlifted to the southern region.

The first and biggest earthquake hit the Mindanao-Sulu region 500 miles south of Manila shortly after Midnight. The jolt, which measured a magnitude of 8.0 on the open-ended Richter Scale, knocked down at least 10 tall buildings, damaged many others and spawned powerful tidal waves.

Tidal waves were reported as high as 24 feet swept 150 miles across the Celebes Sea and poured millions of tons of water on Mindanao Island's southwest coast.

The wall of water passed through the wide mouth of Illana Bay and struck the coastal cities of Cotabato and Malabang. Officials said more than 500 buildings, including fishermen's homes at the edge of the sea, were swept away by the waves.

Later Tuesday, 10 strong aftershocks of the main quake jolted the islands. The strongest, which measured 6.8 on the Richter Scale, hit mountainous Jolo Island in the Sulu chain.

Some of the heaviest damage was reported in Cotabato City, where two hotels, a department store and a large restaurant collapsed. Many smaller buildings were damaged in the city of 100,000.

"People are walking around as if in a daze," said UPI reporter Sol Jose in Cotabato. "There is a shortage of just about everything. Cars have to line up for four hours before they can get gasoline."

Would Commissioners All Have To Be Thin?

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Will only skinny politicians be allowed to run for Lancaster County commissioner if the board moves from three to five members?

The discussion was at times lighthearted, but the problem was potentially serious and costly as the County Board discussed possible space problems should the voters decide to add two more board members.

The question of increasing the board from three to five commissioners will appear on the November ballot and if approved, two additional commissioners will take office in January 1978.

The problem is finding office space and perhaps even seating space in the commissioners' hearing room for two more elected officials.

Currently the board has a signed contract for remodeling the current hearing room into a combined county courtroom and commissioners' hearing room.

This remodeling will decrease space in the hearing room and use up office space originally planned for more commissioners.

In addition, commissioners had before them Thursday a contract to remodel other county space for additional public defender's office room.

This public defender's space might be needed in the future to take care of the county court, and the combined courtroom-hearing room might have to be redesigned to function only for commissioners' meetings, suggested Bob Colin.

"We could have real problems," argued Colin, who urged the two other commissioners to hold up on any remodeling until after the November election.

"I hate to see the effort to get two more commissioners tie up the office space for the courtroom and the public defender," countered Bruce Hamilton, who jokingly suggested that if there was not enough room in the front of the hearing room for five commissioners, "We could just take turns having some of us be absent."

The front podium, where commissioners sit, will be shortened to about 16 feet in the remodeling process, leaving about three feet per chair for five board members.

"You're going to have one or two (commissioners) sitting behind a post. If you want to go by seniority, fine," said Colin, the senior commissioner. He said he did not want to peer out at the audience from behind one of the large supporting pillars in the room.

The possibility of cramped seatings space for board members led Hamilton to suggest that maybe only thin commissioners should be elected in the future.

And that suggestion reminded commissioners of Hamilton's earlier, tongue-in-cheek characterization of Republicans, who he concluded are "all old and rich and fat." Hamilton is a Democrat.

In their customary fashion, the commissioners split 2-1 on approving the public defender's office remodeling contract. Colin voted against the contract.

In other action the board officially approved the county's 13.219 mill levy to support the almost $26 million county budget for sica fiscal 1976-77. The board also approved appointment of Walt Mitchel, city personnel director, as the new director of the merged County-City Personnel Department.

Crash Critically Injures Driver

An unidentified motorist was listed in critical condition at Lincoln General Hospital Tuesday night following a two-car crash on W. Cornhusker Hwy.

Two cars collided head-on between 1st St. and NW 4th St. The severely-injured driver was westbound on Cornhusker. The eastbound driver was not seriously hurt, police said.

Names were being withheld pending notification of relatives.

Police In Detroit Tighten Security

DETROIT (AP) — Police kept a tight ring of security around the downtown area again Tuesday night in a continuing effort to curb lawlessness of teen-age gangs.

The first of 450 laid-off Detroit police officers returned to their jobs Tuesday as part of an all-out crackdown on lawbreakers.

For security reasons, officials said, they would not disclose exactly how many police were concentrated in the downtown area.

The intensified police activity followed a Sunday night outburst which Police Chief Philip Tannian termed "a small-scale riot."

He said the trouble developed when roving gangs of blacks attacked whites and blacks alike at a rock concert in Cobo Hall, near the Detroit riverfront.

Police said about 400 persons tried to crash the concert without a ticket. A number of pedestrians in the downtown Detroit area were beaten and robbed as the violence spilled out into the business district.

One girl said she was raped and another was attacked in the concert hall area. Whites fled from the hall area and the blacks then robbed many of the blacks at the concert.

Many of the policemen had been laid off in an economy move but after the Sunday violence, police and city officials said they would find the money somewhere to pay salaries of the officers recalled to duty.

Police said that by nightfall Tuesday, 5,310 police officers were available for duty, just a couple hundred short of the normal complement.

Police imposed a 10 p.m. curfew on everyone under 18 years of age.

Powwow Gets Bond In Time

Bob Lasley, an organizer of a powwow slated for this weekend in Lincoln, said Tuesday that a $5,000 bond for the event has been obtained from an Omaha bonding company.

Lasley said the bond was obtained with the help of United Indians of Nebraska.

"We don't anticipate any more problems in that matter," Lasley said. "The bond will be in the mail tomorrow."

Councilman Bob Jeambey had reported Monday that the powwow organizers had been unsuccessful in obtaining a bond from Lincoln bonding companies.

One company official, he said, told organizers he would not issue a bond for the powwow if the organizers had $5,000 "out on the table."

Spokesmen for State Surety and Universal Surety bonding companies, however, said the powwow planners were treated no differently than any other group.

Universal Surety said the group was never denied a bond, although it had failed to provide financial statements, which the company said was a necessary requisite for issuance of the bond.

The powwow, similar to those held in Lincoln in previous years, will be held in an open area including four ball diamonds located on Park Blvd. south of the Humane Society in South Lincoln.

26th Dies Of 'Legionnaire's Disease'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - As a new team of investigators began looking Tuesday for a toxic substance here that could have caused the "legionnaire's disease," authorities reported the 26th death caused by the disease.

Health officials also announced that a third person who attended a recent Eucharistic Conference, a worldwide gathering of Catholics held here 10 days ago, had been hospitalized with the disease.

All the other 165 victims, including the 26 persons who died, were connected with a state American Legion conference held here last month.

Three investigators, all experts in industrial toxins, or manmade poisons, were looking at possible environmental factors for the disease, including air pollution, construction sites, and weather patterns.

The investigators were from the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, the research division of the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

An earlier investigation had concentrated on the hotels where the legionnaires stayed, including the Bellevue-Stratford, headquarters for the July 21-24 convention.

The latest death was that of Harold Stump, manager of the legion post at Milton, Pa., Stump, who had attended the convention, died Monday night at a Milton hospital.

Numerous possible causes, such as bacteria or virus, have been ruled out by researchers, who still say they're stumped by the outbreak.

While the latest investigation began, officials of the Bellevue say they think their hotel has been unfairly singled out.

They said 8,000 persons had stayed at the hotel, one of the city's largest, during and since the legion convention and only the legionnaires became sick.

No hotel employes have become ill, they pointed out. Bruce Greenfield, president of the corporation which owns the hotel, noted that even some of the researchers checking the disease had stayed at the Bellevue.

But another baseball team has canceled reservations for the Bellevue. The Houston Astros, who will be here next weekend for a series with the Philadelphia Phillies, switched to another center city hotel.

Last week, the San Francisco Giants moved out of the Bellevue and into a different hotel.

Marshall Refuses To Block Sale

NEW YORK (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall turned down on Tuesday an attempt to block the federal government's first oil lease sale for the Atlantic Ocean.

The attempt to block the sale, which will now proceed, had been brought by lawyers for New York State and environmentalists, who argued as oil company executives milled about a New York hotel ballroom, waiting for the sale to start.

The bid to block the sale had been turned down Monday by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Last week, U.S. Dist. Judge Jack Weinstein barred the sale, saying environmental interests should have been consulted more fully. The appeals court overturned his decision.

The Supreme Court is in recess, but Marshall has jurisdiction over the 2nd Circuit Court District. Marshall said he will issue a written opinion later.

Interior Department officials said the case was the first on offshore oil lease sales to reach the high court. Previous efforts to block lease sales off Louisiana, California and in the Gulf of Alaska all failed.

Earlier in the day, the oil companies had submitted sealed bids thought to run into hundreds of millions of dollars for the right to search for oil in an 876,750-acre area 45 to 90 miles off New York's Long Island, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

The Interior Department estimates the area holds a potential 400 million to 1.4 billion barrels of oil, but no one will know for sure until drilling starts.

Since 1954, federal offshore lease sales have resulted in more than 13,000 wells that have pumped oil and gas worth more than $23.2 billion.

The highest single bid for any lease sale was one for $211.99 million offered three years ago for a tract in the Gulf of Mexico. The record total for bids came in 1974, when a sale of tracts off Louisiana brought $209 billion.

The high bidders on each tract in a sale win the right to search for and produce oil and gas. Leases not developed in five years are forfeited.

If You Like Nice, You'll Love Paris

Paris (UPI) — Thieves, carrying food and supplies with them, tunneled through sewers into the vault of a fashionable Paris bank branch over the weekend and ransacked safe deposit boxes in a carbon copy of a caper at a Nice branch of the same bank just one month ago, police said Tuesday.

Police said the highly organized gang cut its way with blowtorches through reinforced concrete into the vault of the Societe Generale's branch on the Ile Saint-Louis. The picturesque island in the Seine River is home to film stars, politicians, executives and entertainers.

A statement by the bank made no cash estimate of the gang's haul. The take apparently included cash, gold, securities and jewelry from safe deposit boxes in the bank's vault.

A bank spokesman said failure to discover the break-in before Tuesday morning was due to "human error."

He said officers of a hired security security company heard strange noises underground, but failed to alert the police. The spokesman said the bank vault had never been equipped with an automatic alarm system.

Witnesses said police officers, alerted by residents of the neighborhood who also heard strange noises, were called to the scene while the thieves were still at work. But, finding nothing suspicious, they left.

Police said the thieves, who were able to work undisturbed over the three-day Assumption Day holiday weekend, made their getaway back through the sewers with the contents of more than a hundred deposit boxes.

The Societe Generale, France's third largest bank with deposits of $13 billion, was the target last month of an identical operation at a branch in Nice. The break-in came July 17-18, also a holiday weekend.

In that raid, 10 or 12 highly skilled burglars using blowtorches rifled nearly 400 safe deposit boxes and made off with an estimated $10 million in cash and valuables.

Police noted several similarities between the Paris and the Nice thefts. Both times the thieves came well prepared for a long job, fitting their tunnels with ventilation outlets and bringing along plenty of wine and sandwiches.

Mozambique Raid Said By Rhodesia

Dar es Salaam, Tanzania (UPI) — The Mozambique Information Agency claimed Tuesday that Rhodesian troops, masquerading in black face as Mozambican soldiers, machine-gunned civilians, including women and children, and burned their bodies during a raid into Mozambique nine days ago.

The agency said that up to 1,000 persons may have been killed in the raid and that more bodies were still being found in the bush. It said the dead included "children, women and old people" who were shot dead or who drowned trying to flee.

(In announcing the raid one week ago, Rhodesian officials said it was part of the white supremacist regime's "hot pursuit" policy against black nationalist guerrillas and that more than 300 had been killed. The Rhodesians said the target was a base camp for guerrillas staging raids into Rhodesia.)

The Mozambique Information Agency said that 670 bodies had been found so far and that "medical staff on the scene believe the death toll is at least 800 and may well reach 1,000."

The agency said the target of the attack was a refugee camp at Nayazonia in Manica Province which housed 8,000 black Rhodesians who had fled to Mozambique in recent months.

"Most of the victims were shot," the Mozambique agency report said. "Others drowned in a river while running away. Some fled wounded into the bush to die there. Bodies are still being found more than a week after the massacre."

The agency also said a Spanish priest, Father Castro of the Burgos Fathers, was killed by the Rhodesian troops on a nearby bridge after the attack.

The agency said the attackers consisted of both black soldiers and white soldiers who had painted their faces black. One survivor said the raiding party approached the refugee camp shouting "Viva Frelimo."

"The people approached them, children jumping on the vehicles," the survivor said. "Then one of them (Rhodesians) shouted through a loud hailer 'Where are your leaders? Go and call them. We want to speak to them.'"

"Some of us moved to point out the houses where those in charge were," the agency quoted one survivor as saying.

"It was at that point that the Rhodesians began to fire on us. Those who were nearest fell. They died right there. Then they (the troops) began to pursue those who were running away towards the river," the survivor told the agency.

"They got out of their vehicles, firing continuously. On the road the vehicles crushed the bodies of everyone who was in their way. Many people died in the river when they were trying to cross it to escape to the bush, including children, old people, women and those who didn't know how to swim."

The agency said the Rhodesians then ordered survivors to pile the bodies of the women and children into huts and set them on fire so that photographers could not "prove that this was a refugee camp."

Libyan Regime Walking Tightrope In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Col. Moammar Khadafy's radical Libyan regime is playing two apparently contradictory roles in the Lebanese civil war.

On the one hand, Libyan money and sympathy have backed the Palestinian guerrillas and their leftist Moslem allies throughout the 17-month conflict.

On the other, Khadafy's envoys have been actively involved in efforts to bring a cease-fire. At least 900 Libyan soldiers have come to Lebanon as part of the Arab League peacekeeping force.

The Libyan tendency to support leftist movements wherever they spring up has led to rightist Christian charges that the Libyan "peacekeepers" actually have been fighting alongside the guerrillas.

Palestinians, Arab League Secretary-General Mahmoud Riad and Maj. Gen. Mohammed Hassan Ghoneim, the Egyptian commander of the league's 3,500-member peacekeeping force, have all denied the accusations. Independent observers tend to dismiss the charges as propaganda, but the Christians are still waiting for a formal league report.

"I hereby affirm that none of my soldiers has ever taken part in any fighting on any side in the Lebanese conflict," Ghoneim said in an interview. "They serve under the Arab League flag and with an Arab League spirit. They take their orders from me, and me alone."

The most serious accusation was raised last month when the Christian leadership said 2,000 Libyans landed at Sidon port in southern Lebanon with heavy weapons and armored cars to back up the leftists.

Ghoneim said the Libyans who landed actually numbered only several hundred and had been dispatched at his request to balance out the composition of his Arab League force.

Ghoneim nevertheless admits he has to take special precautions in deploying the Syrian, Libyan, Saudi and Sudanese troops who make up the force in approximately equal units.

Libyans cannot be stationed at Beirut's frontline crossing point protected by Saudi peacekeeping troops because that would invite shelling from the Christian side.

"When I was asked to send a unit of the peace force to Tal Zaatar, I didn't send Libyan soldiers," Ghoneim recalled. "The considerations involved are not too obscure. You can understand," he said, meaning that Libyans would draw fire from Christians besieging the Palestinian camp.

Similarly, Syrians under his command have to be kept out of situations that might provoke Palestinians or leftists angry at Syria's aid to the Christian side.

The result is that the only patrolling visible is by Saudis or Sudanese. This is only in Moslem areas since Christians refuse the peacekeepers so long as Libyans are involved.

Christian leaders have also charged that Sudanese, Somalis, Algerians and Iraqis are fighting with the leftists.

Former President Camille Chamoun, a Christian, reported recently that his militia units captured two Iraqi soldiers, part of a 150-man squad sent to Lebanon by way of Egypt.

Reporters who have covered the war from the beginning and often visited battle fronts have seen soldiers from no foreign army except Syria. But Palestinians readily admit they have Iraqis fighting with their Palestine Liberation Army.

Several hundred left Iraq during various upheavals there since the 1967 Middle East War and joined the PLA or other guerrilla groups, sources said.

Libyan Regime Walking Tightrope In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Col. Moammar Khadafy's radical Libyan regime is playing two apparently contradictory roles in the Lebanese civil war.

On the one hand, Libyan money and sympathy have backed the Palestinian guerrillas and their leftist Moslem allies throughout the 17-month conflict.

On the other, Khadafy's envoys have been actively involved in efforts to bring a cease-fire. At least 900 Libyan soldiers have come to Lebanon as part of the Arab League peacekeeping force.

The Libyan tendency to support leftist movements wherever they spring up has led to rightist Christian charges that the Libyan "peacekeepers" actually have been fighting alongside the guerrillas.

Palestinians, Arab League Secretary-General Mahmoud Riad and Maj. Gen. Mohammed Hassan Ghoneim, the Egyptian commander of the league's 3,500-member peacekeeping force, have all denied the accusations. Independent observers tend to dismiss the charges as propaganda, but the Christians are still waiting for a formal league report.

"I hereby affirm that none of my soldiers has ever taken part in any fighting on any side in the Lebanese conflict," Ghoneim said in an interview. "They serve under the Arab League flag and with an Arab League spirit. They take their orders from me, and me alone."

The most serious accusation was raised last month when the Christian leadership said 2,000 Libyans landed at Sidon port in southern Lebanon with heavy weapons and armored cars to back up the leftists.

Exon Procedure Right

When you consider the budgetary facts involved, it is obvious that Gov. J. J. Exon was right in foregoing a special session of the Legislature to consider the state's income deficiencies. Rather than that, the governor relied upon the State Board of Equalization and Assessment to increase the sales and income taxes.

Of course, we would much prefer that, somehow, the state do a better job of things in the beginning. We would prefer the state not have to back up in the middle of a year and adjust the rates that had been set for that year.

The retroactive feature of the recent hike in the income tax is especially galling, or it will be when the reality of the thing hits home to taxpayers as they make out their 1976 returns next winter. What it means is that any refund you might have had coming will be eaten up by the retroactive feature of the increase. You may even end up owing the state a pretty hefty additional chunk of money.

But the increases approved by the board were still the way to go, given the fact that revenue had to be increased to meet appropriations. This is true, largely because senators, had they been called into special session, would have only about a fourth of the budget to play with.

There is no way that they could or would have cut enough out of the largely operational budget to trim appropriations to the level of income without a tax increase. Another one-fourth of the budget is largely University of Nebraska and about half of it is state aid to local subdivisions.

Those facts also serve to demonstrate another part of the evil of state aid. Many people advocate state aid as a means of reducing local reliance upon the property tax.

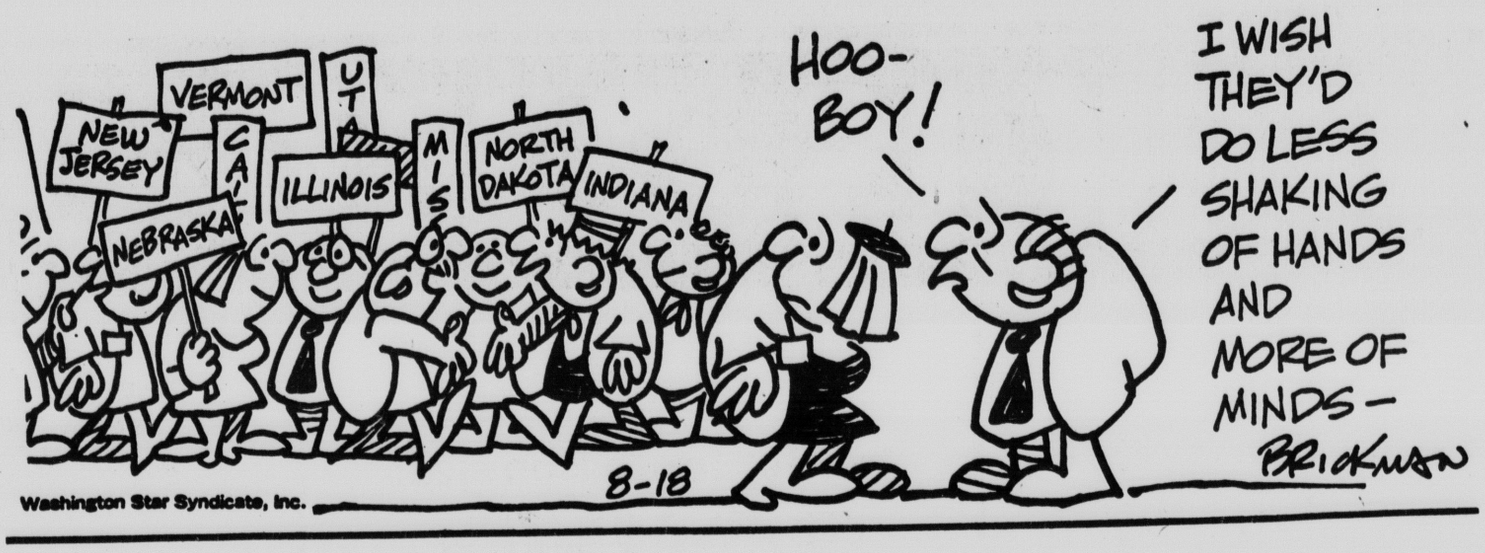
There is no question that the property tax is relieved as a result of state aid to counties, cities and schools. But such aid tends very quickly to become an untouchable item, as it now is with the state.

The state could not touch the aid it provides without creating financial havoc in the local governing units. This is especially true once fiscal years have started and local budgets have been adopted with the state aid figured in.

Thus, the state gets locked in for appropriations that already account for 50% of its budget. Fiscal sovereignty at the state level is effectively surrendered under those conditions.

At the same time, fiscal responsibility at the local level is substantially diluted because state aid does not come as a result of action by local officials against the voters to whom they are accountable. If local authorities had to raise by the property tax what they now get in state aid, you can bet your last dollar that budgets would be smaller.

Services, perhaps, would not be as good but at least there would be clear and direct accountability. None of this makes state aid all bad but it does speak to maintaining a relatively low level of such aid.



WCTU Not A Failure

A story this week in The Star discussed the work of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, better known as the WCTU. Unfortunately, the WCTU is judged on the issue of total abstinence from alcohol. While temperance is found in its name, the organization works for total abstinence.

If it could, the WCTU would ban liquor altogether in society, as this country tried with a brief bout with prohibition in 1920. But prohibition spawned so many other evils and was so ineffective in stopping the consumption of alcohol that it was given up as a bad experiment.

We continue to believe that prohibition is not the right answer but we suspect the WCTU meets with more success and has more secret admirers than even it suspects. While the organization has little chance of bringing back total abstinence as anything other than a voluntary commitment, its never-ending battle against the evils of alcohol is not wasted.

There is no question that the WCTU helps to make a point in society in favor of moderation in drink and that is a most commendable objective. Unfortunately, many people do not realize the importance of moderation until it is too late for them, until they have become alcoholics or have damaged their health.

Perhaps that helps explain, too, the relative older age of the WCTU membership — the years of living it takes some people to realistically recognize and deal with the potential ill effects of alcohol. Youth is prone to learn by experience and experience is often a harsh and costly teacher.

No doubt the WCTU is not winning all the battles it would like but it is a constructive influence in our society. Sometimes it must seem discouraging to the organization that it has had less than spectacular success in its admonition to abstinence but the pursuit of that extremity has helped promote the cause of moderation and intelligent use of alcohol in all aspects of its presence.

The WCTU says it has no thought at all of giving up its battle and for that, we say, "Right on."

Is It Easier To Hold Than Seek An Office?

By BOB SCHREPF
Star Editorial Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Tonight Gerald Ford finds out if the party he served for almost 3 years feels like throwing a sitting president out on his ear.

Neither camp is giving an inch. It is going right down to the wire. Emotions have been building to a fever pitch since Monday. What happens here could turn into one of the three most unlikely, intriguing political stories of the past few decades. One was the collapse of the Nixon presidency. Another is the rise of a political nobody, Jimmy Carter. The third is the phenomenally desperate situation in which an incumbent president finds himself. If he is not denied the nomination, President Ford will at least be humbled by the fact that it was more difficult for him to hang on to his job than it has been for any other incumbent for at least half a century.

Gerald Ford has been president during a time in which there has been progress in restoring health to some segments of the economy. Although unemployment and wholesale price figures have jumped uncomfortably in the past month or two, the economy is thought to be in much better shape than it has been for some time by most people other than the unemployed. Confidence in the economic recovery is slowly and steadily on the rise. And Ford has been praised for his basic honesty and straightforwardness. He is credited with restoring no small amount of confidence in the government after the Nixon scandals — but paradoxically, he is damned for the pardon.

That and his being a creature of Washington, the perception of him as a congressional crony and as being a captive of the philosophy of his party's right wing have denied him a broad-based national constituency and are factors which have contributed to his perilous political position. Ford was also the victim of a rather weak White House staff and some poor political and public relations advice at the outset of his presidency, and, as he himself admits, he sometimes has a dreadful time getting his message across.

Ford supporters will give you other reasons, standard ones, why the President has had such a tough time staying politically alive — though to the point that it is touch-and-go whether he will get the nomination and tough to the point that the nomination may not be worth having if his minority party does not heal its wounds.

Those reasons embrace his being an appointed president who has never run for national office. Further, Dick Herman of Omaha, a member of Ford's inner circle, will point out in defense of the President's odd political position that Ford "has had to take some unpopular stands for the good of the country" while challenger Reagan is free to criticize without suffering the heavy weight of responsibility. Ford, too, has had "to spend a bundle of his time straightening up an administration in chaos," Herman notes.

Former Nebraska Gov. Bob Crosby believes Ford has been victimized by the ambition of Ronald Reagan, who Crosby thinks differs little from the President in political philosphy. There is so little difference between them that the Reagan challenge really can't be justified, Crosby said. (But he hastens to add he can support Reagan if he wins the nomination for that very reason — that Reagan does not differ from Ford so much on the issues).

It does seem as if Ford has not capitalized on the overwhelming advantages that incumbency bestows. This is not a new theme, of course. But events here in Kansas City illustrate once again how much better and easier it should be to hold the office rather than challenge for it.

Ford has so many things going for him it is somewhat surprising he is in trouble. Excitement naturally generates around a president or his family. And this President has a family which is not the least of his political assets. Their arrival at the Kemper Arena shortly after the convention opened Monday morning stole the show and the Ford entourage has been keeping photographers and reporters busy at the hall ever since.

This is an attractive, photogenic presidential family. Ford's children, all grown, project a straight-from-Main-Street image. They are low-key, smile easily, make mistakes and laugh at themselves and try to work for their father without making it seem like a crusade.

Mrs. Ford is an unmatched political talent. She is charming, vivacious, natural and a beautiful woman, a priceless addition to the Ford election effort. And they have one thing that the families of other candidates cannot match. They live in the White House.

A vocal, dyed-in-the-wool Reagan supporter from Nebraska was captivated by the presence of the Ford family (or what they represented). He stood and peered over rows of people at Mrs. Ford and her children for several long moments.

This is a former congressman's family which is at home in Washington, but before the incredible chain of events two years ago certainly had not been conditioned to the regal trappings of the presidency, the goldfish-bowl existence and the immense respect and deep feeling which attached to the first citizen of the Republic and his family. They have handled it well.

Convention Short Takes:

— Nelson Rockefeller went before the convention as a non-candidate for the first time in years and shoved his message down the throats of his enemies. One of the great public servants and politicians of this era defended the record of the man who kicked him off the ticket and told the assembled Republicans that they would have to appeal to more than the "narrow few" to win the election. But the narrow few he made reference to were looking the other way. The Reaganites largely ignored the man their predecessors pilloried in 1964.

— It isn't as if Kansas City were Chicago or Miami Beach, respectively, the nation's traditional and most recent convention capitals. But this town has seen a share of national political activity. The Democrats nominated Lincoln's William Jennings Bryan in Kansas City in 1900 and the Republicans gave Herbert Hoover their standard here in 1928.

— The First Family's reserved box in the convention hall is located about ten feet from my press seat and slightly elevated from it. VIP seating so close to the press section is somewhat of a rarity. Various Fords and Rockefellers have been ushered in and out since the convention's opening morning.

— The old man in a baggy gray suit, infirm of step, was assisted into the back door of the convention hall by people who appeared to be family and friends, no police, no Secret Service. No VIP welcoming committee and no popping flashbulbs. The 1936 GOP presidential nominee, Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas, went through security check unrecognized. Landon was introduced to the convention later.

— The early sessions of the Republican convention have been much better attended than the first few Democratic sessions. These folks have a fight on their hands and they don't want to miss any of it.

Road To Damascus

KANSAS CITY — The conversion of Ronald Reagan, like the experience of the Apostle Paul on the road to Damascus, was a sudden awakening. One friend, fellow actor-turned-politician George Murphy, can even cite the moment that Reagan saw the light. Not long afterward, the crusading liberal of the 1940's became a militant conservative in the 1950's.

The youthful Reagan, who was later to inveigh against student activists, himself led a student protest at Illinois' Eureka college in his freshman year. With all the zeal of Paul, he also began persecuting the corporations that he would later embrace. He became a union activist, quick to take the stump in behalf of the workers.

In Hollywood, he became better known as the ardent, articulate president of the Screen Actors Guild than as a "B"-picture actor. Entertainer Sheila MacRae, who worked with Reagan in the Hollywood of the 1940s, described him as "the Warren Beatty of his day." Beatty is devoted to liberal causes.

Assigned to an Army motion picture unit during World War II, Reagan regularly assailed his fellow soldiers with his leftist views. He became associated with several left-leaning groups, including the American Veterans Committee.

In 1950, he supported Helen Gahagan Douglas against Richard Nixon in the classic Senate campaign that Nixon won by smearing her as the "pink lady." But two years later, Ronald Reagan startled Hollywood by backing the Dwight Eisenhower-Richard Nixon ticket.

What had turned Reagan into a sudden Republican? Former Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., told us it was Reagan's dread of communism. "We had discussions about the communists," Murphy said. He warned Reagan that left-wing radicals were infiltrating Hollywood's craft unions.

"Ronnie didn't believe me at first," recalled Murphy. "But finally one night, when he was booed off the stage while giving a speech, he saw the light."

There was another new influence on Reagan. He married Nancy Davis, a young actress from an arch-conservative family, in 1952. Knowledgeable sources told us she is a strong-willed person who helped pull Reagan to the right. But other sources close to the family minimized her political influence on her husband.

In 1954, the former labor agitator signed on with General Electric. He not only became GE's mouthpiece on television but also lectured company workers across the country on the virtues of free enterprise and the rewards of capitalism.

Reagan intimates say his GE experience, which lasted eight years, helped to shape his political views. Recalled one source: "It was as though he underwent a religious conversion. From extreme liberalism, he made a strong shift to the right. He felt he had to prove that he was a true believer in the conservative cause."

Another important influence, according to several sources, was Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who ironically has turned against Reagan in the showdown with President Ford. Reagan was so impressed with Goldwater's political writings that he pushed them on friends.

Whatever the causes of Reagan's political transformation, a campaign spokesman preferred to attribute it to a "long process of education and political maturity."

Most people who know Reagan, including those who dislike his politics, agree that he is a likable guy. He has an all-American quality — the easy grin, the engaging sincerity, the open manner.

He has always been quick to mount the soapbox, to stand up and speak up about the issues. "Ronnie is the kind of guy who, if you ask the time, will tell you how to build a watch," Art Linkletter told us. But he has always found Reagan practical — a "realist," not a "dreamer," said Linkletter.

Others called Reagan "shallow" and "superficial." He looks for "easy answers to complex problems," said one acquaintance. Novelist Irving Wallace said Reagan gleaned most of his information in capsulated form from the Readers' Digest. The two served together in the Army.

Reagan also studied the Army maps and followed the war closely. He was deeply interested in world affairs, an interest that still occupies him, an intimate said.

Reagan likes to limit his working hours from nine to five, with plenty of rest. He tends to get cranky when he's tired and detests the long campaign grind. Some cited this as evidence that he is lazy. Others said he is well organized and sees no reason for putting in overtime.

Ronald Reagan, according to those who have worked under him, is a good administrator. But above all, he is a polished performer.

On Legitimacy

By ANTHONY LEWIS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The accepted political wisdom is that voters this year are in an anti-Washington mood. I think it is something a little different: a yearning for a restored sense of political legitimacy.

As the American system has developed, for good or ill, the presidency is a heavily symbolic office. We have just had two presidents who tore the fabric of legitimacy. Voters do have resentments of government in general, but the particular feeling in the background of this election is a desire for renewed confidence in the presidency.

To put the question in those terms is to indicate the Republicans' difficulty. For one of their own, a president who had an extraordinary opportunity to restore the failing of political legitimacy in this country, has failed to inspire the confidence of country or party.

The visible recovery of the American spirit in these last two years owes something to President Ford, it should be said. He allowed the natural buoyancy of the country to work. His personality fit the occasion. We used to speak of his decency, but that is an inappropriate word for someone so insensitive to human suffering. What did count was that, in comparison with his two historical predecessors, he was sane.

Where Ford has failed is in understanding. After Vietnam and Watergate, Americans were hungry for reassurance about themselves. The situation cried out for a leadership that reasserted the old American values, moral and legal, at home and abroad. But Ford did not understand the lessons of Watergate and Vietnam.

His pardon of Richard Nixon did such lasting damage precisely because it showed a failure of understanding. The real issue in the pardon was not the possibility of conspiracy; it was Ford's utter insensitivity to the need for — the country's longing for — a reaffirmed commitment to law. That is why polls show a majority of people still troubled by the pardon: It offended sensibilities in a way that can never be undone.

On the foreign side, Ford has been even more damagingly insensitive to the needs of the historical moment. After Vietnam it took no great insight to realize that the United States above all had to regain confidence in itself. The situation called for calm leadership, for maturity, for reassurance about the power of American ideas. Instead, the President allowed Henry Kissinger to go on whining about American weakness.

At the end in Vietnam and again in Angola, Ford endorsed the preposterous Kissinger argument that America would have no credibility in the world unless it got more deeply involved in a losing cause. It was the opposite of a way to rebuild national confidence. Only Congress prevented further U.S. involvement in those disasters — so that Ford can now talk about peace — as only Congress saved him from the self-inflicted wound of deflationary economic policy.

The shrill, unconfident tone of the Ford-Kissinger foreign policy has had grave consequences. Talk constantly about American weakness and Soviet might, and you will naturally accuse a public spirit of fear and jingoism. In that mood the compromises necessary to a realistic foreign policy become difficult.

Ford has trapped himself and the country in just such a vicious circle. His fearful talk about our world position opened the way for Ronald Reagan. The emergence of a strident right-wing force in American politics inhibited essential steps abroad, notably a further strategic arms agreement with the Soviet Union — one that, ironically, would doubtless have helped the President politically.

It is a great mistake to look at a presidential election in terms of tactics only: to say that someone has failed because of a bumble here or there. Voters base their judgments on deeper perceptions, right or wrong. Gerald Ford is in trouble — amazing trouble for an incumbent president — not so much because people disapprove of his particular decisions as because they do not feel him to be a president.

And there is the dilemma the Republicans face in Kansas City. If the problem were only to fit an anti-Washington feeling, then Ronald Reagan would be a logical alternative. But if the mood underlying this election is a longing for political legitimacy, a cardboard candidate will hardly do.

The odd result of the Republican chaos is that Jimmy Carter, an outsider, now seems by comparison a presidential figure. Of course his apparent advantage could vanish in the campaign. But so far he has understood very well the desire of Americans for reassuring confidence in their president.

On Flexibility

By RUSSELL BAKER

NEW YORK — Ronald Reagan recently gave Sen. Richard Schweiker a whiff of the vice presidency, which is powerful gas these days. Under its influence, the senator announced that the scales had fallen from his eyes and that he was now against everything he had ever stood for.

Powerful gas. John Connally, who was obviously miffed because Reagan hadn't blown some his way, rushed to the White House, notified all humanity that Gerald Ford was the last best hope of the species and inhaled deeply. Until the moment of Schweiker's enlightenment, Connally had been loath to render judgment on the relative qualities of Reagan and Ford, but the gas that made Schweiker see the light also exposed the truth to Connally.

A good bit of hooting and jeering accompanied the Schweiker enlightenment. Reagan's followers were shocked at what they saw as a suspicious flexibility, and with good reason. The Republican Party is made up of a right wing, a righter wing and a rightest wing; Reagan's followers, who belong to the rightest, regard Schweiker as a dangerous leftist, which, in their definition of things, is a man who doesn't wear a vest in the office.

Devotion to inflexibility is the sign of purity on the far right (as on the far left), and Reagan's startling show of flexibility cast fear and doubt among the faithful. Schweiker's sudden emergence as a born-again conservative may have stretched flexibility to comic lengths, but he is by no means the only man in the party with elastic principles.

President Ford, it will be recalled, was interrogated by the Senate before becoming vice president and closely examined about what he might do if President Nixon were to be removed for crimes and he were to succeed to the office. He said there were two things he would not do. He would not intervene in any legal proceedings against Nixon, and he would not run for election in his own right in 1976.

Like Schweiker and Reagan, he has discovered that flexibility is the essence of politics, and here he is, having pardoned Nixon, running for president in 1976. His position is reminiscent of a story A. J. Liebling tells about Earl Long in "The Earl of Louisiana."

Long had run for governor on a pledge not to raise taxes, and, on being elected, sent the Legislature his first program. It contained a tax increase. His advisors told him he couldn't do it. He had just gotten elected on a promise not to raise taxes. And Earl replied, "I lied."

I think Earl was too harsh on himself. I believe he merely retained his flexibility, very much as Reagan has done in choosing Schweiker, and as Schweiker has done in denouncing his own record, and as Ford has done in changing his mind about wanting to stay on in the White House and to keep Nixon out of the courts.

The flexibility of Vice President Rockefeller is also of a very high order. He has moved from the middle of the political spectrum to a point where he is easily at home with Barry Goldwater, yet it does him no good.

His move to the right seems to have been partially an effort to keep the door open to the presidency, which in the Republican Party is now always in the gift of the right wing. His problem, of course, is that the conservatives do not believe in his flexibility. They see him bend, but they doubt their eyes.

And so, when he finally arrived on the doorstep in the vice presidency, they insisted on having him chucked out as a potentially dangerous impostor. President Ford, that model of flexibility, having chosen him for the job, obligingly unchose him to satisfy the Reagan people.

Rockefeller may still see some dim hope of restoration. President Ford has such flexibility that despite having unchosen him, he is perfectly capable of rechoosing him, although to do so after a victory over Reagan would seem to be hanging red sheets before the bull.

☆ ☆ ☆

There is Connally, who is flexible enough to have been a Democrat until just the other year, and flexible enough to leave the Reagan people nevertheless enchanted with him. Should Reagan lose, his choice of Schweiker suggests that he may be flexible enough to join the Ford ticket.

President Ford, in fact, is probably flexible enough, if he wins, to take Schweiker for vice president, and Schweiker is certainly flexible enough to declare himself opposed to everything he stood for during the two weeks he ran with Reagan.

If Ford loses, Reagan may be flexible enough to chuck Schweiker and take the President as his candidate for vice president. Don't bet that President Ford isn't flexible enough to accept. These characters have flexibility they haven't even taken out of the attic yet.

Exon Procedure Right

When you consider the budgetary facts involved, it is obvious that Gov. J. J. Exon was right in foregoing a special session of the Legislature to consider the state's income deficiencies. Rather than that, the governor relied upon the State Board of Equalization and Assessment to increase the sales and income taxes.

Of course, we would much prefer that, somehow, the state do a better job of things in the beginning. We would prefer the state not have to back up in the middle of a year and adjust the rates that had been set for that year.

The retroactive feature of the recent hike in the income tax is especially galling, or it will be when the reality of the thing hits home to taxpayers as they make out their 1976 returns next winter. What it means is that any refund you might have had coming will be eaten up by the retroactive feature of the increase. You may even end up owing the state a pretty hefty additional chunk of money.

But the increases approved by the board were still the way to go, given the fact that revenue had to be increased to meet appropriations. This is true, largely because senators, had they been called into special session, would have only about a fourth of the budget to play with.

There is no way that they could or would have cut enough out of the largely operational budget to trim appropriations to the level of income without a tax increase. Another one-fourth of the budget is largely University of Nebraska and about half of it is state aid to local subdivisions.

Those facts also serve to demonstrate another part of the evil of state aid. Many people advocate state aid as a means of reducing local reliance upon the property tax.

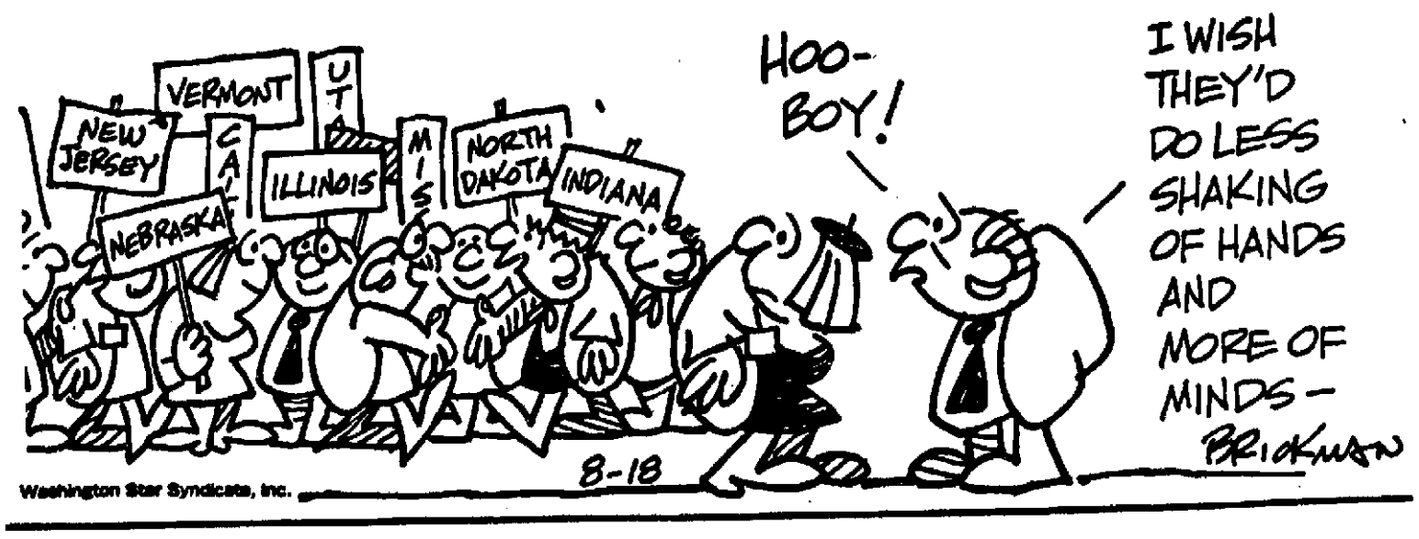
There is no question that the property tax is relieved as a result of state aid to counties, cities and schools. But such aid tends very quickly to become an untouchable item, as it now is with the state.

The state could not touch the aid it provides without creating financial havoc in the local governing units. This is especially true once fiscal years have started and local budgets have been adopted with the state aid figured in.

Thus, the state gets locked in for appropriations that already account for 50% of its budget. Fiscal sovereignty at the state level is effectively surrendered under those conditions.

At the same time, fiscal responsibility at the local level is substantially diluted because state aid does not come as a result of action by local officials against the voters to whom they are accountable. If local authorities had to raise by the property tax what they now get in state aid, you can bet your last dollar that budgets would be smaller.

Services, perhaps, would not be as good but at least there would be clear and direct accountability. None of this makes state aid all bad but it does speak to maintaining a relatively low level of such aid.



WCTU Not A Failure

A story this week in The Star discussed the work of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, better known as the WCTU. Unfortunately, the WCTU is judged on the issue of total abstinence from alcohol. While temperance is found in its name, the organization works for total abstinence.

If it could, the WCTU would ban liquor altogether in society, as this country tried with a brief bout with prohibition in 1920. But prohibition spawned so many other evils and was so ineffective in stopping the consumption of alcohol that it was given up as a bad experiment.

We continue to believe that prohibition is not the right answer but we suspect the WCTU meets with more success and has more secret admirers than even it suspects. While the organization has little chance of bringing back total abstinence as anything other than a voluntary commitment, its never-ending battle against the evils of alcohol is not wasted.

There is no question that the WCTU helps to make a point in society in favor of moderation in drink and that is a most commendable objective. Unfortunately, many people do not realize the importance of moderation until it is too late for them, until they have become alcoholics or have damaged their health.

Perhaps that helps explain, too, the relative older age of the WCTU membership — the years of living it takes some people to realistically recognize and deal with the potential ill effects of alcohol. Youth is prone to learn by experience and experience is often a harsh and costly teacher.

No doubt the WCTU is not winning all the battles it would like but it is a constructive influence in our society. Sometimes it must seem discouraging to the organization that it has had less than spectacular success in its admonition to abstinence but the pursuit of that extremity has helped promote the cause of moderation and intelligent use of alcohol in all aspects of its presence.

The WCTU says it has no thought at all of giving up its battle and for that, we say, "Right on."

Is It Easier To Hold Than Seek An Office?

By BOB SCHREPF
Star Editorial Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Tonight Gerald Ford finds out if the party he served for almost 3 years feels like throwing a sitting president out on his ear.

Neither camp is giving an inch. It is going right down to the wire. Emotions have been building to a fever pitch since Monday. What happens here could turn into one of the three most unlikely, intriguing political stories of the past few decades. One was the collapse of the Nixon presidency. Another is the rise of a political nobody, Jimmy Carter. The third is the phenomenally desperate situation in which an incumbent president finds himself. If he is not denied the nomination, President Ford will at least be humbled by the fact that it was more difficult for him to hang on to his job than it has been for any other incumbent for at least half a century.

Gerald Ford has been president during a time in which there has been progress in restoring health to some segments of the economy. Although unemployment and wholesale price figures have jumped uncomfortably in the past month or two, the economy is thought to be in much better shape than it has been for some time by most people other than the unemployed. Confidence in the economic recovery is slowly and steadily on the rise. And Ford has been praised for his basic honesty and straightforwardness. He is credited with restoring no small amount of confidence in the government after the Nixon scandals — but paradoxically, he is damned for the pardon.

That and his being a creature of Washington, the perception of him as a congressional crony and as being a captive of the philosophy of his party's right wing have denied him a broad-based national constituency and are factors which have contributed to his perilous political position. Ford was also the victim of a rather weak White House staff and some poor political and public relations advice at the outset of his presidency, and, as he himself admits, he sometimes has a dreadful time getting his message across.

Ford supporters will give you other reasons, standard ones, why the President has had such a tough time staying politically alive — though to the point that it is touch-and-go whether he will get the nomination and tough to the point that the nomination may not be worth having if his minority party does not heal its wounds.

Those reasons embrace his being an appointed president who has never run for national office. Further, Dick Herman of Omaha, a member of Ford's inner circle, will point out in defense of the President's odd political position that Ford "has had to take some unpopular stands for the good of the country" while challenger Reagan is free to criticize without suffering the heavy weight of responsibility. Ford, too, has had "to spend a bundle of his time straightening up an administration in chaos," Herman notes.

Former Nebraska Gov. Bob Crosby believes Ford has been victimized by the ambition of Ronald Reagan, who Crosby thinks differs little from the President in political philosphy. There is so little difference between them that the Reagan challenge really can't be justified, Crosby said. (But he hastens to add he can support Reagan if he wins the nomination for that very reason — that Reagan does not differ from Ford so much on the issues).

It does seem as if Ford has not capitalized on the overwhelming advantages that incumbency bestows. This is not a new theme, of course. But events here in Kansas City illustrate once again how much better and easier it should be to hold the office rather than challenge for it.

Ford has trapped himself and the country in just such a vicious circle. His fearful talk about our world position opened the way for Ronald Reagan. The emergence of a strident right-wing force in American politics inhibited essential steps abroad, notably a further strategic arms agreement with the Soviet Union — one that, ironically, would doubtless have helped the President politically.

It is a great mistake to look at a presidential election in terms of tactics only: to say that someone has failed because of a bumble here or there. Voters base their judgments on deeper perceptions, right or wrong. Gerald Ford is in trouble — amazing trouble for an incumbent president — not so much because people disapprove of his particular decisions as because they do not feel him to be a president.

And there is the dilemma the Republicans face in Kansas City. If the problem were only to fit an anti-Washington feeling, then Ronald Reagan would be a logical alternative. But if the mood underlying this election is a longing for political legitimacy, a cardboard candidate will hardly do.

The odd result of the Republican chaos is that Jimmy Carter, an outsider, now seems by comparison a presidential figure. Of course his apparent advantage could vanish in the campaign. But so far he has understood very well the desire of Americans for reassuring confidence in their president.

On Flexibility

By RUSSELL BAKER

NEW YORK — Ronald Reagan recently gave Sen. Richard Schweiker a whiff of the vice presidency, which is powerful gas these days. Under its influence, the senator announced that the scales had fallen from his eyes and that he was now against everything he had ever stood for.

Powerful gas. John Connally, who was obviously miffed because Reagan hadn't blown some his way, rushed to the White House, notified all humanity that Gerald Ford was the last best hope of the species and inhaled deeply. Until the moment of Schweiker's enlightenment, Connally had been loath to render judgment on the relative qualities of Reagan and Ford, but the gas that made Schweiker see the light also exposed the truth to Connally.

A good bit of hooting and jeering accompanied the Schweiker enlightenment. Reagan's followers were shocked at what they saw as a suspicious flexibility, and with good reason. The Republican Party is made up of a right wing, a righter wing and a rightest wing; Reagan's followers, who belong to the rightest, regard Schweiker as a dangerous leftist, which, in their definition of things, is a man who doesn't wear a vest in the office.

Devotion to inflexibility is the sign of purity on the far right (as on the far left), and Reagan's startling show of flexibility cast fear and doubt among the faithful. Schweiker's sudden emergence as a born-again conservative may have stretched flexibility to comic lengths, but he is by no means the only man in the party with elastic principles.

President Ford, it will be recalled, was interrogated by the Senate before becoming vice president and closely examined about what he might do if President Nixon were to be removed for crimes and he were to succeed to the office. He said there were two things he would not do. He would not intervene in any legal proceedings against Nixon, and he would not run for election in his own right in 1976.

Like Schweiker and Reagan, he has discovered that flexibility is the essence of politics, and here he is, having pardoned Nixon, running for president in 1976. His position is reminiscent of a story A. J. Liebling tells about Earl Long in "The Earl of Louisiana."

Long had run for governor on a pledge not to raise taxes, and, on being elected, sent the Legislature his first program. It contained a tax increase. His advisors told him he couldn't do it. He had just gotten elected on a promise not to raise taxes. And Earl replied, "I lied."

I think Earl was too harsh on himself. I believe he merely retained his flexibility, very much as Reagan has done in choosing Schweiker, and as Schweiker has done in denouncing his own record, and as Ford has done in changing his mind about wanting to stay on in the White House and to keep Nixon out of the courts.

The flexibility of Vice President Rockefeller is also of a very high order. He has moved from the middle of the political spectrum to a point where he is easily at home with Barry Goldwater, yet it does him no good.

His move to the right seems to have been partially an effort to keep the door open to the presidency, which in the Republican Party is now always in the gift of the right wing. His problem, of course, is that the conservatives do not believe in his flexibility. They see him bend, but they doubt their eyes.

And so, when he finally arrived on the doorstep in the vice presidency, they insisted on having him chucked out as a potentially dangerous impostor. President Ford, that model of flexibility, having chosen him for the job, obligingly unchose him to satisfy the Reagan people.

Rockefeller may still see some dim hope of restoration. President Ford has such flexibility that despite having unchosen him, he is perfectly capable of rechoosing him, although to do so after a victory over Reagan would seem to be hanging red sheets before the bull.

☆ ☆ ☆

There is Connally, who is flexible enough to have been a Democrat until just the other year, and flexible enough to leave the Reagan people nevertheless enchanted with him. Should Reagan lose, his choice of Schweiker suggests that he may be flexible enough to join the Ford ticket.

President Ford, in fact, is probably flexible enough, if he wins, to take Schweiker for vice president, and Schweiker is certainly flexible enough to declare himself opposed to everything he stood for during the two weeks he ran with Reagan.

If Ford loses, Reagan may be flexible enough to chuck Schweiker and take the President as his candidate for vice president. Don't bet that President Ford isn't flexible enough to accept. These characters have flexibility they haven't even taken out of the attic yet.

Ford Forces Remain Flexible

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — President Ford's forces held to a flexible strategy Tuesday to cope with a major challenge by Ronald Reagan on the administration's foreign policy.

The outcome of this fight over the platform could foreshadow the crucial vote to nominate a candidate.

Reagan, probing for weaknesses in Ford's support, sent to the convention floor a proposed plank on "Morality in Foreign Policy" that was a scarcely veiled attack on the way Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger conduct the nation's international relations. It contained much of the language Reagan had used in his primary contests with Ford.

Ford strategists delayed their response as they pushed the drive for nomination commitments that could put their candidate over the top.

Some favored a head-on fight against the Reagan plank. Others said such a fight was not worth the risk of alienating delegates leaning philosophically to Reagan, but still uncommitted on the nomination.

Sen. Robert Griffin of Michigan, Ford's floor manager, indicated a third course was under consideration, an attempt to draw the sting of the Reagan proposal by amending it.

"There may be efforts to adjust the language," Griffin said.

Rep. John B. Anderson of Illinois, one of the leaders of the Ford contingent on the platform committee, said he was for fighting.

Anderson, chairman of the House Republican Conference, said "I find the language offensive. It is totally gratuitous to talk about restoring morality in foreign policy when we have had a Republican administration in charge. It carries the connotation that we have been either amoral or immoral."

The convention was also sent a proposal to strike from the draft platform a section saying the Republican party "supports the efforts of those who seek enactment of a constitutional amendment to restore protection of the right to life of unborn children."

Opponents of the Equal Rights Amendment, a long-term feminist goal, were searching for ways to bring to the floor a proposal to strike from the platform its endorsement of ERA.

Unlike the Reagan foreign policy plank and the abortion move, the anti-ERA effort did not obtain the support of one-fourth of the Platform Committee, needed to guarantee consideration of a minority plank.

The late-developing fight over the Reagan foreign policy statement obscured the fact that the basic platform draft had been declared satisfactory by both leading candidates. It was the product of five day and night sessions of the Platform Committee, which made innumerable adjustments to avoid floor fights.

Sharply contrasting, especially in its domestic sections, with the Democrats, the platform emphasizes encouragement of private enterprise and limiting the role of government.

It commits the party to ending deficit spending, rejects wage-price controls, denounces massive "make-work" public employment programs and proposes tax incentives for investment.

In the field of government, the platform proposes top-to-bottom overhaul of agencies, replacement of numerous special programs by block grants to states and local units and repeal of automatic cost-of-living pay raises for members of Congress.

Reform, but not federalization, of the welfare system and tighter eligibility for food stamps, along with redesign of the unemployment insurance system, are major domestic proposals.

The basic foreign affairs plank says the United States should seek reduction in tensions with the Soviet Union, while holding out for agreements that benefit national security. It says any false sense of security about the North Atlantic Alliance should be avoided. It calls for continuing improving relations with mainland China without compromising commitments to Taiwan. On the Panama Canal, the platform stands for maintaining the canal as an international waterway and continuing negotiations with Panama without conceding anything needed for the protection and security of the United States and the hemisphere.

Delegates Boot Stars Out Door

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — The small contingent of Hollywood stars supporting Ronald Reagan were told to get lost by New York delegation leaders when they tried to attend a state caucus meeting.

Pat Boone, Efrem Zimbalist Jr., Don DeFore and Ken Curtis had been invited to address the New York meeting. They were given the gate.

"It was a funny feeling," Zimbalist said, laughing. "Usually we get paid for making appearances."

"They didn't even want us for free," DeFore said.

"We hadn't planned to go in there to twist any arms," said Curtis.

The performers said Richard Rosenbaum, New York State GOP chairman, told them the caucus was closed to everyone except delegates and alternates.

"No sooner did they slam the door on us," said Boone, "than they let Jack Ford and Elliot Richardson in.

Claim Of Bribery 'Misunderstanding'

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — Ronald Reagan's Illinois campaign chief said Tuesday the bribery charge raised by a Ford delegate might have stemmed from a misunderstanding of something he said.

With the FBI moving in on the case, Reagan himself met one of the two Ford backers who raised the bribery charges and suggested she might have been duped by "pranksters." But he said he wants an investigation.

The woman, Chicago delegate Marie Goodlow, assured Reagan she is telling the truth and said: "I wouldn't do this to hurt you, just to nominate President Ford."

Later, Richard Ogilvie, Ford's Illinois campaign chief, said another delegate had told him of an alleged vote bribing attempt by purported Reagan backers — raising the number of such allegations to three.

"After the statement I made to the press yesterday, someone came forward and gave me some information," Ogilvie said. He declined to identify the delegate but implied he was from Texas.

It was Ogilvie who raised the charges that Reagan supporters tried to buy the votes of two Illinois Ford delegates. One turned out to be Mrs. Goodlow. The other, a man, has not been firmly identified.

State Rep. Don Totten, head of Reagan's Illinois forces, suggested meantime that the Republican Convention bribery flap might all be a dreadful mistake.

He said he asked Mrs. Goodlow Sunday about her thinking on convention issue, but he offered no inducements to jump camps. She has not identified the man she says approached her, but insists he offered her $2,500 to vote Tuesday for a resolution forcing Ford to name his running mate right away.

Totten said: "I asked her on the Ford-Reagan situation what she was going to do. She said God would direct her in her final decision . . .

"She did indicate . . . she had serious financial problems and so on," Totten said.

"You just don't respond to something like that. I said, 'Well if there's anything we can supply you with — issues, have anyone from the Reagan staff talk to you, have the governor talk to you — get hold of me.' "

He said that conversation took place when he drove Mrs. Goodlow to the convention site. That much jibed with her comments, but she said the man she talked to raised the issue of her financial need himself.

Totten said he also talked with Eddie Mack Jones, a Chicago Ford delegate identified by one Ford campaigner as the second target of alleged bribery attempts.

Jones was declining comment, but Justice Department spokesmen in Washington said the bribery complaint it is investigating was filed by only one convention delegate, a man. Mrs. Goodlow said Monday she filed no formal complaint.

She confronted Reagan when he visited the Illinois delegation, telling him: "I'm the lady what spoke about what happened."

"Yes, I know," Reagan replied. "I saw you on TV last night."

"I didn't do that to get on TV," said Mrs. Goodlow. "Those things I said are true."

He said he did not doubt her, "but I know no one from my organization had anything to do with it' . . .

"I am all in favor of an investigation that would establish once and for all who these people are and whether they are pranksters."

Anti-ERA Crusader Loses Petition Fight

(c) Chicago Daily News

Kansas City — Frances Wideman paced up and down the aisle of the small theater, yellow legal pad in hand, waiting for the supporters who never appeared.

So ended her crusade to kill the Republican Party's endorsement of the Equal Rights Amendment.

"Some people were supposed to be here who told me they would sign," she said. "I don't know where they are . . ."

The Alabama delegate, who says she got involved in politics solely to bury ERA, persuaded only 22 of the 106 platform committee members to sign her minority report erasing the ERA endorsement.

That meant she was five signatures short, and 10 minutes past the deadline for filing the report.

Only two minority planks mustered the support necessary to assure floor fights when the Republican National Convention votes on its platform. One deletes an endorsement of a constitutional ban on abortion, and the other is Ronald Reagan's catch-all "morality - in - foreign - policy" proposal.

Mrs. Wideman gave up bitterly, blaming the man she came were to support — Ronald Reagan.

His decision to challenge the proposed platform only on foreign policy sabotaged her efforts, according to Mrs. Wideman, wife of a Birmingham physician.

"I have 22 names and at least 22 more told me, 'I will not sign because Mr. Reagan does not support it,' " she said at a platform committee meeting in the city auditorium's Little Theater. "I tried very hard to the very last minute."

Mrs. Wideman, who has an upswept, bouffant blond hairdo and a Southern accent reminiscent of the late Martha Mitchell, appeared close to tears when she talked about ERA.

"Woman don't want it," she said. "We don't need it. We have all the rights we want."

She said she might explore a possible parliamentary loophole permitting her to delete the ERA plank from the convention floor. But Phyllis Schlafly of Alton, Ill., the nation's No. 1 anti-ERA fighter, told her not to try it.

"I would much rather see Reagan nominated than to see that plank struck from the platform," said Mrs. Schlafly. She is not a delegate, but came here to push anti-abortion and anti-ERA proposals in platform committee hearings.

For another group of Republican women, the final platform committee meeting brought victory. Ann Peckham, a Ford delegate from Madison, Wis., and Rep. Millicent Fenwick of New Jersey got 29 signatures on their proposal to delete a plank stating that the GOP "supports the efforts of those who seek enactment of a constitutional amendment to restore protection of the right to life for unborn children."

Government 'Powerless' Over Investment Advisers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the nation's 3,750 investment advisers may be looking into space or even at comic strips for help in placing their clients' investments, says a report prepared by Rep. John M. Murphy, D-N.Y.

Furthermore, the government is "relatively powerless" to prevent such persons from operating in the $130 billion industry, says Murphy, who backs legislation calling for tighter qualifications for investment advisers.

In one case, he said, the Securities and Exchange Commission resorted to a letter filled with complex legal terminology in an apparently successful attempt to discourage a 15-year-old California youngster from registering as an adviser.

Murphy said it could not legally have prevented the boy's registration, even though the youth was not of age where any contracts he made with clients would be legally binding.

He said a 16-year-old does successfully operate as a registered investment adviser out of his bedroom in another state.

"Under current law, virtually anyone can become a registered investment adviser, regardless of age, prior experience, or education in financial matters, and regardless of whether that person possesses any financial responsibility," Murphy said.

An investment adviser advises persons on where to invest money. Currently, over 3,700 investment advisers manage funds estimated to exceed $130 billion, including both mutual funds and personal investments, Murphy said.

An official of the SEC, which is responsible for regulating investment advisers, agrees with Murphy that virtually anybody can become an investment adviser upon payment of a $150 registration fee, unless they have been convicted or larceny or embezzlement.

But Stanley Brand, a staff attorney in the SEC's office of investment adviser regulations, disagreed with an accusation by Murphy that the SEC is guilty of "lax supervision" of advisers under present regulations.

"I believe that to the full extent of our authority we have proceeded against whose who are violating the act," Brand said Tuesday. "If we are unable to do that to the extent the congressman thinks we should, I think a large part of that is attributable to statutory deficiencies."

Murphy is chairman of the House Commerce Committee's subcommittee on consumer protection and finance.

In his report, which was distributed to members of the full committee, Murphy cited a number of examples of alleged past abuses by investment advisers, including persons who made decisions based on the stars or who looked for investment clues in comic strips.

The New York Stock Exchange has estimated there are 26 million individual investors in the United States, but the SEC says it is impossible to say what portion of the total uses the services of investment advisers.

Brand said that although the SEC is supposed to inspect the books of investment advisers every three years, it only manages inspections on the average of every seven or eight years because of a shortage of personnel.

The SEC helped prepare the bill backed by Murphy and approved by his subcommittee to set minimum qualifications for investment advisers, including passing a test and proof of financial responsibility.

Reaction of the industry to the legislation has been mixed.

One case listed in Murphy's report was that of a man who was accused by the SEC for fraud for promising his clients profits based on investment decisions made through extrasensory perception. The registration of the firm was revoked by the SEC and the man was barred from association with an investment adviser for at least a year.

17 Million Covered

New York (UPI) — About 32 million Americans are covered by some form of dental insurance, according to the Health Insurance Institute. The Institute, which says the figure is expected to double by 1980, notes that as of last year some 17 million persons were covered by insurance company contracts, about seven times the number covered less than a decade earlier.

Carter Won't Reply To GOP Criticism

Plains, Ga. (UPI) — Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter said tersely Tuesday he "wasn't surprised" by the barrage of criticism aimed at him from the GOP National Convention, but he stuck by his pledge to wait until after the convention to reply.

Keeping a low profile as GOP delegates fought over who would oppose him, Carter met with energy advisers at his mother's rural "Pond House" to talk about campaign strategy and the issues the Republicans might raise in the fall.

The Republicans rolled out their heavy artillery Monday night, and most of it was directed toward Carter.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said the Democratic platform, which has considerable Carter influence, "tilts so far left that any of us would slide off. But worse than that, it is a collection of deceptions."

Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller did not mention Carter by name, but asked the delegates to "try to figure out where the Democratic candidate stands on the issues . . . Here's a fellow that one time calls himself a Georgia redneck and just lask week in Washington, at Ralph Nader's shindig, he tried to pass himself off as a Nader-day saint."

In his keynote address, Sen. Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., declared: "Jimmy Carter says he will never lie to us, but Jimmy Carter is the nominee of the party which gave us the original credibility gap . . ."

Carter, standing in his front yard in Georgia, told reporters he watched about half of Baker's address and was aware of Rockefeller's "Nader-day saint" reference.

"I'm not going to make any comment about the Republican Convention until it's over — and then I will," Carter said.

A reporter asked if Carter was surprised.

"I can't say I was very surprised," he replied, adding with a laugh: "They talked about me more than the Democrats did. I wasn't surprised."

Moments later, Carter headed for a four-hour briefing by a dozen energy advisors, who had arrived in a chartered bus.

The energy briefing was the fifth in a series of six that Carter has scheduled for the fall campaign. He meets with international economic experts Wednesday.

Carter wore his usual t-shirt and casual slacks. He walked out of his modern one-story house, greeted 12 women who belonged to Local 226 of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers, called "Hello, Jim" to Tennessee Democratic senantorial candidate James Sasser and went over to talk with about 25 reporters and photographers clustered on his driveway.

Carter told reporters the victory "by my longtime friend" in the Tennessee primary was "about the best news I got an election night." Sasser opposes Sen. Bill Brock, R-Tenn., in the general election.

The California Poll, an independent investigation directed by Mervin D. Field and financed by news organizations in the state, predicted Tuesday that Carter would defeat either President Ford or his GOP challenger, Ronald Reagan.

The poll said interviews conducted the last week in July indicated that if the election were held immediately, Carter would defeat Ford 53 to 33% and beat Reagan 58 to 32%.

Government 'Powerless' Over Investment Advisers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the nation's 3,750 investment advisers may be looking into space or even at comic strips for help in placing their clients' investments, says a report prepared by Rep. John M. Murphy, D-N Y

Furthermore, the government is "relatively powerless" to prevent such persons from operating in the $130 billion industry, says Murphy, who backs legislation calling for tighter qualifications for investment advisers.

In one case, he said, the Securities and Exchange Commission resorted to a letter filled with complex legal terminology in an apparently successful attempt to discourage a 15-year-old California youngster from registering as an adviser

Murphy said it could not legally have prevented the boy's registration, even though the youth was not of age where any contracts he made with clients would be legally binding.

He said a 16-year-old does successfully operate as a registered investment adviser out of his bedroom in another state.

"Under current law, virtually anyone can become a registered investment adviser, regardless of age, prior experience, or education in financial matters, and regardless of whether that person possesses any financial responsibility," Murphy said.

An investment adviser advises persons on where to invest money. Currently, over 3,700 investment advisers manage funds estimated to exceed $130 billion, including both mutual funds and personal investments, Murphy said.

Transportation Vital Need Of Rural Elderly

Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Gretna — Food in their stomachs, a means of getting around, the right to their homes until they choose to leave them and the dignity of work rather than the humiliation of a dole is what Nebraska's senior citizens want.

That's the message Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, will take back to Washington from a hearing on the problems encountered by rural elderly. The hearing was held here Tuesday, and the message will be part of his report to the Senate Special Committee on Aging.

Said Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Neb., who attended the meeting: "The policy of the federal government toward the rural elderly is one of benign neglect."

Much Done

Much has been done to help the nation's urban elderly, McCollister said, but many of the programs are not suitable for handling the unique problems of rural senior citizens.

As did most of those testifying, McCollister stressed the importance of providing transportation, such as free bus service, in meeting the needs of rural elderly.

He announced a $100,000 federal grant to Sarpy and Douglas counties for the Senior Companion Program, which will employ senior citizens to help Golden Agers avoid the depression and loneliness that many face.

Norman Magnusson, chairman of the Eastern Nebraska Human Services Agency, said most rural elderly would be able to meet their needs if given adequate transportation.

"However, we're spending money for administration that should be going for transportation that gets you (the rural elderly) to the doctor or anyplace you want to go," Magnusson said.

All persons who testified stressed the importance of keeping the elderly in their homes and giving them part-time occupations that will allow them to maintain their dignity.

"We wish to remain in our homes as long as possible to avoid being institutionalized," said Lincoln resident Dorothy Switzer of the Nebraska Commission on Aging. "For the rural person to avoid being institutionalized may mean different programs for the rural and urban elderly."

Limited Role

Sen. Clark said federal assistance can be only part of a program to make life better for America's senior citizens.

"The rural elderly must feel that no one is dictating to them," Clark said. "The progress we are making in aging is due in no small part to the initiative and determination of older persons who are making things happen."

Summarizing the testimony, Clark said the biggest problems encountered by the rural elderly are transportation, hot meals, extended health service, housing and legal services.

In his opening statement, Clark said the prime objective of the six hearings this week — in Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota — is to help formulate a national policy on aging, particularly for rural areas.

Extended Area Phone Service Would Cut Long-Distance Bills

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

An experimental flat-rate plan for long-distance telephoning is in the works for some Nebraska subscribers who aren't provided "extended area service" or EAS.

The State Public Service Commission staff is working with Northwestern Bell and the Nebraska Telephone Association to develop a model that would benefit both customers and the industry.

Extended area service, for example, allows Bennet residents to call Lincoln toll-free and vice versa. But to telephone companies, EAS means paying for more equipment while losing long-distance revenues within small geographical areas.

Many Nebraskans, particularly those in rural areas, have appealed for EAS. They have complained about paying toll charges to call their children's schools or businesses in town.

To subsidize EAS, everyone in the affected telephone exchange ends up paying for the service, not just a few customers. The flat-rate system could be "workable and acceptable . . . on both sides," said PSC Communications Director Herb Sherdon.

He stressed that the plan is still in "preliminary stages" and could involve independent telephone companies — not just Bell. As yet, no decisions on details have been made nor have projected costs been calculated.

Sherdon said the idea initially is to restrict the flat-rate option to several specific locations experimentally, where a demand for EAS exists. He pointed out no one knows yet whether the alternative will meet customers' needs adequately.

As now envisioned, customers in the exchange would pay the same current local phone charge, and participation in the flat-rate plan would be voluntary. For the additional monthly charge, users would get, say, one hour of total toll call time and pay a tenth of that fee extra for each additional six minutes.

That formula is strictly speculative, not fixed. Sherdon said mechanics must be worked out to keep track of toll calls under the plan, such as special equipment required.

Another idea is to offer the service only during non-peak-use hours, for example, from noon to 8 a.m. weekdays and 24 hours each on Saturdays and Sundays. A geographical radius is being considered, such as 15 miles and 25 miles.

Asked when the flat-rate approach could be put into effect, Sherdon said no timetable is certain or set, but "I'm sure it's going to be less than a year from now."

Any plan will require Public Service Commission approval before it may be offered to the public, he said. Outside the greater Lincoln and Omaha areas, there appears to be a widespread need for the option, Sherdon noted.

Hard Hat's Air Pocket Saves His Life

Wallace (AP) — An air pocket under a hard hat saved the life of a North Platte teen-ager who was buried in a sewer trench for 20 minutes, authorities said.

Billy Christenson, 17, was digging the 12-foot ditch Monday when it caved in.

The Rev. John Kilgore, a rescue squad driver, said Christenson was standing in the trench when "about four feet of dirt came down on his head and he was pushed into a crouching position."

"His head was covered for about 20 minutes and it was another half hour before his body was recovered," The Rev. Kilgore said.

Christenson was released Tuesday from a North Platte hospital, where he had been held for observation.

44,000 Candy Bars Locked Up

Omaha (AP) — Federal marshals have seized nearly 44,000 candy bars manufactured by a Sioux City, Iowa, firm, and action aimed at destroying the candy has begun, according to Asst. U.S. Atty. Robert F. Kokrda.

The candy bars, called "Twin Bings," were manufactured the Palmer Candy Co., and are now being stored in warehouses in Omaha, Norfolk and Lincoln.

According to a civil suit filed by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, the candy bars may have been prepared, packed or held in unsanitary conditions.

Court records claim the candy bars became adulterated while in interstate commerce and have been held under unsanitary conditions.

Officials for Palmer Candy have denied the allegations.

Jack Brandon, manager of the candy firm, said he has tried to find out the results of laboratory tests on the candy, but the government will not provide him with details.

Kokrda said a notice is being prepared for publication noting the government's intent to destroy the candy.

If an answer to the government's charges is not filed against the government within 10 days of publication, or if a claim against the government is not filed within 20 days, the candy bars will be destroyed, Kokrda said Tuesday.

Candidates Court State Labor Vote

By JIM CAMDEN
Star Staff Writer

Two Democratic hopefuls for seats in the U.S. Congress courted the labor vote in Lincoln Tuesday with relatively good success. But then, organized labor has never been a stronghold of the Republicans.

Omaha Mayor Ed Zorinsky, who faces Rep. John Y. McCollister for retiring Sen. Roman Hruska's seat in November, told delegates to the state AFL-CIO convention he has three goals if elected: stop inflation, put people back to work and stop foreign aid that helps produce goods to compete with American-made products.

Zorinsky said he wanted his campaign "to become a common meeting ground and a catalyst to bring people together."

He also said he was not necessarily pro-labor, just as he was not always pro-agriculture or pro-industry.

"It's possible to receive support from labor without selling your soul," he said:

Attacked McCollister

But Zorinsky attacked McCollister as being consistently anti-labor and being "very proud" of that record. He added that he expected Hruska and Sen. Carl Curtis "to become the hatchet men for my opponent."

Zorinsky praised AFL-CIO President Georgy Meany, who received criticism from farming sectors during the dockworkers boycott of grain shipments last year.

"Lets get a president of the United States and a secretary of agriculture that will work as hard as Mr. Meany," he said.

Zorinsky said he favored legislation that would create jobs for the unemployed.

"I think it's up to the government to create the economic incentives to create those jobs," he said.

Zorinsky, who received a standing ovation for his talk, apparently already has the support of some sectors of organized labor. The machinists' union presented him with a check for $2,500 after his speech.

Wants To Wash Up Capitol

Pauline Anderson, who will oppose three-time incumbent Rep. Charles Thone for the First District Congressional seat, told delegates she wanted to "wash up Washington."

Labor, she said, hasn't been represented in Congress for more than two years out of the last 30 by Nebraska. Democrats have only held one term in any state district during that period, she explained.

"The names of congressmen from Nebraska's delegations are going to go down in the rolls of mediocrity," she said.

Mrs. Anderson predicted there would be a Democratic administration next year — "unless we really mess up" — and said the strength of the Carter ticket might help her chances to beat Thone.

She attacked Thone, who she said has been billed as an independent thinker among Republicans, as being anti-labor. Her figures show that Thone has voted with the majority of Republicans 88% of the time on important bills.

Supports Less

Other figures show that Thone supports labor issues less than the average GOP congressmen, she said. The majority of Republicans vote for labor issues about 25% of the time; Thone backed labor issues 23% of the time, she said.

"That's not good enough for me," she said. "And it shouldn't be good enough for you either."

Before addressing the delegates, Mrs. Anderson rated her chances in November "as good as anyone — better than some" who have opposed Thone.

There are still some big ifs in her campaign, she said. Such as "whether we'll have the funds to buy some of the hardware needed for the campaign."

When candidates filed financial statements prior to the May primary, Mrs. Anderson reported $1,950 in campaign contributions to Thone's $40,500.

"We think we have a good chance, even though hardly anybody else does," she said.

The convention's committee on political education will make endorsements of state candidates Wednesday.

Stalled Finances Halt Low Income Housing

Grand Island (AP) — The Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has held up construction of low-income housing developments at Grand Island, Fairbury, Beatrice and Omaha, according to an Omaha real estate developer.

"We have spent $50,000 in the past 14 months trying to get the four developments together," said developer George Thomas. "Unless we can get something done, there won't be any of this housing in Nebraska."

Thomas said he would meet with HUD officals Thursday in Omaha. Members of the state's Congressional delegation also were asked to attend, he said.

A financing program expired in June, as Thomas awaited HUD authorization of a planned 35-unit development in Grand Island.

Congress voted to reinstate the funding program, the President signed the bill and HUD "is sitting on the money," Thomas said.

Without the financing, Thomas said he could not build the units.

Total cost of the Grand Island project is estimated by HUD at $840,097 and by Thomas at $973,553. Thomas said he would be willing to lower his estimate to get funding approval.

Grand Island Drowning Said Accident

Grand Island (UPI) — Hall County officials Tuesday ruled that a Monday night drowning at Mormon Island near Grand Island of a man from Iran was accidental.

Officials said the victim was with three companions when he apparently started swimming in an area closed to swimmers.

The man, whose name is being withheld pending notification of relatives, was about 20 feet from the bank when he went under the water.

Farm Research Draws Support

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Star Staff Writer

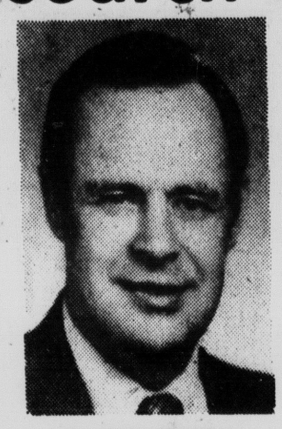
University of Nebraska regents and candidates for regent in the fall election met Tuesday with Nebraska Agricultural Council members in a pre-election discussion of issues related to the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at NU.

A suggestion by Regent Robert Raun of Minden that some research funds must come from checkoff programs financed by farmers drew a chilly reception from Willard Waldo of DeWitt, a regent candidate.

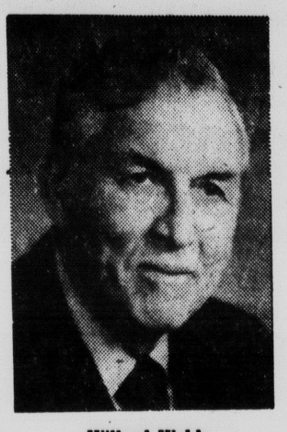
"It is all right if producer groups want to supplement research activities at the university, but the basic funding must come from the general tax fund because research has benefits for the consumer as much as for the producer," Waldo said.

Waldo drew strong support from Ed Andersen, master of the Nebraska Grange, who expressed fears that funds from checkoff programs might discourage investment in research activities by the legislature.

Dr. Robert Prokop of Wilber, Waldo's election opponent, told council members that any group could arrange to meet with the board of regents by writing a letter 14 days prior to the regular regents' meeting requesting to be included in the agenda.



Dr. Robert Prokop



Willard Waldo

Council members voted to establish an executive committee that will be responsible for having someone on the council attend regent meetings regularly and report back to the council.

Prokop and Waldo seemed to agree that a current lawsuit by the university that contends the unicameral has overstepped its authority in directing NU expenditures, and the State Department of Administrative services was intruding into university personnel matters was a bad idea.

"I was opposed to the lawsuit in the first place. It has already cost the taxpayers $15,000 and the matter has yet to come up in court," Prokup said.

Waldo suggested that such problems were better worked out in meetings between involved parties than in a court case.

Waldo said if he is elected he will work with the legislature and the governor to lessen the adversary positions between the three groups.

"I never met a senator who was out to destroy the university. There is a need for better understanding between the governor, legislature and the administration of the university," he said.

During a question and answer session, Merle Hansen of Newman Grove, regent candidate indicated he wasn't a big fan of research but denied he was opposed to it. "We need to take a look at what happens when we institute a research project. Increased production of any agricultural product tends to drive prices down," he warned.

Hansen also noted that increasing irrigation in the state tended to increase agricultural production, bringing lower prices and a lower water table to the area irrigated.

Raun defended spending at the University of Nebraska-Omaha by the state. "There are a lot of people who pay taxes in Omaha. They want higher education. They do make a contribution to agriculture because we are training people to be teachers, business administration people ect., who will often work in some agricultural field or teach in a rural area after graduation," he said.

"You can't shut down all the university except the agricultural part. You have to look at the needs of the state as a whole," he said.

Waldo indicated he felt the agricultural portions of the university had been underfunded for some time.

"You do see some new things agriculture is getting now, but that is because agricultural needs have been shoved to the bottom of the list of priorities for years. It is about time that changed," he said.

Farm Council Supports Senators' Pay Hike

The Nebraska Agricultural Council gave strong support Tuesday for an amendment to the state constitution calling for an increase in the wages paid to state senators.

The council also expressed interest in the cost of medicines to human and animal patients.

Dr. Jack Marcum, representing the Nebraska Veterinary Medical Association, told the group that prices were artificially high.

"The Federal Drug Administration has declared every medicine developed in the last 20 years a new medicine. The only one released was Tylan. Once a medicine is taken off the new medicine list it carries a 17-year patent after which any company can make it," he explained.

"What it does is extend the patent rights of the developer forever unless the product is taken off the list. It protects a monopoly on the product which can be then sold at a much higher price," he said.

Marcum also noted that many drugs commonly used overseas are not available in the U.S.

"They (FDA officials) fear criticism if they introduce any new drugs, so we aren't allowed to use them. The agency is protecting itself instead of the public," he charged.

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha Public Power District is replacing stolen copper wire with aluminum wire to discourage further thefts from its lines, a company spokesman said Tuesday. The aluminum wire, reinforced with steel, functions as well as copper wire but is not attractive to thieves since it has little resale value, a district spokesman said. Boy Killed In Highway Collision Near Kearney

Kearney (AP) — An 11-year-old boy was killed and two other persons were seriously injured Tuesday in the collision of a car and gravel truck about three miles south of here.

The victim's name was not immediately available.

The Nebraska State Patrol said the car, driven by the boy's mother, was southbound on Highway 44 and and was turning left onto Highway 50-A when it was struck broadside by the northbound gravel truck.

The boy's mother was listed in serious condition and a 10-year-old sister was listed in guarded condition. The truck driver escaped serious injury.

Farm Research Draws Support

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Star Staff Writer

University of Nebraska regents and candidates for regent in the fall election met Tuesday with Nebraska Agricultural Council members in a pre-election discussion of issues related to the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at NU

A suggestion by Regent Robert Raun of Minden that some research funds must come from checkoff programs financed by farmers drew a chilly reception from Willard Waldo of DeWitt, a regent candidate

"It is all right if producer groups want to supplement research activities at the university, but the basic funding must come from the general tax fund because research has benefits for the consumer as much as for the producer," Waldo said.

Waldo drew strong support from Ed Andersen, master of the Nebraska Grange, who expressed fears that funds from checkoff programs might discourage investment in research activities by the legislature

Dr Robert Prokop of Wilber, Waldo's election opponent, told council members that any group could arrange to meet with the board of regents by writing a letter 14 days prior to the regular regents' meeting requesting to be included in the agenda

Willard Waldo

Council members voted to establish an executive committee that will be responsible for having someone on the council attend regent meetings regularly and report back to the council

Prokop and Waldo seemed to agree that a current lawsuit by the university that contends the unicameral has overstepped its authority in directing NU expenditures, and the State Department of Administrative services was intruding into university personnel matters was a bad idea

"I was opposed to the lawsuit in the first place It has already cost the taxpayers $15,000 and the matter has yet to come up in court," Prokup said

Waldo suggested that such problems were better worked out in meetings between involved parties than in a court case

Waldo said if he is elected he will work with the legislature and the governor to lessen the adversary positions between the three groups

"I never met a senator who was out to destroy the university There is a need for better understanding between the governor, legislature and the administration of the university," he said

During a question and answer session, Merle Hansen of Newman Grove, regent candidate indicated he wasn't a big fan of research but denied he was opposed to it "We need to take a look at what happens when we institute a research project. Increased production of any agricultural product tends to drive prices down," he warned.

Hansen also noted that increasing irrigation in the state tended to increase agricultural production, bringing lower prices and a lower water table to the area irrigated.

Raun defended spending at the University of Nebraska-Omaha by the state "There are a lot of people who pay taxes in Omaha They want higher education They do make a contribution to agriculture because we are training people to be teachers, business administration people ect., who will often work in some agricultural field or teach in a rural area after graduation," he said

"You can't shut down all the university except the agricultural part You have to look at the needs of the state as a whole," he said

Waldo indicated he felt the agricultural portions of the university had been underfunded for some time

"You do see some new things agriculture is getting now, but that is because agricultural needs have been shoved to the bottom of the list of priorities for years It is about time that changed," he said

Farm Council Supports Senators' Pay Hike

The Nebraska Agricultural Council gave strong support Tuesday for an amendment to the state constitution calling for an increase in the wages paid to state senators

The council also expressed interest in the cost of medicines to human and animal patients

Dr Jack Marcum, representing the Nebraska Veterinary Medical Association, told the group that prices were artificially high

"The Federal Drug Administration has declared every medicine developed in the last 20 years a new medicine The only one released was Tylan Once a medicine is taken off the new medicine list it carries a 17-year patent after which any company can make it," he explained

"What it does is extend the patent rights of the developer forever unless the product is taken off the list It protects a monopoly on the product which can be then sold at a much higher price," he said

Marcum also noted that many drugs commonly used overseas are not available in the U S

"They (FDA officials) fear criticism if they introduce any new drugs, so we aren't allowed to use them The agency is protecting itself instead of the public," he charged

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — First the news. Good and bad. Doctor in the morning paper says that annual checkup your medic gives you, doesn't do you a bit of good. He can poke you and punch you — ("bend over, please") — but chances are he'll find nothing wrong.

A week later you stagger in. Sweat popping from the forehead. Haggard.

"Ah ha!" says the medic. "Malaria. Now how did I overlook that?"

There's another doctor I read who thinks a checkup may be bad for you.

"The anticipation raises fear side effects that make the barely possible benefits doubtful."

Thus the foggy morning begins at Sinking Inn. Damned if we do, damned if we don't.

☆ ☆ ☆

I put these contradictions in a "What's Going On Around Here" file. Like exercise is good/bad for you? Spinach makes you like Popeye. Or spinach tends to give you kidney stones.

A psychologist went to Tahiti. When he returned from those blessed isles, he said: "The Tahitians suffer neuroses in the same proportion as people living in the United States."

Thus he blew the western world's conception of the peaceful (and erotic) life that attracted Gauguin and caused the mutiny on the Bounty.

When Captain Cook landed at Matavai bay, he logged that "the natives have perfect teeth. They pluck the hair carefully from under their arms."

Auwe! Now the island vahines (Tahitian sp.) show great gaps in their teeth when they smile. And they think anyone who shaves under the arms is some kind of a nut.

With such backing and filling by the medicine men, we are fogged in — to match the weather at Sinking Inn.

An eastern liberal agrees to go for vice president alongside a conservative western governor. (Of course, maybe that's what he means by "liberal".) There are a few grumbles. But we don't expect politicos to be consistent — except in their determination to be elected at any cost.

Not so with our physicians: "Heal thyself. But heal me first."

Friend of mine has never been able to get his correct blood pressure. As soon as the doctor straps on the judas cuff and pumps it up, his blood pressure goes up like a rocket.

The medic was amazed. He said: "If you had blood pressure like that all the time, you'd be dead."

This man is alive and well. Therefore he must have a reasonable blood pressure. But he will never know how much.

"You bettah off," I told him.

This is the season of fog. It is the time of year when the moppets have their teeth braced by a dentist who has his eye on a Cadillac.

Our cat, Dr. Watson — (of the pair, the other is Sherlock Holmes) — broke a leg. I wanted to tell her: "Heal thyself, Dr." But I took her to the vet's. He put a pin in it. It doesn't seem to bother her.

Cats and dogs don't get annual checkups. Yet they live long and useful lives.

(The moppets said: "The Cap'n's bent on all the canvas she can carry. He'll round the Horn or he'll sail her down to Davy Jones!")

Giscard Hit By Anti-Hunters

Paris (UPI) — President Valery Giscard D'Estaing came under attack from the rally of Opponents of Hunting organization for taking part in his latest big game hunting trip in Africa. The organization charged he was setting a bad example for the French people.

The organization, headed by Bernard Groslier, sent an open letter to Giscard denouncing his reputation as one of the "best rifles in France" and asking the president to set up an "armistice with the animals" to enable certain endangered species to survive and to abstain from hunting in the future.

The president, an enthusiastic big game hunter, is currently on one of his regular hunting expeditions in an undisclosed area of central Africa.

Sharks Still Fascinate Group Of Researchers

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — The image of a great white shark striking with man and boat in the box-office sensation "Jaws" may have faded from the minds of bathers. But the interest in sharks remains among a more select group of researchers.

"In the last 20 years we have learned more about the biology and behavior of sharks than in the previous 200 years," said Dr. Perry Gilbert, director of the Mote Marine Laboratory at Sarasota and professor of neurobiology and behavior at Cornell University.

"And we're just reaching the stage where we're beginning to ask the right questions."

People want to know more about one of nature's largest predators, and scientists are the first to admit there is still much to learn about the 250 species of sharks.

"Out in the sea, sharks reign virtually supreme," said Gilbert. "What science is trying to do is find out what makes them tick. Why have these animals survived for 300 million years, been so successful?"

Meanwhile, millions of beachgoers are jamming coastal sands this summer and it appears that curiosity has replaced apprehension.

At Florida's Daytona Beach, director of beach safety Tom Renick said that swimmers were caught up last year in what he called "Jaws mania." The movie, based on a best-selling novel, grossed $200 million after it was released in the spring of 1975.

"The movie played here the entire summer. Even the lifeguards came back big-eyed, and they knew there wasn't a 21-foot monster sitting on the sandbar," he said.

But indications are that the mania has worn off, Renick said.

Florida bathers have some reason for concern. The waters off Florida are among the most shark-infested on earth, sharing that distinction, scientists say, with parts of Australia and South Africa.

"Africa and Australia have done something about it. We have been most remiss in this country because chambers of commerce play down the shark hazard," said Gilbert.

What are the chances of bathers or boaters coming face-to-face with a shark? What do we really know about such a dreaded beast?

Most researchers agree that the odds of one particular bather being attacked are infinitesimal.

Dr. H. David Baldridge of the Marine Mote Laboratory said that about 50 shark attacks on humans are recorded each year. About one-fifth of the victims die — a proportion far lower than the number of persons killed in the United States each year by bee and wasp stings, Baldridge said.

Much of the research is directed toward means of reducing the chance of attack on humans. Studies have shown that chemical repellents are of little value. Now researchers are testing electrical devices.

Sharks, ranging in size from a few feet to monsters rivaling the mechanical star of "Jaws," can attack in cold or warm waters as shallow as 18 inches. They can detect sound over a mile away and pick up a scent from a half-mile. Their vision is superior to humans'.

Baldridge, whose non-fiction book "Shark Attack" was written before the movie was released but has sold one million copies since the film's success, believes it is a popular misconception that most shark attacks are triggered by hunger.

His theory is that the attacks are a super-aggressive form of defense. "We don't know how a shark thinks, so we don't know what constitutes a threat," he said. "Maneaters is a very overworked term. Many more sharks are eaten by man than vice versa. They don't deserve this reputation."

Studies at the Mote Marine Lab indicate that sound is the principle long-distance sense utilized by the shark, but that smell and sight come in quick progression as primary tools as the shark approaches a target.

At the University of Miami Marine Institute, Dr. Arthur Myrberg has demonstrated that sharks are clearly attracted by a variety of underwater sounds and signals.

"If a noise is rapidly pulsed, of sufficient intensity and a low frequency, it can readily attract sharks," Myrberg said.

Similarly, he has discovered that a sound can rapidly be changed to make it displeasing to the shark — and spark withdrawal.

Burden 'Greater' On Omaha Blacks

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—An attorney for the plaintiff intervenors in the Omaha School District desegregation case told an appeals court Tuesday that if the approved plan is implemented, it will result in less desegregation and will make black students bear most of the burden.

"The one common thread through the school district plan has been the minimum reassignment of white students on each grade level," said Robert Broom, an attorney representing the plaintiff intervenors in a hearing here before all eight judges on the U.S. 8th Circuit Court of Appeals.

"The result is less desegregation and a greater burden on black students through school closings and more transportation," Broom said of the desegregation plan approved by U.S. District Court Judge Albert G. Schatz of Omaha.

The school district is under orders from the 8th Circuit to desegregate its student body this fall, and the plan is to go into effect Sept. 7.

Brian Landsberg, an attorney with the U.S. Department of Justice, the plaintiff in the original desegregation suit, asked the court to affirm Schatz' order.

Landsberg said the government has given up its original objections to the exclusion of first graders from mandatory reassignment because other modifications were made.

"I would not say first graders were excluded. That they were not assigned is true," Landsberg said, noting that first graders will be included in other programs aimed at providing integrative experience.

Broom argued that first graders should be included in the busing plan.

Answering a question from the judges, Broom said that under changes proposed by the intervenors, about 3,000 additional students would be included in the busing plans.

At present, the plan calls for the busing of about 9,000 students. There are about 57,000 students in the school district.

Broom also argued that the exclusion of students in Franklin and Monmouth Park Elementary Schools showed unequal racial treatment because the schools will be under-utilized. The two schools in question are predominately black now.

Broom said the two schools have "C" rating from the school district, and this shows "they're not good enough for the use of white students."

In his findings, Schatz said the two schools do not provide adequate facilities.

Gerald Laughlin, an attorney for the school board, assured the judges that the district is ready to implement its plan.

Antibusing Group Plans To Back Organization

Omaha (AP) — Omaha's main antibusing group will support a newly formed national organization that seeks an end to mandatory racial balance busing.

Mrs. John Eisel, president of Omahans Against Forced Busing, said her group will meet Wednesday night to determine how much money to pledge to the national group.

She said the national group was formed last weekend at a Denver symposium attended by antibusing representatives from 21 states. The group will be called the National Association of Neighborhood Schools, Inc., Mrs. Eisel said. She said she was the only Omaha representative at the weekend meeting.

The purpose of the Denver meeting, Mrs. Eisel said, was "to find constructive alternatives to forced busing."

She said the Omaha antibusing group which she heads has about 1,400 members who have paid $5 annual dues. She said the group has no plans for visible protests when this fall's busing begins in Omaha.

Such demonstrations have been detrimental in other cities, and can too easily lead to violence, she said.

School Board Has Right To Dismiss Bus Drivers

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha Board of Education will have the authority to dismiss a school bus driver under a contract ratified Monday.

The contract with City School Bus Services covers most of the busing to be done this year under court-ordered integration, as well as some voluntary integration programs.

No dollar amount has been specified, because the exact number of routes has not been determined. But Asst. Supt. Myrton Hall said the cost is estimated at about $1.4 million for the coming year.

In a related matter, the board approved an administration proposal to buy six cars to help monitor the integration program. Hall said the idea is to use the cars as a "roving patrol."

The board also took legal steps to put Pershing Elementary School back on the auction block, declaring it "surplus property." A spokesman said the school will be advertised for sale after it is appraised.

'Cheaper' Milk Cartons Expensive To Get Rid Of Omaha (AP) — Consider the lowly milk carton.

Omaha School District students used to get their halfpints of milk in bottles. But the collecting, cleaning, refilling and redistribution process proved too expensive.

The bottles were replaced by paper cartons. The cartons used to be collected and burned. Air pollution regulations prohibited burning in the individual school incinerators without alterations which school officials said would be too costly.

The solution was to throw the cartons away. Health officials said they couldn't be dropped in waste cans, they had to be placed in a plastic bag and the bag tied because milk cartons could attract flies.

So the school district had to buy bags, tens of thousands of them.

The bags for the upcoming school year cost $25,752.

One administrator said that cost undoubtedly will rise, since plastic is a byproduct of petroleum and with petroleum prices going up, so will the bags.

Now, milk cartons are expensive to use, too.

Nebraska Native Ickes Named Interior Deputy Undersecretary

Washington — A Nebraska native, R. Dennis Ickes, 33-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. N.D. Ickes Sr. of Page, Tuesday became deputy undersecretary of the Interior Department.

The department announcement of his appointment said Ickes' father and Harold Ickes, former secretary of interior under President Franklin D. Roosevelt, were cousins.

R. Dennis Ickes came to the Interior Department from the U.S. Justice Department, where he has served since 1974 as director of the department's office of Indian Rights.

A graduate of Brigham Young University at Provo, Utah, Ickes received his law degree from the University of Utah in 1970.

He and his wife, the former Susan Marriott of Washington, D.C., are the parents of three daughters.

The family has been visiting relatives at Page this week.

Amin Duel Said 'Absurd Thought'

Copenhagen (UPI) — A Danish journalist has challenged Ugandan President Idi Amin to a duel by pistols while descending by parachute over a neutral country, but a spokesman for Amin said it was "an absurd thought."

Jens Thomsen of the Newspaper Berlingske Tidende said he interviewed Amin by telephone July 5 for his comments about the Israeli raid on Entebbe airport to free hijacked airplane prisoners, but instead Amin called him names.

Thomsen said he notified some African newspapers about the challenge but did not send direct notification to Amin.

The Newspaper Ekstrabladet telephoned Amin's palace and a man who identified himself as Amin's principal private secretary said, "Thomsen's demand to have his honor satisfied in a duel is an absurd thought."

Weakened Veins Viewed As Main Factor In Thrombophlebitis

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Recently there was an interview on TV in which some doctors said thrombophlebitis arises from mental or physical strain. This was during a discussion of former President Nixon's thrombophlebitis.

I thought long working days, long hours standing, much walking and fatigue were the causes of thrombophlebitis. Am I correct? — M.S.

Partially correct. However, you don't mention weakened (varicosed) veins, which must be there to begin with. People with strong vein structure are not susceptible to such problems.

Weakened valves cause a faulty flow of blood "uphill," and this is aggravated by long periods of standing. Sitting also places pressure on the abdomen and on important leg vessels nearby. This abdomen pressure is a reason why some women develop varicose veins in pregnancy.

Thrombophlebitis, inflammation of a vein wall with clot formation, occurs where there is a sluggish flow of blood (stasis). Leg injury, infection or a malignant growth elsewhere in the body can be factors along with the weak veins. Incidentally, about 40% of men and 70% of women develop some degree of varicose veins.

Walking does not promote varicose veins. In fact, it helps by promoting circulation to the limbs. Nor can they be caused by tiring work, unless it involves long periods of standing or sitting. Anything that provokes blood coagulation may lead to clot formation in these weakened veins. Thus the contraceptive pill is discouraged for women with the problem.

There is no direct relationship between mental strain and thrombophlebitis. There are just too many obvious physical factors involved.

Men in public life do spend many hours standing stationary (in reception lines). In the case of former President Nixon, photographs of him seated usually showed him to be a habitual "knee-crosser." This places extra pressure on the veins supplying the legs and can contribute to the problem.

Dera Dr. Thosteson: Can oranges cause damage to the kidneys or bladder? I know they are good for me, but I am in the habit of eating two every night. Does it matter when they are eaten?

I thought maybe by eating them at night it might be bad because of sleeping for about eight hours. — Mrs. R. C.

No harm. It doesn't matter when you eat them unless you're allergic to them. In that case any time is bad. In rare cases a sensitivity to citrus fruits can cause bladder symptoms.

☆ ☆ ☆

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have pernicious anemia. I have learned to give myself shots of vitamin B-12, which I inject every three weeks. Is it advisable also to take iron capsules and folic acid while doing this? — Mrs. E. S. M.

It's not necessary with pernicious anemia. All you need is the B-12 injections.

Pernicious anemia is featured by the lack of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. This specifically prevents normal absorption of natural B-12 (from your food). The body needs the B-12 to form red blood cells. If it can't receive it through food, it must get it by injection.

This is not the problem in other forms of anemia, where the cause is some subtle loss of blood, as from excessive menstruation or other bleeding. Both iron and folic acid (a form of the B vitamin) help replenish the lost red blood cells.

In pernicious anemia, if the B-12 injections are doing the job, there's no need for extra iron or folic acid.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Last summer I was bitten on the shin by a horsefly, and I suffered a reaction. My leg became flaming red and grossly swollen.

My doctor gave me antihistamines and a shot, but said there was no other medicine available for horsefly bite and nothing else he could do. In all, I had three such bites and three identical reactions last summer. I am expecting the same this summer. Isnt there something else I can do? — Mrs. R. B.

The treatment you received was appropriate. But there is something else you can do. You should see an allergist about being hyposensitized (desensitized), as one would be for hay fever sensitivity or to bee stings. Also, avoid perfumed cosmetics. This will attract the little monsters.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Each meal is important, one no less than the other. If breakfast is a neglected meal at your house, you should seek the reason and correct it, reports the Nebraska Medical Association.

There is nothing sacred about the conventional American breakfast of toast, eggs, cereal or pancakes. Simple sandwiches, a small steak or chop may be a welcome change.

The association suggests that a slight modification of the kinds of food served, the frequency of use or the size of servings may bring a family's appetite back to the dinner table and meals up to acceptable standards of balance and nutrition.

Many people have the mistaken notion that some foods are fattening and should be avoided. This is not so. No one food can be considered fattening because each food contributes a certain percentage of the day's calories. The true cause of overweight is the total amount of food calories a person consumes each day.

Food habits change with age. This is neither surprising nor a cause for alarm. Old age does not necessitate a greater intake of calories, vitamins, minerals and protein. Except for total calories, people 60 years of age and over have the same nutrient requirements as people in middle age. Caloric requirements decrease with age largely because of reduction in the metabolic rate and gradual reduction in physical activity. This means less food is needed for consumption so greater care must be used in selection to assure balanced nutrition.

Schweiker Pledges No Liberal Betrayal

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Kansas City — Sen. Richard Schweiker Tuesday assured Nebraska Reagan delegates that he would not betray their conservative interests if he is selected as their vice presidential nominee.

Meeting with the delegates at Ronald Reagan's headquarters hotel, Schweiker said he would accept the GOP platform and the judgment of Reagan if he is named to a ticket headed by the Californian.

The session at the Alameda Plaza was designed to help blunt conservative apprehension about the Pennsylvania senator's generally liberal voting record.

"I feel a lot better," Nebraska delegation Chairman Milan Bish of Grand Island said following the meeting.

Bish, who headed Reagan's successful presidential primary campaign in Nebraska last May, said conservatives have begun to realize the wisdom of Reagan's surprise choice of Schweiker as his preferred running mate.

"We need someone like him to win in November," he declared.

Schweiker told the Nebraskans he would work with Reagan in a "a unified approach" to the issues.

"We don't deny our differences," he said. "That's part of what a coalition is all about."

But the press largely ignores the points of common ground between Reagan and Schweiker, he said.

Among them are support for a right-to-life position, capital punishment for serious crimes, mandatory sentences for criminals and a strong national defense, including the development of a number of basic weapons systems.

Schweiker said he also agrees with Reagan's opposition to gun control, forced busing and certain aspects of the Ford administration's policy of detente with the Soviet Union.

Some of his more liberal positions were designed to accurately represent the interests of "the highly industrialized and unionized" state of Pennsylvania, he said.

As vice president, he would "not seek to impose one state's interests on the other forty-nine" but would try to help Reagan develop "a national policy which is fair to all the states."

Schweiker's pro-labor Senate voting record had prompted questioning from Tyrone Grothe of Omaha, a Reagan delegate who told the senator she accepted his choice by Reagan "on faith alone."

Schweiker said Reagan has constructed a coalition which can win in November, composed of "the conservative and moderate wings of the party, East and West, North and South."

Only Reagan can overcome Democratic nominee Jimmy Carter's wide popular lead in the national polls, Schweiker said, and the only way to do it is through network television debates.

President Ford has indicated disinterest in a series of debates, he said.

"But that's the only way to pin him (Carter) down. And there is only one man who can do it, and that's Reagan. That's the way to beat Jimmy Carter."

If the power of the presidency hasn't helped Ford up to now, "I have a great deal of difficulty knowing where the 32 points (needed to overcome Carter in the polls) are going to come from", Schweiker said.

Ford should be required to name his vice presidential choice before the presidential nomination balloting so Republican delegates can make their own choice between "two teams and two concepts," the senator insisted.

It is the Reagan-Schweiker team which can "make peanut butter and jelly out of Carter and Mondale in November," he declared later. Answering a couple of questions from the Nebraska delegation, Schweiker asked and answered one of his own.

What happens if Reagan is elected and is unable to complete his full term in office?

"I would feel duty-bound to live up to whatever mandate we receive . . . I would carry out the mandate for which Reagan was elected."

GOP Liberals Find Themselves Outcasts At Convention

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — For liberal Republicans, the 1976 GOP National Convention promises only disaster. They are the party outcasts.

Once dominant in the continuous ideological battle with conservatives, the GOP liberals have plummeted to a new low:

—They do not have a candidate in contention.

—Their titular leader, Nelson Rockefeller, is on the sidelines.

—The GOP platform will be written by conservatives.

—And their presidential candidate will be a conservative, either Gerald Ford or Ronald Reagan.

What happened to the so-called Eastern liberal wing of the party which won with Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1952 and 1956 and at least could come into the conventions backing a Rockefeller, Romney or Scranton?

In effect, the liberals were boxed in by circumstances.

If Richard Nixon had completed his term or Gerald Ford had decided against seeking a full four years of his own, the liberals certainly would have put up a candidate.

But all those plans were dropped when Ford announced he would seek the GOP presidential nomination, and Ronald Reagan decided to oppose him.

By running a candidate of their own, the liberals knew they could only siphon delegates from Ford and perhaps hand the nomination to Reagan.

In a pragmatic move, they decided to band behind Ford as the lesser of two political evils.

Ironically, Sen. Richard Schweiker, a card-carrying member of the East Coast wing before he abruptly defeated to become Reagan's potential vice presidential candidate, summed up the liberals' dilemma. That was early this year when he was backing Ford.

". . . We have to make choices," Schweiker said. "Politics is the art of the possible."

"Ford isn't running against Rockefeller. He isn't running aginst Mathias. He isn't running against Percy. He's running against Reagan.

"It's Ford vs. Reagan and I'll support Ford down the line," Schweiker said, summing up the feeling the liberals still hold. "If Ford got out of the race, that's another ball game."

Landowners File Suit To Block Loup Parts Of Irrigation Project

By The Associated Press

Four landowners filed a federal lawsuit Tuesday to halt a part of the massive Missouri River Basin Project that affects more than 50,000 acres in five Nebraska counties just southeast of Burwell.

A hearing on the landowners' request for a temporary injunction to stop work on the Twin Loup and North Loup portions of the project was set for Tuesday in Judge Warren K. Urbom's court.

Plaintiffs are: Lloyd A. Gewecke and Rollie R. Staab, residents of Valley County, and Gaylord Wallace and Mark Gorball, Garfield County.

If the project is allowed, the complaint says, "homes will be lost. Prime farmlands and ranchlands will be lost and many landowners will be forced to terminate their lifework."

Defendants are the directors and officials of the Twin Loup irrigation and reclamation districts; the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation and the director of its Nebraska office, and officers of two construction firms under contract for the project.

The part of the project cited in the suit is intended to provide irrigation water to 52,570 acres of land in Nance, Merrick Howard, Valley and Greeley counties, according to the complaint.

The landowners, whose suit is a class action on behalf of themselves and other landowners in the districts, claims that:

—The environmental impact statement is erroneous and inadequate;

—Subcontracts for construction of a water distribution system and a six-mile access road near Burwell to a proposed Calamus River dam were not properly approved;

—Irreparable injury in loss of homes and farmlands will be caused if construction is allowed to proceed before a final court ruling is issued.

The four also charge that if construction proceeds, voters in the districts will be deprived of a referendum vote on whether to dissolve the districts.

The complaint charges that at least 80% of the 50,000 plus acres in the districts is now irrigated by ground water supply. It alleges that lands not now irrigated are unsuitable for irrigation.

In addition, the plaintiffs charge that 13,000 acres in the project area were substituted for acreage taken out of the proposal after the impact statement was written.

"Not less than 19,000 acres of farm, ranch, home and wildlife land will be destroyed to provide water to not more than 52,570 acres, most of which has an existing and adequate supply of irrigation water for the forseeable future," the lawsuit charged.

Disputes have arisen over several portions of the Missouri River Basin Project in Nebraska. A hearing is scheduled for November in federal court at Lincoln on a similar suit brought by the Save the Niobrar River Committee.

Lockheed Charges Spread

The Hague (UPI) — Queen Juliana cut short her Italian Riviera vacation Tuesday to fly home for consultations on the investigation into Lockheed bribery allegations against her husband Prince Bernhard.

The Royal Court announced the queen would consult with the government on the report by a panel of "Three Wise Men" instructed to investigate allegations that Bernhard received $1.1 million from the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. to promote its sales in the Netherlands.

Last Friday it was officially announced the panel, appointed in early February, had handed over its final report to Socialist Premier Joop Den Uyl. There were no indications of its contents.

Board Expenses

Des Moines (UPI) — Grandstand tickets valued at more than $25,000 have been given free of charge to members of the Iowa State Fair board for the 1976 fair.

Each board member has received tickets for a 12-seat box for 31 grandstand shows. The board has 10 regular members and three ex-officio members. The executive secretary of the fair also has received the free tickets.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — First the news. Good and bad. Doctor in the morning paper says that annual checkup your medic gives you, doesn't do you a bit of good. He can poke you and punch you — ("bend over, please") — but chances are he'll find nothing wrong.

A week later you stagger in. Sweat popping from the forehead. Haggard.

"Ah ha!" says the medic. "Malaria. Now how did I overlook that?"

There's another doctor I read who thinks a checkup may be bad for you.

"The anticipation raises fear side effects that make the barely possible benefits doubtful."

Thus the foggy morning begins at Sinking Inn. Damned if we do, damned if we don't.

☆ ☆ ☆

I put these contradictions in a "What's Going On Around Here" file. Like exercise is good/bad for you? Spinach makes you like Popeye. Or spinach tends to give you kidney stones.

A psychologist went to Tahiti. When he returned from those blessed isles, he said: "The Tahitians suffer neuroses in the same proportion as people living in the United States."

Thus he blew the western world's conception of the peaceful (and erotic) life that attracted Gauguin and caused the mutiny on the Bounty.

When Captain Cook landed at Matavai bay, he logged that "the natives have perfect teeth. They pluck the hair carefully from under their arms."

Auwe! Now the island vahines (Tahitian sp.) show great gaps in their teeth when they smile. And they think anyone who shaves under the arms is some kind of a nut.

With such backing and filling by the medicine men, we are fogged in — to match the weather at Sinking Inn.

An eastern liberal agrees to go for vice president alongside a conservative western governor. (Of course, maybe that's what he means by "liberal".) There are a few grumbles. But we don't expect politicos to be consistent — except in their determination to be elected at any cost.

Not so with our physicians: "Heal thyself. But heal me first."

Friend of mine has never been able to get his correct blood pressure. As soon as the doctor straps on the judas cuff and pumps it up, his blood pressure goes up like a rocket.

The medic was amazed. He said: "If you had blood pressure like that all the time, you'd be dead."

This man is alive and well. Therefore he must have a reasonable blood pressure. But he will never know how much.

"You bettah off," I told him.

This is the season of fog. It is the time of year when the moppets have their teeth braced by a dentist who has his eye on a Cadillac.

Our cat, Dr. Watson — (of the pair, the other is Sherlock Holmes) — broke a leg. I wanted to tell her: "Heal thyself, Dr." But I took her to the vet's. He put a pin in it. It doesn't seem to bother her.

Cats and dogs don't get annual checkups. Yet they live long and useful lives.

(The moppets said: "The Cap'n's bent on all the canvas she can carry. He'll round the Horn or he'll sail her down to Davy Jones!")

Giscard Hit By Anti-Hunters

Paris (UPI) — President Valery Giscard D'Estaing came under attack from the rally of Opponents of Hunting organization for taking part in his latest big game hunting trip in Africa. The organization charged he was setting a bad example for the French people.

The organization, headed by Bernard Groslier, sent an open letter to Giscard denouncing his reputation as one of the "best rifles in France" and asking the president to set up an "armistice with the animals" to enable certain endangered species to survive and to abstain from hunting in the future.

The president, an enthusiastic big game hunter, is currently on one of his regular hunting expeditions in an undisclosed area of central Africa.

Sharks Still Fascinate Group Of Researchers

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — The image of a great white shark striking with man and boat in the box-office sensation "Jaws" may have faded from the minds of bathers. But the interest in sharks remains among a more select group of researchers.

"In the last 20 years we have learned more about the biology and behavior of sharks than in the previous 200 years," said Dr. Perry Gilbert, director of the Mote Marine Laboratory at Sarasota and professor of neurobiology and behavior at Cornell University.

"And we're just reaching the stage where we're beginning to ask the right questions."

People want to know more about one of nature's largest predators, and scientists are the first to admit there is still much to learn about the 250 species of sharks.

"Out in the sea, sharks reign virtually supreme," said Gilbert. "What science is trying to do is find out what makes them tick. Why have these animals survived for 300 million years, been so successful?"

Meanwhile, millions of beachgoers are jamming coastal sands this summer and it appears that curiosity has replaced apprehension.

At Florida's Daytona Beach, director of beach safety Tom Renick said that swimmers were caught up last year in what he called "Jaws mania." The movie, based on a best-selling novel, grossed $200 million after it was released in the spring of 1975.

"The movie played here the entire summer. Even the lifeguards came back big-eyed, and they knew there wasn't a 21-foot monster sitting on the sandbar," he said.

But indications are that the mania has worn off, Renick said.

Florida bathers have some reason for concern. The waters off Florida are among the most shark-infested on earth, sharing that distinction, scientists say, with parts of Australia and South Africa.

"Africa and Australia have done something about it. We have been most remiss in this country because chambers of commerce play down the shark hazard," said Gilbert.

What are the chances of bathers or boaters coming face-to-face with a shark? What do we really know about such a dreaded beast?

Most researchers agree that the odds of one particular bather being attacked are infinitesimal.

Dr. H. David Baldridge of the Marine Mote Laboratory said that about 50 shark attacks on humans are recorded each year. About one-fifth of the victims die — a proportion far lower than the number of persons killed in the United States each year by bee and wasp stings, Baldridge said.

Much of the research is directed toward means of reducing the chance of attack on humans. Studies have shown that chemical repellents are of little value. Now researchers are testing electrical devices.

Sharks, ranging in size from a few feet to monsters rivaling the mechanical star of "Jaws," can attack in cold or warm waters as shallow as 18 inches. They can detect sound over a mile away and pick up a scent from a half-mile. Their vision is superior to humans'.

Baldridge, whose non-fiction book "Shark Attack" was written before the movie was released but has sold one million copies since the film's success, believes it is a popular misconception that most shark attacks are triggered by hunger.

His theory is that the attacks are a super-aggressive form of defense. "We don't know how a shark thinks, so we don't know what constitutes a threat," he said. "Maneaters is a very overworked term. Many more sharks are eaten by man than vice versa. They don't deserve this reputation."

Studies at the Mote Marine Lab indicate that sound is the principle long-distance sense utilized by the shark, but that smell and sight come in quick progression as primary tools as the shark approaches a target.

At the University of Miami Marine Institute, Dr. Arthur Myrberg has demonstrated that sharks are clearly attracted by a variety of underwater sounds and signals.

"If a noise is rapidly pulsed, of sufficient intensity and a low frequency, it can readily attract sharks," Myrberg said.

Similarly, he has discovered that a sound can rapidly be changed to make it displeasing to the shark — and spark withdrawal.

Olympic Music

There was some really terrific music played during the opening and closing ceremonies of the Olympic games in Montreal. Who was the composer and is the music available in any recorded form?

—Jack Dobbs, Lincoln

Montreal

ACTION LINE: The music was composed by Canadian Andre Mathieu according to ABC in New York. The Olympic Committee has put together an album of the music used during the two-week long games called "Opening and Closing Ceremonies," added the representative. It is available by writing Polydor Publishing Co., Montreal, Canada.

Mite-y Problem

The chiggers around our house are causing us a lot of problems. What exactly are they and can they live inside on our clothes?

—J.M., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Chiggers are the tiny red larvae of certain mites whose bite causes itching. According to the Lancaster County Extension Office, inflammation from bites usually develops within 24 hours after being outside and in contact with the pesky parasites. The six-legged, almost invisible larvae causes itching in man or domestic animals. The tiny larva, once it has been full-fed, drops off of humans and does not stay on as a tick might. The insects cannot live in clothes. The adults winter in cells below ground level and lay their eggs during spring. When the eggs hatch, the resulting larvae are the cause of itchy misery for humans and pets. From the larvae stage they develop into the nymph stage and then into adults. During the last two stages they pose no problems to humans as it is only during the larval stage that they cause bites. Insect repellents will keep the pesky creatures away from your skin and they can be wiped out in an area by spraying insecticides, says the extension agent.

'Rose Of North' Said World's Drug Capital

Chiang Mai, Thailand (AP) — This is a 1,000-foot high retreat from the burning sun of the Thai plains, a place of quiet Buddhist shrines and cottage craftsmen born to fashion teak, silver, silk and cotton. Tourist books call it "the rose of the north."

Lawmen call Chiang Mai the drug capital of the world, the symbol of which could more accurately be the opium poppy.

The thousands of foreign and Thai tourists who come each year would never guess from its surfaces, but Chiang Mai serves as a kind of sluice gate for some two-thirds of the world's illicit heroin. It streams out of the infamous "Golden Triangle" through Thailand and eventually onto the streets of New York, Amsterdam, Paris and London.

"It's Turkey, Istanbul and Marseilles all rolled into one," says one narcotics source, contrasting Chiang Mai to the now fractured "French Connection," which took opium from Turkish fields, refined it into heroin in the laboratories of the French port and smuggled it to the United States and elsewhere.

U.S. estimates say anywhere from 8 to 30 per cent of heroin found in the United States now comes from Southeast Asia.

Chiang Mai and the Triangle — where the boundaries of Thailand, Laos and Burma converge — is part storybook, part greed and violence.

Rugged hill tribesmen, armed with flintlocks, quietly tend thousands of acres of beautiful poppy fields scorched out of the mountainsides. Mortars and machine guns blaze away as police and soldiers clash with opium runners. Old Chinese friends meet in the sleepy lanes of Chiang Mai and, over tea, seal bargains in opium worth millions of dollars.

Southeast Asian politics, massive corruption, Communist insurgencies and the world economy all play roles here. The result — Thai and Western drug experts say — is that under current conditions there is no way to stop or stem the narcotics flow.

It starts 3,000 feet or more up in the mountains or valleys of the Triangle, especially in Burma where the rich soil and proper climate yield what experts say are "poppy balls as big as your fists." Thai and Western narcotics sources here, in Bangkok and Rangoon tell the rest of what is know about the shadowy Triangle trade today:

Sticky sap oozes out of the opium bulbs. Harvesters dry it and begin the 16 chemical steps needed to break down opium to pure heroin.

Mules do the heavy work, lugging opium-stuffed bags in caravans that wind through the rugged Burmese terrain to the Thai border. The opium may change hands half a dozen times during the trip, handled by minority tribes, Chinese middlemen and even Burmese Communists. Rival groups often lie in ambush as does the Burmese army which, even with its 10 U.S.-supplied helicopters, is hard pressed to pin down the stealthy traders among the hills and dense forests.

Most of the opium refineries are located a maximum of three miles either side of the Thai-Burmese border. The labs are ramshackle affairs — a few thatched huts, oil drums, bicycle pumps and crude cooking utensils which more resemble implements for a witch's brew than tools for a sophisticated chemical operation.

Weakened Veins Viewed As Main Factor In Thrombophlebitis

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Recently there was an interview on TV in which some doctors said thrombophlebitis arises from mental or physical strain. This was during a discussion of former President Nixon's thrombophlebitis.

I thought long working days, long hours standing, much walking and fatigue were the causes of thrombophlebitis. Am I correct? — M.S.

Partially correct. However, you don't mention weakened (varicosed) veins, which must be there to begin with. People with strong vein structure are not susceptible to such problems.

Weakened valves cause a faulty flow of blood "uphill," and this is aggravated by long periods of standing. Sitting also places pressure on the abdomen and on important leg vessels nearby. This abdomen pressure is a reason why some women develop varicose veins in pregnancy.

Thrombophlebitis, inflammation of a vein wall with clot formation, occurs where there is a sluggish flow of blood (stasis). Leg injury, infection or a malignant growth elsewhere in the body can be factors along with the weak veins. Incidentally, about 40% of men and 70% of women develop some degree of varicose veins.

Walking does not promote varicose veins. In fact, it helps by promoting circulation to the limbs. Nor can they be caused by tiring work, unless it involves long periods of standing or sitting. Anything that provokes blood coagulation may lead to clot formation in these weakened veins. Thus the contraceptive pill is discouraged for women with the problem.

There is no direct relationship between mental strain and thrombophlebitis. There are just too many obvious physical factors involved.

Men in public life do spend many hours standing stationary (in reception lines). In the case of former President Nixon, photographs of him seated usually showed him to be a habitual "knee-crosser." This places extra pressure on the veins supplying the legs and can contribute to the problem.

☆ ☆ ☆

Dera Dr. Thosteson: Can oranges cause damage to the kidneys or bladder? I know they are good for me, but I am in the habit of eating two every night. Does it matter when they are eaten?

I thought maybe by eating them at night it might be bad because of sleeping for about eight hours. — Mrs. R. C.

No harm. It doesn't matter when you eat them unless you're allergic to them. In that case any time is bad. In rare cases a sensitivity to citrus fruits can cause bladder symptoms.

☆ ☆ ☆

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have pernicious anemia. I have learned to give myself shots of vitamin B-12, which I inject every three weeks. Is it advisable also to take iron capsules and folic acid while doing this? — Mrs. E. S. M.

It's not necessary with pernicious anemia. All you need is the B-12 injections.

Pernicious anemia is featured by the lack of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. This specifically prevents normal absorption of natural B-12 (from your food). The body needs the B-12 to form red blood cells. If it can't receive it through food, it must get it by injection.

This is not the problem in other forms of anemia, where the cause is some subtle loss of blood, as from excessive menstruation or other bleeding. Both iron and folic acid (a form of the B vitamin) help replenish the lost red blood cells.

In pernicious anemia, if the B-12 injections are doing the job, there's no need for extra iron or folic acid.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Last summer I was bitten on the shin by a horsefly, and I suffered a reaction. My leg became flaming red and grossly swollen.

My doctor gave me antihistamines and a shot, but said there was no other medicine available for horsefly bite and nothing else he could do. In all, I had three such bites and three identical reactions last summer. I am expecting the same this summer. Isnt there something else I can do? — Mrs. R. B.

The treatment you received was appropriate. But there is something else you can do. You should see an allergist about being hyposensitized (desensitized), as one would be for hay fever sensitivity or to bee stings. Also, avoid perfumed cosmetics. This will attract the little monsters.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Each meal is important, one no less than the other. If breakfast is a neglected meal at your house, you should seek the reason and correct it, reports the Nebraska Medical Association.

There is nothing sacred about the conventional American breakfast of toast, eggs, cereal or pancakes. Simple sandwiches, a small steak or chop may be a welcome change.

The association suggests that a slight modification of the kinds of food served, the frequency of use or the size of servings may bring a family's appetite back to the dinner table and meals up to acceptable standards of balance and nutrition.

Many people have the mistaken notion that some foods are fattening and should be avoided. This is not so. No one food can be considered fattening because each food contributes a certain percentage of the day's calories. The true cause of overweight is the total amount of food calories a person consumes each day.

Food habits change with age. This is neither surprising nor a cause for alarm. Old age does not necessitate a greater intake of calories, vitamins, minerals and protein. Except for total calories, people 60 years of age and over have the same nutrient requirements as people in middle age. Caloric requirements decrease with age largely because of reduction in the metabolic rate and gradual reduction in physical activity. This means less food is needed for consumption so greater care must be used in selection to assure balanced nutrition.

One 'No' Vote Set On Public Radio

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

One Nebraska Educational Television Commission member said he will vote "no" Wednesday on a plan to create a statewide public radio system.

Steven B. Sample, University of Nebraska executive vice president, represents D. B. Varner in the commission seat now held permanently for the NU president. The NU Regents ordered Sample to vote against the public radio proposal, which recommends the Legislature authorize and fund the FM system.

In an interview Tuesday with The Lincoln Star, Sample said he agrees with Varner's analysis "that he holds his position on the NETV Commission solely by virtue of his position as NU president," that "his service on the commission is part of his official duties as president," and that he is answerable directly to the NU governing board.

"Therefore, when the Board of Regents takes a position for the University on an issue, he (Varner) is bound to support that position.

"As President Varner's designee to the commission, I feel bound to respect both the president's wishes and the regents' official position. Therefore, I plan to vote no on the issue of public radio," Sample said.

State Education Commissioner Anne Campbell may conceivably be subject to a situation similar to Sample's, because she holds the other permanent NETV Commission seat by virtue of her office.

Mrs. Campbell is directly responsible to the State Board of Education, but has said she's received no pressure on her public radio vote.

Two other commission members, Chadron State President Edwin Nelson, who represents the state colleges, and Doane College President Phillip Heckman of Crete, who represents private higher education, have cited no attempt to influence their votes.

Commission chairman Heckman said in a recent interview, "I just wouldn't vote (strictly) a private college opinion." The attorney general's advice indicated no commissioner must "go around and count noses" of his constituents to decide how to vote, he said.

Constituents "have the power to occupy the seat" figuratively, he said, "but it's never been established in representative government" that they own the person in the seat.

If NETV Commissioners have any voting priorities, Heckman said, their prime "allegiance" must be to all Nebraskans. Some of his own votes were "not good on the face of it for private higher education," rather "what's best for the whole."

Commission Vice Chairman June Popken of Brady has publicly questioned regents' authority over Sample's vote and has said western Nebraskans are "tired" of NU building projects in Lincoln and want outstate public services with educational advantages.

The commission is expected to take action on the question at 1:30 p.m. in the Nebraska Educational Telecommunications Center, 1800 N. 33rd, according to Secretary Jack McBride.

A nine-month commission subcommittee study concluded, in a report the full group accepted last month, that public radio should be pursued. It calls for a seven- to nine-station system of loosely affiliated stations. Linked with NETV Network facilities, they would be licensed to post-secondary education institutions and the commission.

The first station is proposed to transmit from Mead to serve the Lincoln-Omaha area. Total cost is an estimated $1.3 million for the overall system, with less than a third from state funds.

A grass-roots citizen group and other Nebraskans via letters and a statewide televised public hearing indicated overwhelming support for public radio. The Nebraska Broadcasters Association is firmly opposed.

Other commission business Wednesday includes the NETV legislative appropriations request for fiscal 1978-79.

In a development related to the public radio issues Tuesday, the Nebraska Association of Independent Colleges and Universities voted 9-1 against the proposed system. Heckman cast the only dissenting vote. He originally proposed public radio.

Association president Dale Lund, Midland College president, said the association opposes the system because it's low in priority among needs deserving attention and money, and because long-range costs could escalate.

Graduates Had Easier Job Hunt

By United Press International

The College Placement Council Tuesday said the number of job offers to 1975-76 graduates with a bachelor's degree was 11% above the number of offers to 1974-75 graduates.

Frank Hallgren, career planning director at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said the 1975-76 college recruiting trend started slow but ended ahead of last year's figures.

Hallgren said the council's report also showed an 8% increase over last year in offers for students with master's degrees and a 14% increase for those at the doctoral level.

However, he said, the number of offers reported this year for the bachelor's level remained 15% behind 1973-74, which is considered one of the better recruiting seasons since the boom of the sixties.

The council's report also showed job offers for women at the bachelor's level represented a 59% increase over last year's offers, while the men's volume increased only 4%.

But the report showed that women accounted for only 19% of the total number of bachelor's offers reported.

In addition, women master's fared better than men in percentage of volume increase. The women gained by 25% in job offers compared with 5% for men.

And women at the master's level accounted for 14% of the total master's offers this year, compared with 9% in 1973-74.

The council's survey is based on job offers — not acceptances — made to college students in selected disciplines and graduate programs during the normal recruiting period, September to June.

The survey compiles data from 159 colleges and universities throughout the United States.

Men Are Fined For Unlicensed Liquor Selling

A ten-day investigation culminated in the arrest and conviction of two residents of the Russian Inn for bootlegging Tuesday.

Ast. Police Chief Roger LaPage said two men were arrested Tuesday morning by vice and undercover officers of the Lincoln Police Department.

The men, Lorien Grier and Larry Spidell, allegedly sold wine to the officers on Sunday. The men plead guilty in Municipal Court to the charge of selling alcoholic liquor without a license.

Acting Municipal Court Judge Jack Lindner found the pair guilty and fined each $100 plus court costs, the maximum fine.

Grier, 42, and Spidell, 33, live at the Russian Inn, 7th and P St.

The officers contacted the men at the hotel and bought some wine from the men, LaPage said.

Merger Would Involve Central School

Louisville (UPI) — A tentative plan involving the merger of three eastern Nebraska school districts calls for the construction of a $3.75 million school-community education center.

Voters in the Louisville, Murdock and Weeping Water school districts will vote on the proposed merger this fall.

A plan prepared by a consultant proposes the new school district, if formed, select a central location near the intersection of Nebraska Highways 1 and 50 commonly referred to as "the Manley corner" as the site for the new school.

The consultant's plan said an estimated 80 acres of land would be the minimum needed for the site.

Schweiker Pledges No Liberal Betrayal

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Kansas City — Sen. Richard Schweiker Tuesday assured Nebraska Reagan delegates that he would not betray their conservative interests if he is selected as their vice presidential nominee.

Meeting with the delegates at Ronald Reagan's headquarters hotel, Schweiker said he would accept the GOP platform and the judgment of Reagan if he is named to a ticket headed by the Californian.

The session at the Alameda Plaza was designed to help blunt conservative apprehension about the Pennsylvania senator's generally liberal voting record.

"I feel a lot better," Nebraska delegation Chairman Milan Bish of Grand Island said following the meeting.

Bish, who headed Reagan's successful presidential primary campaign in Nebraska last May, said conservatives have begun to realize the wisdom of Reagan's surprise choice of Schweiker as his preferred running mate.

"We need someone like him to win in November," he declared.

Schweiker told the Nebraskans he would work with Reagan in a "a unified approach" to the issues.

"We don't deny our differences," he said. "That's part of what a coalition is all about."

But the press largely ignores the points of common ground between Reagan and Schweiker, he said.

Among them are support for a right-to-life position, capital punishment for serious crimes, mandatory sentences for criminals and a strong national defense, including the development of a number of basic weapons systems.

Schweiker said he also agrees with Reagan's opposition to gun control, forced busing and certain aspects of the Ford administration's policy of detente with the Soviet Union.

Some of his more liberal positions were designed to accurately represent the interests of "the highly industrialized and unionized" state of Pennsylvania, he said.

As vice president, he would "not seek to impose one state's interests on the other forty-nine" but would try to help Reagan develop "a national policy which is fair to all the states."

Schweiker's pro-labor Senate voting record had prompted questioning from Tyrone Grothe of Omaha, a Reagan delegate who told the senator she accepted his choice by Reagan "on faith alone."

Schweiker said Reagan has constructed a coalition which can win in November, composed of "the conservative and moderate wings of the party, East and West, North and South."

Only Reagan can overcome Democratic nominee Jimmy Carter's wide popular lead in the national polls, Schweiker said, and the only way to do it is through network television debates.

President Ford has indicated disinterest in a series of debates, he said.

"But that's the only way to pin him (Carter) down. And there is only one man who can do it, and that's Reagan. That's the way to beat Jimmy Carter."

If the power of the presidency hasn't helped Ford up to now, "I have a great deal of difficulty knowing where the 32 points (needed to overcome Carter in the polls) are going to come from", Schweiker said.

Ford should be required to name his vice presidential choice before the presidential nomination balloting so Republican delegates can make their own choice between "two teams and two concepts," the senator insisted.

It is the Reagan-Schweiker team which can "make peanut butter and jelly out of Carter and Mondale in November," he declared later. Answering a couple of questions from the Nebraska delegation. Schweiker asked and answered one of his own.

What happens if Reagan is elected and is unable to complete his full term in office?

"I would feel duty-bound to live up to whatever mandate we receive . . . I would carry out the mandate for which Reagan was elected."

GOP Liberals Find Themselves Outcasts At Convention

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — For liberal Republicans, the 1976 GOP National Convention promises only disaster. They are the party outcasts.

Once dominant in the continuous ideological battle with conservatives, the GOP liberals have plummeted to a new low:

—They do not have a candidate in contention.

—Their titular leader, Nelson Rockefeller, is on the sidelines.

—The GOP platform will be written by conservatives.

—And their presidential candidate will be a conservative, either Gerald Ford or Ronald Reagan.

What happened to the so-called Eastern liberal wing of the party which won with Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1952 and 1956 and at least could come into the conventions backing a Rockefeller, Romney or Scranton?

In effect, the liberals were boxed in by circumstances.

If Richard Nixon had completed his term or Gerald Ford had decided against seeking a full four years of his own, the liberals certainly would have put up a candidate.

But all those plans were dropped when Ford announced he would seek the GOP presidential nomination, and Ronald Reagan decided to oppose him.

By running a candidate of their own, the liberals knew they could only siphon delegates from Ford and perhaps hand the nomination to Reagan.

In a pragmatic move, they decided to band behind Ford as the lesser of two political evils.

Ironically, Sen. Richard Schweiker, a card-carrying member of the East Coast wing before he abruptly defeated to become Reagan's potential vice presidential candidate, summed up the liberals' dilemma. That was early this year when he was backing Ford.

". . . We have to make choices," Schweiker said. "Politics is the art of the possible."

"Ford isn't running against Rockefeller. He isn't running aginst Mathias. He isn't running against Percy. He's running against Reagan.

"It's Ford vs. Reagan and I'll support Ford down the line," Schweiker said, summing up the feeling the liberals still hold. "If Ford got out of the race, that's another ball game."

Landowners File Suit To Block Loup Parts Of Irrigation Project

By The Associated Press

Four landowners filed a federal lawsuit Tuesday to halt a part of the massive Missouri River Basin Project that affects more than 50,000 acres in five Nebraska counties just southeast of Burwell.

A hearing on the landowners' request for a temporary injunction to stop work on the Twin Loup and North Loup portions of the project was set for Tuesday in Judge Warren K. Urbom's court.

Plaintiffs are: Lloyd A. Gewecke and Rollie R. Staab, residents of Valley County, and Gaylord Wallace and Mark Gorball, Garfield County.

If the project is allowed, the complaint says, "homes will be lost. Prime farmlands and ranchlands will be lost and many landowners will be forced to terminate their lifework."

Defendants are the directors and officials of the Twin Loup irrigation and reclamation districts; the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation and the director of its Nebraska office, and officers of two construction firms under contract for the project.

The part of the project cited in the suit is intended to provide irrigation water to 52,570 acres of land in Nance, Merrick Howard, Valley and Greeley counties, according to the complaint.

The landowners, whose suit is a class action on behalf of themselves and other landowners in the districts, claims that:

—The environmental impact statement is erroneous and inadequate;

—Subcontracts for construction of a water distribution system and a six-mile access road near Burwell to a proposed Calamus River dam were not properly approved;

—Irreparable injury in loss of homes and farmlands will be caused if construction is allowed to proceed before a final court ruling is issued.

The four also charge that if construction proceeds, voters in the districts will be deprived of a referendum vote on whether to dissolve the districts.

The complaint charges that at least 80% of the 50,000 plus acres in the districts is now irrigated by ground water supply. It alleges that lands not now irrigated are unsuitable for irrigation.

In addition, the plaintiffs charge that 13,000 acres in the project area were substituted for acreage taken out of the proposal after the impact statement was written.

"Not less than 19,000 acres of farm, ranch, home and wildlife land will be destroyed to provide water to not more than 52,570 acres, most of which has an existing and adequate supply of irrigation water for the forseeable future," the lawsuit charged.

Disputes have arisen over several portions of the Missouri River Basin Project in Nebraska. A hearing is scheduled for November in federal court at Lincoln on a similar suit brought by the Save the Niobrar River Committee.

Lockheed Charges Spread

The Hague (UPI) — Queen Juliana cut short her Italian Riviera vacation Tuesday to fly home for consultations on the investigation into Lockheed bribery allegations against her husband Prince Bernhard.

The Royal Court announced the queen would consult with the government on the report by a panel of "Three Wise Men" instructed to investigate allegations that Bernhard received $1.1 million from the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. to promote its sales in the Netherlands.

Last Friday it was officially announced the panel, appointed in early February, had handed over its final report to Socialist Premier Joop Den Uyl. There were no indications of its contents.

Board Expenses

Des Moines (UPI) — Grandstand tickets valued at more than $25,000 have been given free of charge to members of the Iowa State Fair board for the 1976 fair.

Each board member has received tickets for a 12-seat box for 31 grandstand shows. The board has 10 regular members and three ex-officio members. The executive secretary of the fair also has received the free tickets.

Mite-y Problem

The chiggers around our house are causing us a lot of problems. What exactly are they and can they live inside on our clothes?

—J M , Lincoln

ACTION LINE. Chiggers are the tiny red larvae of certain mites whose bite causes itching According to the Lancaster County Extension Office, inflammation from bites usually develops within 24 hours after being outside and in contact with the pesky parasites The six-legged, almost invisible larvae causes itching in man or domestic animals The tiny larva, once it has been full fed, drops off of humans and does not stay on as a tick might The insects cannot live in clothes The adults winter in cells below ground level and lay their eggs during spring When the eggs hatch, the resulting larvae are the cause of itchy misery for humans and pets From the larvae stage they develop into the nymph stage and then into adults During the last two stages they pose no problems to humans as it is only during the larval stage that they cause bites. Insect repellents will keep the pesky creatures away from your skin and they can be wiped out in an area by spraying insecticides, says the extension agent

'Rose Of North' Said World's Drug Capital

Chiang Mai, Thailand (AP) — This is a 1,000-foot high retreat from the burning sun of the Thai plains, a place of quiet Buddhist shrines and cottage craftsmen born to fashion teak, silver, silk and cotton. Tourist books call it "the rose of the north."

Lawmen call Chiang Mai the drug capital of the world, the symbol of which could more accurately be the opium poppy.

The thousands of foreign and Thai tourists who come each year would never guess from its surfaces, but Chiang Mai serves as a kind of sluice gate for some two-thirds of the world's illicit heroin. It streams out of the infamous "Golden Triangle" through Thailand and eventually onto the streets of New York, Amsterdam, Paris and London.

"It's Turkey, Istanbul and Marseilles all rolled into one," says one narcotics source, contrasting Chiang Mai to the now fractured "French Connection," which took opium from Turkish fields, refined it into heroin in the laboratories of the French port and smuggled it to the United States and elsewhere.

US estimates say anywhere from 8 to 30 per cent of heroin found in the United States now comes from Southeast Asia.

Chiang Mai and the Triangle — where the boundaries of Thailand, Laos and Burma converge — is part storybook, part greed and violence

Rugged hill tribesmen, armed with flintlocks, quietly tend thousands of acres of beautiful poppy fields scorched out of the mountainsides. Mortars and machine guns blare away as police and soldiers clash with opium runners Old Chinese friends meet in the sleepy lanes of Chiang Mai and, over tea, seal bargains in opium worth millions of dollars.

Southeast Asian politics, massive corruption, Communist insurgencies and the world economy all play roles here. The result — Thai and Western drug experts say — is that under current conditions there is no way to stop or stem the narcotics flow.

It starts 3,000 feet or more up in the mountains or valleys of the Triangle, especially in Burma where the rich soil and proper climate yield what experts say are "poppy balls as big as your fists." Thai and Western narcotics sources here, in Bangkok and Rangoon tell the rest of what is know about the shadowy Triangle trade today.

Sticky sap oozes out of the opium bulbs Harvesters dry it and begin the 16 chemical steps needed to break down opium to pure heroin.

Mules do the heavy work, lugging opium-stuffed bags in caravans that wind through the rugged Burmese terrain to the Thai border. The opium may change hands half a dozen times during the trip, handled by minority tribes, Chinese middlemen and even Burmese Communists. Rival groups often lie in ambush as does the Burmese army which, even with its 10 U.S.-supplied helicopters, is hard pressed to pin down the stealthy traders among the hills and dense forests

Most of the opium refineries are located a maximum of three miles either side of the Thai-Burmese border. The labs are ramshackle affairs — a few thatched huts, oil drums, bicycle pumps and crude cooking utensils which more resemble implements for a witch's brew than tools for a sophisticated chemical operation.

One 'No' Vote Set On Public Radio

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

One Nebraska Educational Television Commission member said he will vote "no" Wednesday on a plan to create a statewide public radio system.

Steven B. Sample, University of Nebraska executive vice president, represents D. B. Varner in the commission seat now held permanently for the NU president. The NU Regents ordered Sample to vote against the public radio proposal, which recommends the Legislature authorize and fund the FM system.

In an interview Tuesday with The Lincoln Star, Sample said he agrees with Varner's analysis "that he holds his position on the NETV Commission solely by virtue of his position as NU president," that "his service on the commission is part of his official duties as president," and that he is answerable directly to the NU governing board.

"Therefore, when the Board of Regents takes a position for the University on an issue, he (Varner) is bound to support that position.

"As President Varner's designee to the commission, I feel bound to respect both the president's wishes and the regents' official position. Therefore, I plan to vote no on the issue of public radio," Sample said.

State Education Commissioner Anne Campbell may conceivably be subject to a situation similar to Sample's, because she holds the other permanent NETV Commission seat by virtue of her office.

Mrs. Campbell is directly responsible to the State Board of Education, but has said she's received no pressure on her public radio vote.

Two other commission members, Chadron State President Edwin Nelson, who represents the state colleges, and Doane College President Phillip Heckman of Crete, who represents private higher education, have cited no attempt to influence their votes.

Commission chairman Heckman said in a recent interview, "I just wouldn't vote (strictly) a private college opinion." The attorney general's advice indicated no commissioner must "go around and count noses" of his constituents to decide how to vote, he said.

Constituents "have the power to occupy the seat" figuratively, he said, "but it's never been established in representative government" that they own the person in the seat.

If NETV Commissioners have any voting priorities, Heckman said, their prime "allegiance" must be to all Nebraskans. Some of his own votes were "not good on the face of it for private higher education," rather "what's best for the whole."

Commission Vice Chairman June Popken of Brady has publicly questioned regents' authority over Sample's vote and has said western Nebraskans are "tired" of NU building projects in Lincoln and want outstate public services with educational advantages.

The commission is expected to take action on the question at 1:30 p.m. in the Nebraska Educational Telecommunications Center, 1800 N. 33rd, according to Secretary Jack McBride.

A nine-month commission subcommittee study concluded, in a report the full group accepted last month, that public radio should be pursued. It calls for a seven- to nine-station system of loosely affiliated stations. Linked with NETV Network facilities, they would be licensed to post-secondary education institutions and the commission.

The first station is proposed to transmit from Mead to serve the Lincoln-Omaha area. Total cost is an estimated $1.3 million for the overall system, with less than a third from state funds.

A grass-roots citizen group and other Nebraskans via letters and a statewide televised public hearing indicated overwhelming support for public radio. The Nebraska Broadcasters Association is firmly opposed.

Other commission business Wednesday includes the NETV legislative appropriations request for fiscal 1978-79.

In a development related to the public radio issues Tuesday, the Nebraska Association of Independent Colleges and Universities voted 9-1 against the proposed system. Heckman cast the only dissenting vote. He originally proposed public radio.

Association president Dale Lund, Midland College president, said the association opposes the system because it's low in priority among needs deserving attention and money, and because long-range costs could escalate.

Graduates Had Easier Job Hunt

By United Press International

The College Placement Council Tuesday said the number of job offers to 1975-76 graduates with a bachelor's degree was 11% above the number of offers to 1974-75 graduates.

Frank Hallgren, career planning director at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said the 1975-76 college recruiting trend started slow but ended ahead of last year's figures.

Hallgren said the council's report also showed an 8% increase over last year in offers for students with master's degrees and a 14% increase for those at the doctoral level.

However, he said, the number of offers reported this year for the bachelor's level remained 15% behind 1973-74, which is considered one of the better recruiting seasons since the boom of the sixties.

The council's report also showed job offers for women at the bachelor's level represented a 59% increase over last year's offers, while the men's volume increased only 4%.

But the report showed that women accounted for only 19% of the total number of bachelor's offers reported.

In addition, women master's fared better than men in percentage of volume increase. The women gained by 25% in job offers compared with 5% for men.

And women at the master's level accounted for 14% of the total master's offers this year, compared with 9% in 1973-74.

The council's survey is based on job offers — not acceptances — made to college students in selected disciplines and graduate programs during the normal recruiting period, September to June.

The survey compiles data from 159 colleges and universities throughout the United States.

Men Are Fined For Unlicensed Liquor Selling

A ten-day investigation culminated in the arrest and conviction of two residents of the Russian Inn for bootlegging Tuesday.

Ast. Police Chief Roger LaPage said two men were arrested Tuesday morning by vice and undercover officers of the Lincoln Police Department.

The men, Lorien Grier and Larry Spidell, allegedly sold wine to the officers on Sunday. The men plead guilty in Municipal Court to the charge of selling alcoholic liquor without a license.

Acting Municipal Court Judge Jack Lindner found the pair guilty and fined each $100 plus court costs, the maximum fine.

Grier, 42, and Spidell, 33, live at the Russian Inn, 7th and P St.

The officers contacted the men at the hotel and bought some wine from the men, LaPage said.

Merger Would Involve Central School

Louisville (UPI) — A tentative plan involving the merger of three eastern Nebraska school districts calls for the construction of a $3.75 million school-community education center.

Voters in the Louisville, Murdock and Weeping Water school districts will vote on the proposed merger this fall.

A plan prepared by a consultant proposes the new school district, if formed, select a central location near the intersection of Nebraska Highways 1 and 50 commonly referred to as "the Manley corner" as the site for the new school.

The consultant's plan said an estimated 80 acres of land would be the minimum needed for the site.

Democratic Committee Bankrolls Candidates

The Democratic State Central Committee this week confirmed five executive committee appointments and awarded $13,000 to four candidates to help bankroll their campaigns for national office.

Omaha Mayor Ed Zorinsky will get $4,000, according to Nebraska Democratic Party Chairman Dick White. Zorinsky is running against 2nd District Rep. John Y. McCollister of Omaha for the Senate seat being vacated by Roman Hruska.

Of the remaining $9,000 from state party coffers, White said the three Democratic congressional candidates will each get $3,000. They are outgoing State Sen. John Cavanaugh of Omaha, Pauline Anderson of Lincoln and James Hansen of Gering.

In the November general election, Cavanaugh faces Lee Terry of Omaha in the contest for McCollister's House seat. Mrs. Anderson is challenging 1st District Rep. Charles Thone of Lincoln. Hansen is trying to unseat freshman Rep. Virginia Smith of Chappell in the 3rd District.

"We also agreed to put on a fund-raising event, with which we hope to raise another $7,000, and if that's successful," White said, the kitty will be divided among the same four contenders. That would bring total contributions for each candidate to the $5,000 individual limit.

Asked why Democratic hopefuls in other state races weren't awarded campaign aid, White said, "Traditionally we fund only the congressional and Senate races." Exceptions in other years include races for governor and lietuenant governor, for example.

The central committee approved a budget of approximately $128,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1977. That total excludes the $7,000 fund-raiser goal, and compares to a $133,000 budget for the previous fiscal year.

White's appointments to two-year terms on the executive committee, approved by central committee members, include:

—Loren Belker of Lincoln, treasurer, a reappointment. Former party vice chairman, he headed both Gov. J. James Exon's campaigns and Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh's first national bid in Nebraska.

—Ruth Short of Omaha, secretary. A housewife and part-time teacher, she is past president of Nebraska Democratic Women's Clubs and is treasurer of that national group.

—Nick Garcia of Lincoln, member at large. A State Mexican-American Commission member, he is an American G.I. Forum national officer.

—Duane Haywood of Omaha, a labor union international representative, to a member-at-large post.

—Boniface McGuire of Omaha, also member at large. A businessman, he is on the Carter presidential campaign national finance committee.

Proposed Arts Building Given Bicentennial Fund Boost

Lincoln's grandest bicentennial project received a $10,000 boost Tuesday from the Nebraska American Revolution Bicentennial Commission (NARBC).

The project includes the restoration of Lincoln's old City Hall and federal building and the construction of a performing arts center between the two buildings. The project is located in the square block between Ninth and 10th and O and P Streets.

The $10,000 will support a feasibility study for the performing arts buiding and architecture work for the existing buildings.

So far, the project has raised $250,000 through donations from the Woods Charitable Fund and the Cooper Foundation, both local philanthropic organizations.

Estimates for the total project, including buying the federal building and constructing the performing center have ranged from $4 to $6 million.

"They're the only good examples of architecture from the 1800s," Mrs. Henderson said about the City Hall and federal building.

The financial state of the commission is on schedule with its funds, the committee said. The books showed $70,819.52 in the till as of Aug. 1. The funds include $39,000 for salaries and the rest for expenses.

The amount would be enough to take the commission through March to 1977 when the group dissolves.

They also decided to recommend that the Nebraska State Department of Roads place markers on 1977 road maps showing the rest areas along I-80 where the bicentennial sculptor projects are located.

Road signs had been suggested but the Department of Transportation vetoed the idea for any rest stops of federal insterstate highways.

The group also found that an audit into commission books found all financial activities in order. An official report is to be available for the Oct. 7 meeting.

Torches Said Cause Of Fire At Elevator

Hastings (AP) — Hastings Asst. Fire Chief Ed Spahn said Tuesday that torches used by a construction crew caused an explosion and fire that critically injured three persons Friday at the Central Soya grain elevator.

Central Soya planned to to resume operations Wednesday.

Construction workers Bobby Good, 39, and Clinton Edwards, 26, both of Sabetha, Kan., and Central Soya employe James Clark, 37, of Hastings, remained in critical condition Tuesday.

Spahn said he determined the cause of the blaze after interviewing Good, Edwards and others.

The livestock feed manufacturing firm was inspected by the state and federal authorities as well as company officials following the blaze.

A dollar estimate has not been released.

Claims Board Keeps Tight Rein On Money

The Nebraska Claims Board wrangled with numerous cases Tuesday but held a tight temporary rein on the state's money.

Two cases involved State Penal Complex inmates. Eugene Oziah was denied his $10,000 claim to compensate for what was described as his "loss of earning power and permanent damage to the right index finger resulting from delayed medical treatment."

He was out on parole, according to board records, when his finger was bitten. Surgery was performed but the finger won't bend properly.

Gary Goldenstein sought $10,000 claiming he was struck by a state van operated by a Penal Complex guard. The board agreed a settlement should be negotiated, or the matter taken care of through state insurance.

Roy Billings of 6316 Starling Circle held the state was liable for $1,542 because of damages to his car stolen by two juveniles who escaped from Kearney facilities. The claim was denied, the board deciding the state isn't responsible for their actions seven days after the escape.

Two other cases were tabled. In one, a Claims Board spokesman said, Howard Dager of Lincoln filed a $2,500 claim for damages to his car disassembled at Southeast Community College and never reassembled. The board ordered repair estimates and a determination whether the college is under state jurisdiction before proceeding to settle the matter.

The board tabled a $7,097 claim by the City of Lincoln for sewer and water assessments on farm property owned by the University of Nebraska Board of Regents.

Action was deferred until the board can determine if the regents plan to sell the property. If not, the board may delay the claim, because the state didn't request the improvements and thus wouldn't accrue any gains from the unused land.

Problems Flare Over Slowly Burning Airport Lawns

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

The grounds at Lincoln Municipal Airport, and members of the airport authority are doing a slow burn, together.

The burning comes from rainless days and a malfunctioning sprinkler system, which, according to executive director Rolland Harr, could be fixed "in two weeks with a serious effort."

Problems with the system have been attributed to poor installation, Harr said, noting that leaks have sprung up where the system has been recently repaired. The contractor, Rain King, has "promised numerous repair dates which haven't been satisfactory," he added.

The matter came to a head during a Tuesday meeting of the authority board when it was learned the City Parks and Recreation Department is terminating an agreement to take care of the grounds in return for free use of the Bowling Lake Recreation Center.

Tank Truck Used

Harr noted the city had been using a tank truck to water the extremely dry areas of grass, shrubs and trees affected because of sprinkler malfunctions.

"We've lost a few to the hot weather already," Harr added.

The board told maintenance personnel to board up the building which once housed the officer's club for the air base. Several nightclub and restaurant operations have been housed in the facility in recent years.

According to authority employe Dan Bockelmann, the building is in good repair but it would lend itself only to a specialized operation (i.e. restaurant or lounge).

On another hot issue, board member Don Geis recommended that the authority allow the Airport Limousine Service to cease operation. Geis chaired a special committee to study the feasibility of such service and said "We determined the airport is too close to downtown Lincoln to make such an operation profitable."

Not Willing

Geis noted the local cab companies weren't willing to take over such a service, but added that the Hilton Hotel has agreed to pay rental for space for its limousine to park in front of the terminal.

Limousine operators, who paid rent, had protested that other vehicles using the facility were doing so rent free.

Geis reported little progress with law enforcement authorities on the matter of issuing tickets to unauthorized vehicles parking in front of the terminal. "Police on security duty at the airport have refused to write tickets," Geis said.

In other action, the board decided to enter into the hangar rental business, a matter brought about by a decision to seek funding for the construction of new T hangars to house small aircraft.

Current hangar facilities, opeated by the fixed-base operators, Duncan and Lincoln Aviation, but owned by the authority, are at 100% occupancy, Harr said.

The board voted to have the authority construct new hangars, to lease them to pilots and to take the necessary measures to acquire existing hangars when the leases of the operators expire, or to negotiate with them for such take-over.

The board also authorized Harr to negotiate with Steve Cook and Associates for architectural services for a new crash-fire-rescue maintenance facility at the airport.

Dictionary Picks Election Winner

New York (UPI) — The managing editor of the Scribner-Bantam English Dictionary says he decided to "take a chance" and list Jimmy Carter as the 39th president of the United States in final page proofs.

In order to meet a January publication date, the proofs must go to press by Sept. 15, well before the nation's voters decide in November if Carter actually will become the next president.

"When I made the final changes on the dictionary, I decided to take a chance and put it in," said managing editor Walter Glanze.

If Carter should lose, "it's no major flaw from a major lexicological standpoint," he said.

Not Getting His Goat, Gets His Goat

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

Eric Dawson got so excited about preparing for Lancaster County's first dairy goat show that he headed for the fairgrounds without his goat.

It'll probably be a while before his buddies in the 4-H dairy goat club stop kidding him about that one.

The 10 boys and girls in the Kidding Around Club will show 14 goats in Wednesday morning's competition. While the judging might make for some individual disappointments, the club — the only one in the country — will take home all the honors.

Club President Mike Patterson, 13, got interested in the animals several years ago in Kansas when his dad began raising goats for their milk. Now the Pattersons have 14 goats on their five-acre spread in southwest Lincoln.

Mike's enthusiasm for goat raising rubbed off on some of his friends and soon a 4-H club took form under the leadership of Mrs. Ginger Rinkyvitch, who raises goats herself.

No, goats don't eat tin cans, insist the young owners who are anxious to dispel the myths circulating about the often-maligned animal. Nor is their milk blue. Instead, the naturally homogenized, rich-in-iron milk is easier to digest than the cow's counterpart and tastes no different, the owners say.

That the goats are friendly, none of the youngsters can deny.

"They'll just rub up against you and follow you around," says Mike.

He taught one of his kids to gently butt heads with him. But Mike laughs when he remembers how the goat, with bowed head, playfully pinned a toddler against the wall at his home. "I guess we taught her a bad habit," Mike's sister Susan adds.

But the friendly fellows sometimes get their owner's goat.

It was back in June at a show in Weeping Water that Susan's kid last misbehaved. During the showing, the animal took advantage of a momentarily loosened grip to bolt the ring, leaving Susan, the only one showing in the class, standing alone in the ring.

All the club members delight in telling how their pets play follow the leader, and king of the mountain — a competition among goats for top-spot on the rock pile.

"If you run they'll chase you," says Mike. "And if you snap your fingers they'll run up beside you," Eric adds. They'll also come if called by name, but then so will the rest of the herd.

Gregarious and affectionate, the animals react noisily to being left alone. "They're quiet until you walk away," Eric says. Mike figures goats get lonely, so it's better to have two together.

"But a new one in the pen and it's like a new kid on the block — they'll fight," adds Mike's dad, Bill Patterson.

Pleased with their dairy goat project, the Kidding Around Club members don't think they'll be alone in their interest for long. But until others catch on, they're happy to monopolize the market and create a few myths of their own.

Way May Be Cleared For Bryan Plans

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

A step taken Tuesday afternoon by the State Department of Health's Division of Hospital and Medical Facilities may make it possible for the immediate expansion plans of Bryan Memorial Hospital to proceed through the necessary review and approval procedures.

Initially, the division would not consider the hospital's plans until the City Council had granted a special-use permit for Bryan's proposed expansion and construction projects.

But, by waiving the usual pre-review requirement of a city-issued special-use permit for Bryan's planned surface parking lot and new physicians building, the division cleared the way for other area, county and city agencies to review the hospital plans.

The first review action will be taken by the Southeast Nebraska Health Systems Agency (HSA), which, according to Director Jane Ford, can only consider the hospital's proposal for immediate expansion and not its long-range plans.

As previously requested, the HSA will review the plans and submit a recommendation to the Lincoln City Council and the City-County Planning Commission, those at the meeting agreed.

Although the council and the commission also had requested an HSA recommendation on Bryan's long-range projects, Ford said, it was not within the HSA's authority to review and make recommendations on anything other than the hospital's immediate plans.

However, the HSA board could submit a report on the projected future needs for health care in the community, she said. This, in addition to an HSA recommendation on Bryan's immediate project, may provide a sufficient basis on which the council and planning commission can make a decision for the approval or disapproval of hospital plans.

E. J. Faulkner, president of the Bryan board of directors, said he and other Bryan officials were at the meeting to try to find out how to get the review procedure rolling.

"We feel our program can sustain itself on its merits," he said. "But we would like to know where to argue these merits."

He added that Bryan officials prepared the long-range plans because of requests by city and county representatives. But now that they have submitted their proposed long-range projects, "people are jumping down our necks. None of this brouhaha would have happened if we would have come up with a plan just for an office building," Faulkner said.

15 Italian Women Ask Abortions

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Fifteen more women of Seveso, the north Italian village struck by a poisonous cloud of chemicals, have applied for therapeutic abortions at a Milan clinic, doctors disclosed Tuesday.

A team of physicians, including a psychiatrist, will decide whether to approve the requests. Abortions are allowed in Italy under a constitutional court decree when continuing pregnancy would be detrimental to the health or psychological condition of the woman.

Health authorities agreed to therapeutic abortions for the women of Seveso after several doctors and scientists warned against possible fetus malformations as a result of dioxin pollution.

Three of the women had abortions in the Mangiagalli clinic Friday.

Hospital sources said six of the 15 new applicants have been hospitalized for more careful checks.

States Ask Vocational Program To Cut Costs

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Representatives of the governors of six states served by a vocational-educational program voted Tuesday to order a reduction in the cost of the program.

The representatives voted to direct the operators of the Mountain Plains vocation-education program to reduce the cost of the program to about $4.6 million-$4.7 million a year, said Wyoming's representative to the meeting.

State Planning Coordinator Dave Freudenthal said Mountain Plains Corp., which has a contract from the Old West Regional Commission to operate the program, had sought about $5.8 million per year to run the program.

Freudenthal said the project brings a total of 360 families a year to Glascow Air Force Base in Montana for a live-in program aimed at converting welfare families to self-sufficient taxpayers.

Sixty families from each of the state served by the program take part each year, he said.

States served by the program are Wyoming, Montana, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, and Idaho.

The recommendation for reducing the cost of the program came at a meeting here of the Old West Regional Commission. All the states involved except Idaho are members of the commission, and Idaho sends a representative to Tuesday's meeting.

He also said the statement ot policy from the representatives can be overruled by the governors of the six states involved.

Drugs Carted From Store

Burglars apparently carted off $1,200 worth of drugs in a wastebasket Tuesday from Van Dorn Pharmacy, 1725 Van Dorn, police said.

The incident resembled a break-in last Friday at Gilmour Danielson Drugs in which an estimated $2,500 worth of drugs were stolen, using a wastebasket.

In the Van Dorn burglary, the thieves apparently entered by breaking the front door glass. Also missing were two ornamental glass jars from the pharmacy counter.

Democratic Committee Bankrolls Candidates

The Democratic State Central Committee this week confirmed five executive committee appointments and awarded $13,000 to four candidates to help bankroll their campaigns for national office.

Omaha Mayor Ed Zorinsky will get $5,000, according to Nebraska Democratic Party Chairman Dick White. Zorinsky is running against 2nd District Rep. John Y. McCollister of Omaha for the Senate seat being vacated by Roman Hruska.

Of the remaining $9,000 from state party coffers, White said the three Democratic congressional candidates will each get $3,000. They are outgoing State Sen. John Cavanaugh of Omaha, Pauline Anderson of Lincoln and James Hansen of Gering.

In the November general election, Cavanaugh faces Lee Terry of Omaha in the contest for McCollister's House seat. Mrs. Anderson is challenging 1st District Rep. Charles Thone of Lincoln. Hansen is trying to unseat freshman Rep. Virginia Smith of Chappell in the 3rd District.

"We also agreed to put on a fund-raising event, with which we hope to raise another $7,000, and if that's successful," White said, the kitty will be divided among the same four contenders. That would bring total contributions for each candidate to the $5,000 individual limit.

Asked why Democratic hopefuls in other state races weren't awarded campaign aid, White said, "Traditionally we fund only the congressional and Senate races." Exceptions in other years include races for governor and lieutenant governor, for example.

The central committee approved a budget of approximately $128,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1977. That total excludes the $7,000 fund-raiser goal, and compares to a $133,000 budget for the previous fiscal year.

White's appointments to two-year terms on the executive committee, approved by central committee members, include:

—Loren Beiker of Lincoln, treasurer, a reappointment. Former party vice chairman, he headed both Gov. J. James Exon's campaigns and Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh's first national bid in Nebraska.

—Ruth Short of Omaha, secretary. A housewife and part-time teacher, she is past president of Nebraska Democratic Women's Clubs and is treasurer of that national group.

—Nick Garcia of Lincoln, member at large. A State Mexican-American Commission member, he is an American G.I. Forum national officer.

—Duane Haywood of Omaha, a labor union international representative, to a member-at-large post.

—Boniface McGuire of Omaha, also member at large. A businessman, he is on the Carter presidential campaign national finance committee.

Proposed Arts Building Given Bicentennial Fund Boost

Lincoln's grandest bicentennial project received a $10,000 boost Tuesday from the Nebraska American Revolution Bicentennial Commission (NARBC).

The project includes the restoration of Lincoln's old City Hall and federal building and the construction of a performing arts center between the two buildings. The project is located in the square block between Ninth and 10th and O and P Streets.

The $10,000 will support a feasibility study for the performing arts buiding and architecture work for the existing buildings.

So far, the project has raised $250,000 through donations from the Woods Charitable Fund and the Cooper Foundation, both local philanthropic organizations.

Estimates for the total project, including buying the federal building and constructing the performing center have ranged from $4 to $6 million.

"They're the only good examples of architecture from the 1800s," Mrs. Henderson said about the City Hall and federal building.

The financial state of the commission is on schedule with its funds, the committee said. The books showed $70,819.52 in the till as of Aug. 1. The funds include $39,000 for salaries and the rest for expenses.

The amount would be enough to take the commission through March to 1977 when the group dissolves.

They also decided to recommend that the Nebraska State Department of Roads place markers on 1977 road maps showing the rest areas along I-80 where the bicentennial sculptor projects are located.

Road signs had been suggested but the Department of Transportation vetoed the idea for any rest stops of federal insterstate highways

The group also found that an audit into commission books found all financial activities in order. An official report is to be available for the Oct. 7 meeting.

Torches Said Cause Of Fire At Elevator

Hastings (AP) — Hastings Asst. Fire Chief Ed Spahn said Tuesday that torches used by a construction crew caused an explosion and fire that critically injured three persons Friday at the Central Soya grain elevator.

Central Soya planned to to resume operations Wednesday.

Construction workers Bobby Good, 39, and Clinton Edwards, 26, both of Sabetha, Kan., and Central Soya employe James Clark, 37, of Hastings, remained in critical condition Tuesday.

Spahn said he determined the cause of the blaze after interviewing Good, Edwards and others.

The livestock feed manufacturing firm was inspected by the state and federal authorities as well as company officials following the blaze.

A dollar estimate has not been released.

Claims Board Keeps Tight Rein On Money

The Nebraska Claims Board wrangled with numerous cases Tuesday but held a tight temporary rein on the state's money.

Two cases involved State Penal Complex inmates. Eugene Oziah was denied his $10,000 claim to compensate for what was described as his "loss of earning power and permanent damage to the right index finger resulting from delayed medical treatment."

He was out on parole, according to board records, when his finger was bitten. Surgery was performed but the finger won't bend properly.

Gary Goldenstein sought $10,000 claiming he was struck by a state van operated by a Penal Complex guard. The board agreed a settlement should be negotiated, or the matter taken care of through state insurance.

Roy Billings of 6316 Starling Circle held the state was liable for $1,542 because of damages to his car stolen by two juveniles who escaped from Kearney facilities. The claim was denied, the board deciding the state isn't responsible for their actions seven days after the escape.

Two other cases were tabled. In one, a Claims Board spokesman said, Howard Dager of Lincoln filed a $2,500 claim for damages to his car disassembled at Southeast Community College and never reassembled. The board ordered repair estimates and a determination whether the college is under state jurisdiction before proceeding to settle the matter.

The board tabled a $7,097 claim by the City of Lincoln for sewer and water assessments on farm property owned by the University of Nebraska Board of Regents.

Action was deferred until the board can determine if the regents plan to sell the property. If not, the board may delay the claim because the state didn't request the improvements and thus wouldn't accrue any gains from the unused land.

Maker Of Jail Equipment Would Like Less Demand

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Hull Youngblood's company makes a product which taxpayers buy and users often try to destroy.

And Youngblood says he wouldn't mind going out of business if there were no demand for his product.

Youngblood's Southern Steel Co., is the world's largest manufacturer of jail and prison equipment. The company makes jail doors, locking devices, bunks, chairs, tables, desks, book cases, windows and the other hardware that makes a jail a jail.

For the most part, it's made from heavy steel because, as Youngblood said, "Ultimately the user of the product will try to destroy it from the very moment he gets his hands on it."

Youngblood's grandfather started the company in 1897 and the firm has serviced 5,000 institutions in 44 states, Canada and overseas.

Southern Steel's products have fenced in such notables as Al Capone, Pretty Boy Floyd, John Dillinger and Watergate informant John Dean III, Youngblood said.

Youngblood himself has become involved in the whole scheme of prisons and prisoners. The company has "quite a few ex-offenders" on its payroll, he said, adding that these ex-offenders offer valuable input to the company.

"Rehabilitation takes place outside the institution when the man can get a job," Youngblood said. "He can't go straight without a job."

Youngblood said prison overcrowding is the most severe detention problem because few new jails have been built in the past 50 years.

"When you take people out of circulation, you must do it with the right equipment and that happens to be a jail that is a humane institution and will detain the person and keep him out of traffic," Youngblood said.

"You are not going to deter crime by having an institution built for 200 people with 600 in it. If you want to deter crime, you hold them under humane conditions — not Hilton Hotel conditions — but humane conditions."

Youngblood's company is paying more attention to the aesthetic quality of jail equipment these days. Doors, bars and walls sport bright colors rather than battleship gray.

New window designs provide security and at the same time look much like a standard window. The bars are hidden in the construction. Cell doors are operated by quiet motors, which Youngblood believes makes a new jail sound less like the old "slammer."

A product called the multipod goes into a jail cell and contains a bunk, desk, toilet facilities, a wall, a light and radio speaker. A cell equipped with the all steel multipod looks more like a college dormitory room.

But Youngblood said he wouldn't be upset if crime were halted and no more jails were needed.

"Nothing would gratify me more," he said. "I could flourish very well in an honest world."

Real Havana Cigars Hoarded, Cherished

CHICAGO (AP) — Real Havana cigars aging gracefully in private cedar lockers like good wine complete the list for men who have everything.

Perhaps not more than a million of these hoarded stogies are left in the United States, stockpiled by far-sighted connoisseurs when import was cut off by the embargo against Cuba in 1962.

"When I heard the embargo was coming, I ordered two firms to buy up all the Havana cigars they could find in the U.S., wholesale or retail," said W. Clement Stone, insurance magnate. "I got in excess of 100,000 of them. I always enjoyed a good Havana. I smoke an average of 10 a day and have four or five boxes handy of different sizes and varieties."

Stone said he keeps most of his Havanas in special, fireproof vaults in his office.

"There's nothing like a good Havana," he said. "I average giving away about 50 a week. My supply probably is down to 10,000."

Stanley Korshak, a Chicago clothier, has 1,000 pre-Castro Havana cigars aging in a locker in the humidor room of Dunhill's, worldwide tobacconists.

"I no longer smoke," said Korshak. "The cigars have become precious gifts, usually reserved for friends who reach their 75th birthday."

Con Suozzi, manager of the Chicago Dunhill store, says 4,000 to 5,000 Havana cigars are hoarded by Chicagoans in the humidor room where the temperature is a steady 65 and the humidity 68 per cent. Richard Dunhill, who heads the firm, estimates that 400,000 may be stored in 500 lockers in the New York shop.

"In all of our stores there probably are 600,000 of them." said Suozzi. "Some of our customers who bought our last stock of Havanas in 1962 just like to go to their lockers, pull out a box of them and sniff them. Havanas have a subtle different smell as well as taste to the connoisseur."

Problems Flare Over Slowly Burning Airport Lawns

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

The grounds at Lincoln Municipal Airport, and members of the airport authority are doing a slow burn, together.

The burning comes from rainless days and a malfunctioning sprinkler system, which, according to executive director Rolland Harr, could be fixed "in two weeks with a serious effort."

Problems with the system have been attributed to poor installation, Harr said, noting that leaks have sprung up where the system has been recently repaired. The contractor, Rain King, has "promised numerous repair dates which haven't been satisfactory," he added.

The matter came to a head during a Tuesday meeting of the authority board when it was learned the City Parks and Recreation Department is terminating an agreement to take care of the grounds in return for free use of the Bowling Lake Recreation Center.

Tank Truck Used

Harr noted the city had been using a tank truck to water the extremely dry areas of grass, shrubs and trees affected because of sprinkler malfunctions.

"We've lost a few to the hot weather already," Harr added.

The board told maintenance personnel to board up the building which once housed the officer's club for the air base. Several nightclub and restaurant operations have been housed in the facility in recent years.

According to authority employe Dan Bockelmann, the building is in good repair but it would lend itself only to a specialized operation (i.e. restaurant or lounge).

On another hot issue, board member Don Geis recommended that the authority allow the Airport Limousine Service to cease operation. Geis chaired a special committee to study the feasibility of such service and said "We determined the airport is too close to downtown Lincoln to make such an operation profitable."

Not Willing

Geis noted the local cab companies weren't willing to take over such a service, but added that the Hilton Hotel has agreed to pay rental for space for its limousine to park in front of the terminal.

Limousine operators, who paid rent, had protested that other vehicles using the facility were doing so rent free.

Geis reported little progress with law enforcement authorities on the matter of issuing tickets to unauthorized vehicles parking in front of the terminal. "Police on security duty at the airport have refused to write tickets," Geis said.

In other action, the board decided to enter into the hangar rental business, a matter brought about by a decision to seek funding for the construction of new T hangars to house small aircraft.

Current hangar facilities, opeated by the fixed-base operators, Duncan and Lincoln Aviation, but owned by the authority, are at 100% occupancy, Harr said.

The board voted to have the authority construct new hangars, to lease them to pilots and to take the necessary measures to acquire existing hangars when the leases of the operators expire, or to negotiate with them for such take-over.

The board also authorized Harr to negotiate with Steve Cook and Associates for architectural services for a new crash-fire-rescue maintenance facility at the airport.

Dictionary Picks Election Winner

New York (UPI) — The managing editor of the Scribner-Bantam English Dictionary says he decided to "take a chance" and list Jimmy Carter as the 39th president of the United States in final page proofs.

In order to meet a January publication date, the proofs must go to press by Sept. 15, well before the nation's voters decide in November if Carter actually will become the next president.

"When I made the final changes on the dictionary, I decided to take a chance and put it in," said managing editor Walter Glanze.

If Carter should lose, "it's no major flaw from a major lexicological standpoint," he said.

Not Getting His Goat, Gets His Goat

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

Eric Dawson got so excited about preparing for Lancaster County's first dairy goat show that he headed for the fairgrounds without his goat

It'll probably be a while before his buddies in the 4-H dairy goat club stop kidding him about that one

The 10 boys and girls in the Kidding Around Club will show 14 goats in Wednesday morning's competition While the judging might make for some individual disappointments, the club — the only one in the country — will take home all the honors

Club President Mike Patterson, 13, got interested in the animals several years ago in Kansas when his dad began raising goats for their milk Now the Pattersons have 14 goats on their five-acre spread in southwest Lincoln

Mike's enthusiasm for goat raising rubbed off on some of his friends and soon a 4-H club took form under the leadership of Mrs Ginger Rinkyvitch, who raises goats herself

No, goats don't eat tin cans, insist the young owners who are anxious to dispel the myths circulating about the often-maligned animal Nor is their milk blue Instead, the naturally homogenized, rich-in-iron milk is easier to digest than the cow's counterpart and tastes no different, the owners say

That the goats are friendly, none of the youngsters can deny

'They'll just rub up against you and follow you around," says Mike

He taught one of his kids to gently butt heads with him But Mike laughs when he remembers how the goat, with bowed head, playfully pinned a toddler against the wall at his home 'I guess we taught her a bad habit," Mike's sister Susan adds

But the friendly fellows sometimes get their owner's goat

It was back in June at a show in Weeping Water that Susan's kid last misbehaved During the showing, the animal took advantage of a momentarily loosened grip to bolt the ring, leaving Susan, the only one showing in the class, standing alone in the ring

All the club members delight in telling how their pets play follow the leader, and king of the mountain — a competition among goats for top-spot on the rock pile

"If you run they'll chase you," says Mike 'And if you snap your fingers they'll run up beside you," Eric adds They'll also come if called by name, but then so will the rest of the herd

Gregarious and affectionate, the animals react noisily to being left alone "They're quiet until you walk away," Eric says Mike figures goats get lonely, so it's better to have two together

But a new one in the pen and it's like a new kid on the block — they'll fight," adds Mike's dad, Bill Patterson

Pleased with their dairy goat project, the Kidding Around Club members don't think they'll be alone in their interest for long But until others catch on, they're happy to monopolize the market and create a few myths of their own

Best Weed Control Herbicides Rated

Clay Center — Using standard herbicides and incorporating them into the soil when chilly appear to offer the best form of weed control, according to Dr. Fred Roeth, University of Nebraska Extension weed specialist.

Roeth led one of four tours during the University of Nebraska South Central Station's fifth annual field day near here Tuesday.

A record crowd of more than 300 men and 125 women attended separate programs during the day.

Roeth told farmers that combining Aatrex with Lasso, Prowl or Dual herbicides resulted in comparable weed control in corn during tests at the station. He said each of the three mixtures was more than 96% efficient.

In sorghum, he said, there was what he called a wider range in weed control, but standards herbicides again performed well.

Overall, Roeth said, combinations of Prowl and Aatrex, "which looks very good," Ramrod and Atrazine, and Bladex used alone were more than 90% efficient.

Roeth said control of soybean weeds was enhanced by using Sencor, which especially aids broadleaf control.

As was the case in sorghum, Lorox, a new herbicide, failed to achieve performance rates as high as standard herbicides, he said.

Roeth told those on the tour that incorporation of the herbicide "gets the chemical into the soil right away, when weeds are first getting started. If we can get four to six weeks of control out of the herbicide, we consider it has done a good job."

Grand Jury Indicts Grain Firm Officials

New Orleans (UPI) — A federal grand jury indicted seven officials of a Tennessee firm Tuesday on charges they cheated foreign customers of more than 800,000 bushels of grain during the past five years.

The indictments were the latest in a two-year investigation into the grain export industry along the lower Mississippi River. The investigation has led to 56 convictions.

All seven of the latest defendants were past or present employes of Cook Industries, Inc., a Memphis-based grain exporter. Cook was fined $370,000 last May after pleading no contest to grain-fraud charges.

Those indicted Tuesday were Phillip H. McCaul, a Cook vice president until March 1972; Michael E. Ragen, a Cook vice president until November 1974; Raymond M. Fretz, a Cook vice president since Aug. 1, 1972; Melvin L. Hibbets, a Cook vice president; Jack A. Coleman, a former superintendent at Cook's Bayside grain elevator in Reserve, La.; Rodney C. Waguespack, Bayside barge traffic manager; and Billy Hall, former assistant superintendent at Bayside.

The indictments alleged grain shipments were short-weighed from mid 1970 to 1975 by rigging scales.

Feathered Racers Lost Somewhere Over N.Y.C.

New York (UPI) — Ten top racing pigeons left the Empire State Building in a promotional stunt Tuesday to show it was just a short hop to the new Meadowlands Sports Complex in East Rutherford, N.J.

They got lost.

"The pigeon race was expected to be completed in about 10 minutes, or roughly half the time it will take motorists to reach" the new $300 million sports complex, a statement from the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority said.

"I can't understand it," said one publicity agent waiting impatiently for word of the pigeons' arrival.

"Good thing they're not heading for Central Park at night, they'd get mugged," replied one of the 30 or so reporters covering the event.

Fire Damages House Lean-To

A lean-to section of a duplex at 903 G St. received considerable damage in a fire Tuesday morning which began in a trash pile.

Barrels of trash and other materials stacked behind the house caught fire, and the blaze spread to the house roof, firemen said.

The house belongs to Crosby Napue, of 5011 Woodland.

Way May Be Cleared For Bryan Plans

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

A step taken Tuesday afternoon by the State Department of Health's Division of Hospital and Medical Facilities may make it possible for the immediate expansion plans of Bryan Memorial Hospital to proceed through the necessary review and approval procedures.

Initially, the division would not consider the hospital's plans until the City Council had granted a special-use permit for Bryan's proposed expansion and construction projects

But, by waiving the usual pre-review requirement of a city-issued special-use permit for Bryan's planned surface parking lot and new physicians building, the division cleared the way for other area, county and city agencies to review the hospital plans.

The first review action will be taken by the Southeast Nebraska Health Systems Agency (HSA), which, according to Director Jane Ford, can only consider the hospital's proposal for immediate expansion and not its long-range plans.

As previously requested, the HSA will review the plans and submit a recommendation to the Lincoln City Council and the City-County Planning Commission, those at the meeting agreed.

Although the council and the commission also had requested an HSA recommendation on Bryan's long-range projects, Ford said, it was not within the HSA's authority to review and make recommendations on anything other than the hospital's immediate plans.

However, the HSA board could submit a report on the projected future needs for health care in the community, she said. This, in addition to an HSA recommendation on Bryan's immediate project, may provide a sufficient basis on which the council and planning commission can make a decision for the approval or disapproval of hospital plans.

E. J. Faulkner, president of the Bryan board of directors, said he and other Bryan officials were at the meeting to try to find out how to get the review procedure rolling.

"We feel our program can sustain itself on its merits," he said. "But we would like to know where to argue these merits."

He added that Bryan officials prepared the long-range plans because of requests by city and county representatives. But now that they have submitted their proposed long-range projects, "people are jumping down our necks. None of this brouhaha would have happened if we would have come up with a plan just for an office building," Faulkner said.

15 Italian Women Ask Abortions

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Fifteen more women of Seveso, the north Italian village struck by a poisonous cloud of chemicals, have applied for therapeutic abortions at a Milan clinic, doctors disclosed Tuesday.

A team of physicians, including a psychiatrist, will decide whether to approve the requests. Abortions are allowed in Italy under a constitutional court decree when continuing pregnancy would be detrimental to the health or psychological condition of the woman.

Health authorities agreed to therapeutic abortions for the women of Seveso after several doctors and scientists warned against possible fetus malformations as a result of dioxin pollution.

Three of the women had abortions in the Mangiagalli clinic Friday.

Hospital sources said six of the 15 new applicants have been hospitalized for more careful checks.

States Ask Vocational Program To Cut Costs

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Representatives of the governors of six states served by a vocational-educational program voted Tuesday to order a reduction in the cost of the program

The representatives voted to direct the operators of the Mountain Plains vocation-education program to reduce the cost of the program to about $4.6 million-$4 7 million a year, said Wyoming's representative to the meeting.

State Planning Coordinator Dave Freudenthal said Mountain Plains Corp., which has a contract from the Old West Regional Commission to operate the program, had sought about $5.8 million per year to run the program.

Freudenthal said the project brings a total of 360 families a year to Glascow Air Force Base in Montana for a live-in program aimed at converting welfare families to self-sufficient taxpayers.

Sixty families from each of the state served by the program take part each year, he said.

States served by the program are Wyoming, Montana, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, and Idaho.

The recommendation for reducing the cost of the program came at a meeting here of the Old West Regional Commission. All the states involved except Idaho are members of the commission, and Idaho sends a representative to Tuesday's meeting.

He also said the statement of policy from the representatives can be overruled by the governors of the six states involved.

Drugs Carted From Store

Burglars apparently carted off $1,200 worth of drugs in a wastebasket Tuesday from Van Dorn Pharmacy, 1725 Van Dorn, police said.

The incident resembled a break-in last Friday at Gilmour Danielson Drugs in which an estimated $2,500 worth of drugs were stolen, using a wastebasket.

In the Van Dorn burglary, the thieves apparently entered by breaking the front door glass. Also missing were two ornamental glass jars from the pharmacy counter.

Public Interest Groups Attempt To Influence Government Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The giant industries that provide free travel, recreation and perhaps sex to lobby for their causes capture most of the headlines, but there are hundreds of smaller public interest groups also trying to influence policy.

Representatives of these organizations say they depend on the average citizen, sometimes poor and sometimes wealthy, to support their causes which range across the political spectrum.

Their sworn financial statements, filed with various state agencies, with the clerk of the House and the secretary of the Senate and the Federal Elections Commission, tend to bear this out.

"We're having an effect on public policy," says President David Cohen of Common Cause, "so we feel there should be full accounting, with no ifs, ands or buts."

Cohen said in an interview that anyone can drop into Common Cause's headquarters in downtown Washington and look at everything: the budget, list of members, other contributors, copies of official financial reports, expenditures and the like.

He cites with pride an in-house study which showed that three-fourths of the staff output last year was contributed by volunteers.

Common Cause, which describes itself as a citizens' lobby, is dedicated to basic reforms. It claims a measure of credit for changes in campaigning financing, the opening up of many House committee meetings, and elimination of the strict seniority system in Congress.

It initiated the process which resulted in the recent House reprimand of Rep. Robert L.F. Sikes, D-Fla., for conflict of interest.

It is one of the largest of the public interest groups, with an annual budget of about $5.5 million. F. Robert Meier, secretary-treasurer, says the current membership is about 255,000, down from a peak of 325,000 at the height of Watergate.

Dues are $15 a year, and Meier says dues and contributions of less than $100 account for 94 per cent of the group's income. Common Cause does not accept corporate or union support of more than $100, but Meier says many such groups pay that amount in order to receive its literature.

There is a large constituency for the AFL-CIO's COPE — Committee for Political Action — with its access to a claimed 14 million union members.

A spokesman said COPE has an administrative budget of about $1 million yearly, contributed from union dues by its affiliates, and that in addition the union contributes from $1 million to $1.2 million to candidates.

COPE traditionally does not contribute to presidential campaigns, but the spokesman said it usually gives donations to 330 to 350 candidates for the House and 25 to 30 for the Senate. There normally are about 34 Senate races every two years.

COPE's report to the Federal Elections Commission through June 30 shows receipts of $1,529,870 and expenditures of $689,122, with cash on hand at the end of the month of $840,747.

During the month of June, it reported, it made contributions aggregating $82,800 to 28 candidates for the House and Senate. Some were for $1,000, some for $5,000, most for around $2,500.

Two groups which attract considerable media attention because they rate members of Congress on their voting records are ACA and ADA — Americans for Constitutional Action and Americans for Democratic Action.

As far as it is possible to attach labels, ACA is conservative and ADA liberal. A member of Congress who scores 6 out of a possible 100 on the ACA index may rate 94 with ADA, and vice versa.

Chairman Charlene Baker of Americans for Constitutional Action says her group's budget is about $100,000 a year, and that it has a membership of around 5,000 which has remained fairly stable.

There are no fixed dues, but anyone who contributes $10 or more a year receives the group's literature, including a newsletter and the ACA Index listing members of Congress.

Miss Baker says her organization helps candidates of its choice by handling mailings and by fund-raising receptions at which guests are charged $100.

In 1974, she said, ACA was responsible for raising $455,000 which went directly to candidates.

Americans for Democratic Action says it wants to elect candidates in tune with its political philosophies, although not through direct contributions. The election help comes from lobbying and education efforts.

"We are a political organization; there's no doubt of that," said a spokeswoman. She said the group's largest expenditure is for publications, and that with mounting costs the task of attracting non-tax exempt contributions to supplement dues income is marked "by great agony."

ADA has an annual budget of about $350,000. Dues are levied on something called a unit of membership, which may be one person or a couple, usually at $20 a year, although some local chapters may charge different fees.

Like Common Cause, an organization with similar aims but a somewhat different approach, ADA saw its membership climb somewhat during the Vietnam war and Watergate, the spokeswoman said. Membership now has pretty well stabilized, she said.

The National Committee for an Effective Congress, with headquarters in New York City, is a direct political action committee which supports candidates of its choice — mostly progressive, a spokeswoman said.

It has no dues, depending entirely on contributions which she estimated average $17 to $18 per contributor. The committee's report to the Federal Elections Commission as of June 30 listed receipts for the year, plus cash on hand, at $493,502, and its expenditures at $386,201.

During June, it reported receiving $28,507 from 55 contributors and about $20,000 from fund-raising dinners. Many of its donations were listed as political research projects for candidates, most of them costing no more than $20 to $25.

Liberty Lobby claims to be the oldest of such groups still active and, says Treasurer Willis Carter, "the most broadly based — I hate to use the word conservative — organization."

Liberty Lobby claims 25,000 members who pay $16 a year, as well as 100,000 others who subscribe to its newsletter. It also distributes free to stations a radio program which Carter says is heard 300 times a day, five days a week. It also has income from contributions and the sale of books.

Maker Of Jail Equipment Would Like Less Demand

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Hull Youngblood's company makes a product which taxpayers buy and users often try to destroy.

And Youngblood says he wouldn't mind going out of business if there were no demand for his product.

Youngblood's Southern Steel Co., is the world's largest manufacturer of jail and prison equipment. The company makes jail doors, locking devices, bunks, chairs, tables, desks, book cases, windows and the other hardware that makes a jail a jail.

For the most part, it's made from heavy steel because, as Youngblood said, "Ultimately the user of the product will try to destroy it from the very moment he gets his hands on it."

Youngblood's grandfather started the company in 1897 and the firm has serviced 5,000 institutions in 44 states, Canada and overseas.

Southern Steel's products have fenced in such notables as Al Capone, Pretty Boy Floyd, John Dillinger and Watergate informant John Dean III, Youngblood said.

Youngblood himself has become involved in the whole scheme of prisons and prisoners. The company has "quite a few ex-offenders" on its payroll, he said, adding that these ex-offenders offer valuable input to the company.

"Rehabilitation takes place outside the institution when the man can get a job," Youngblood said. "He can't go straight without a job."

Youngblood said prison overcrowding is the most severe detention problem because few new jails have been built in the past 50 years.

"When you take people out of circulation, you must do it with the right equipment and that happens to be a jail that is a humane institution and will detain the person and keep him out of traffic," Youngblood said.

"You are not going to deter crime by having an institution built for 200 people with 600 in it. If you want to deter crime, you hold them under humane conditions — not Hilton Hotel conditions — but humane conditions."

Youngblood's company is paying more attention to the aesthetic quality of jail equipment these days. Doors, bars and walls sport bright colors rather than battleship gray.

New window designs provide security and at the same time look much like a standard window. The bars are hidden in the construction. Cell doors are operated by quiet motors, which Youngblood believes makes a new jail sound less like the old "slammer."

A product called the multipod goes into a jail cell and contains a bunk, desk, toilet facilities, a wall, a light and radio speaker. A cell equipped with the all steel multipod looks more like a college dormitory room.

But Youngblood said he wouldn't be upset if crime were halted and no more jails were needed.

"Nothing would gratify me more," he said. "I could flourish very well in an honest world."

Real Havana Cigars Hoarded, Cherished

CHICAGO (AP) — Real Havana cigars aging gracefully in private cedar lockers like good wine complete the list for men who have everything.

Perhaps not more than a million of these hoarded stogies are left in the United States, stockpiled by far-sighted connoisseurs when import was cut off by the embargo against Cuba in 1962.

"When I heard the embargo was coming, I ordered two firms to buy up all the Havana cigars they could find in the U.S., wholesale or retail," said W. Clement Stone, insurance magnate. "I got in excess of 100,000 of them. I always enjoyed a good Havana. I smoke an average of 10 a day and have four or five boxes handy of different sizes and varieties."

Stone said he keeps most of his Havanas in special, fireproof vaults in his office.

"There's nothing like a good Havana," he said. "I average giving away about 50 a week. My supply probably is down to 10,000."

Stanley Korshak, a Chicago clothier, has 1,000 pre-Castro Havana cigars aging in a locker in the humidor room of Dunhill's, worldwide tobacconists.

"I no longer smoke," said Korshak. "The cigars have become precious gifts, usually reserved for friends who reach their 75th birthday."

Con Suozzi, manager of the Chicago Dunhill store, says 4,000 to 5,000 Havana cigars are hoarded by Chicagoans in the humidor room where the temperature is a steady 65 and the humidity 68 per cent. Richard Dunhill, who heads the firm, estimates that 400,000 may be stored in 500 lockers in the New York shop.

"In all of our stores there probably are 600,000 of them," said Suozzi. "Some of our customers who bought our last stock of Havanas in 1962 just like to go to their lockers, pull out a box of them and sniff them. Havanas have a subtle different smell as well as taste to the connoisseur."

Hobby Cards Lucrative Business

GEORGETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Bruce Yeko started collecting hobby cards when he was eight years old. Today, Yeko is 36 and not only is he still collecting the cards, he is making his living by selling them.

Yeko claims he has the largest collection of hobby cards in the country — 20 million of them. They spill over his eight-room house — on the pool table, in the linen closet, behind the door.

A former accountant, Yeko sells the cards of baseball players, football players and a mulitude of others to mail-order customers. He says that in his best year he sold more than one million cards.

Yeko declines to say exactly how much he makes from his cards. He says only he made more than $20,000 last year and expects to make more than $20,000 this year.

As new sets of baseball cards are issued by such companies as Topps for sale in retail stores, Yeko buys them in cases of 24 boxes of 500 cards each from the company. Each case costs him about $44, he says.

Some of his most expensive items are Goudey baseball cards issued in 1933 and 1934 and selling for $4 each. Other baseball cards which cost a penny each in the 1950's and 1960's are listed in Yeko's catalog for 75 cents apiece.

Other items in his catalog include cards of football, basketball and hockey players, Batman, Soupy Sales, The Three Stooges and Elvis Presley. It also lists cards of The Flying Nun and Casper The Friendly Ghost at 10 cents apiece.

Yeko says his wife Doris is "very realistic" about the mess that comes with the business. "She's in favor of anything that's lucrative."

Yeko himself says: "I'm happy as long as I can get to things, as long as you have a path to get to things."

Yeko, who also sells records by mail, has been selling cards since he was 16 and has been doing it full-time for 14 years.

He began collecting cards at the age of 8 in his home town of Milwaukee. "There was something magical about the way the cards looked," he recalls. His mother took a more down-to-earth approach. She asked him "what are you throwing away our money for," he says.

When he was 16, Yeko and a friend began selling cards to a dealer in New York whose collection Yeko eventually bought. The friend's interest waned, leaving Yeko with his own business.

Today, he says, enthusiasm for the cards is concentrated in the East, Midwest and California. People in areas which have no major league sports teams tend to have little interest, he adds.

Yeko says many customers are interested in the cards as an investment. Others, he says, are taken with their attractiveness, as he was.

"I just liked the look of the cards. I can remember having the cards in my school desk and if things were particularly dull I'd look at them," he says.

CARDS . . . clutter Yeko's eight-room house.

Jayhawks In Pads

Coach Bud Moore's Kansas Jayhawks got the jump on the rest of the Big Eight Conference football teams when they opened practice last Thursday. After three days in shorts, the pads went on Monday.

The early start came about because Kansas opens the season Sept. 4 against Oregon State in Corvallis, Ore., in a 6 p.m. (Pacific time) game. That's 8 p.m., Lincoln time. The rest of the league teams don't play until Sept. 11.

Kansas State began its search for a quarterback Monday. Opening workouts Thursday, in addition to Nebraska, will be Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and Missouri. Colorado will begin Friday while Iowa State waits until next Monday.

The "big games" for Big Eight schools on the first full weekend will be nighttime contests on the road. Nebraska goes to Louisiana State while Missouri begins it suicide preconference card against Southern California in Los Angeles. Colorado also will be under the lights at Texas Tech.

Oklahoma opens defense of its national championship, trying for three in a row, by playing Vanderbilt at Nashville. The Commodores went 7-4 overall last season.

Other first games include Drake at Iowa State, Brigham Young at Kansas State, Tulsa at Oklahoma State and Washington State at Kansas. All will be day games.

Depth Critical At KU

The final 1975 depth chart at Kansas showed only three players who wouldn't be back this season, but the situation has changed for various reasons, leaving Moore with what he says is "a critical situation — we don't have any."

Kansas has lost three veterans, all listed on the second unit, because of injuries. They are Dave Hentges, an offensive tackle who has quit football because of recurring knee problems; Eric Franklin, cornerback who is recuperating from a knee injury suffered in a pickup basketball game last spring; and Lloyd Sobek, tight end who suffered back injuries in an automobile accident this summer.

Some of the other backup people last year have been switched to other positions in efforts to bolster them. Included are Greg Woods and Mike Wellman, currently ranked 1-2 at center where John Morgan has completed his eligibility. Woods was No. 2 offensive tackle in 1975 while Wellman was a redshirt defensive end.

Kansas also lost defensive back John O'Rear to professional baseball. O'Rear was the Big Eight's leader in punt return yards last season and averaged 38 yards on 50 punts. Placekicker Dennis Kerbel, who handled the chores last year, is doubtful because of a knee injury.

Kansas, however, might not be in trouble in the kicking game if a couple of freshmen with good credentials can repeat their high school marks.

One is Mike Hubach of Cleveland, Ohio, who averaged 43.5 yards on 37 punts as a senior and also booted nine field goals, one from 42 yards out. The other, Guy McClure of Maplewood, Mo., averaged 42.8 yards on his punts.

LSU Offense Experienced

As Nebraska begins work Thursday for the 1976 season, the Huskers main point of concentration naturally will be the opener against Louisiana State in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, La.

It appears Coach Charlie McClendon's team will be likely to have carryover momentum from a 42-6 season-ending victory over Tulane.

The Bengal Tigers return 10 offensive starters, including both quarterbacks who saw all the action a year ago. Pat Lyons, who threw for almost 1,000 yards, is the probable starter with Bobby Moreau in reserve.

Terry Robiskie, a big 'un at 215 pounds, is less than 800 yards from the school rushing record. He gained 43 yards in 18 carries against Nebraska here last season. He's also a good pass receiver.

McClendon thinks the offensive line will be improved because of its size and experience. "We're optimistic about this bunch," he said.

Defensive leader is A. J. Duhe, who will lead a unit that McClendon says has more speed than last season. Like KU's Moore and most other coaches, McClendon says, "Depth will be a problem."

Ah, yes, the football season is here when you hear talk like that.

Moyer Prevails In USGA

University of Nebraska golfer Craig Moyer of Wood River won the USGA National Amateur Qualifying Tournament Tuesday at the Lincoln Country Club.

Moyer fired a 73-73—146 to earn a trip to Los Angeles for the National Amateur Tournament Aug. 31-Sept. 5.

First alternate was Mike Klein of Scottsbluff with a 79-72—151 and second alternate was Steve Statton of Lincoln with a 75-79—154.

Other scores included Tom Sieckmann of Millard with a 74-82—156, Tom Olson of Omaha had a 82-77—159, Ty Swan of Hastings had an 82-80—162 and Ing Maurstad of Beatrice had an 82-80—162.

Fred Gacek had an 81-82—163 while David Walker was disqualified.

Ogden Doesn't Let Kids Show Him Up

By BOB MOYER

At age 42, Derryl Ogden is not ready yet to let the young kids push him aside.

Stan's ageless first baseman has just finished one of his best seasons — leading the Lincoln AAA Softball League in hitting with a .424 mark.

"I'm still in pretty good shape," says Ogden. "I don't drink or smoke which helps. I'll keep on playing until I have a bad year.

"I guess the only difference between now and when I first started playing is I used to have more speed," Ogden adds. "I used to be able to stretch singles into doubles and now I stretch triples into doubles."

Ogden passes off his batting title by saying "I was just lucky," but he notes with pride that he has finished among the top batters in the league for the past several seasons — since complete records have been kept.

Ogden says he has been playing softball for 28 years, starting in AA ball when he was 15 years old.

"I don't think there is as much good pitching as there used to be back in the 1940s," says Ogden. "That helps oldsters like me.

"But I think the caliber of play in the league is getting better each year," he notes. "My son, Ron, played AA-1 ball this year and I saw some good young players down there too. I hope they'll get a chance in AAA ball."

In fact, Ogden is hoping his career will at least last long enough for him to form a father-son duo in the AAA league. Also, his daughter, Laurie, plays for the highly successful Joys girls softball team.

As far as the state tournament, which gets under way Wednesday evening at 6:30 p.m., goes, Ogden feels Stan's has a good chance to win in the wake of Stan's third consecutive league title.

"Maybe the third time's the charm," says Ogden. "I certainly think we're capable of winning."

Even when he is no longer able to play AAA ball, Ogden is hopeful of maintaining an active role. "I love it, I don't know what I'd do if I didn't play softball in the summertime. When I retire maybe I'll umpire or manage. I'll be out there for sure even if it's just to watch," says Ogden.

"You know, I played against the old-timers everybody talks about," says Ogden. "Now I'm the old-timer." That may be so, but he's still showing them how it's done.

The state tournament, won last year by Scottsbluff D & A Manufacturing, will feature 13 teams, seven from Lincoln including Dean's, Val's, Stan's Lounge, Citizens State Bank, Falstaff, Dick Flynn Buick and Misty Lounge.

Out-of-town teams entered include D & A, Scottsbluff Pioneer Lounge, Norfolk Mint Bar, Grand Island Claussens and two teams from Fremont, Koglin Oil and Budweiser.

The tourney runs through Sunday with three games Wednesday through Friday evenings, nine games on Saturday beginning at 9 a.m. and six tilts on Sunday, beginning at 10 a.m.

Finals for the double elimination tourney are set for 7 p.m. on Sunday, unless an extra game is needed to determine the champion. If the extra game is played, it will be at 8:30 p.m. on Sunday. The tourney is sponsored by the Northeast Lincoln Businessmen's Association.

Prai Returns From Football To Aid Judds

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

Ralston — Joe Prai wasn't so sure he could afford a return to Orval Smith Field after Lincoln Judds eliminated North Platte from the state American Legion baseball tournament Monday by a 4-0 count.

Prai was suffering from somewhat of an identity crisis and it didn't help to look at his uniform because it kept changing from baseball to football and back to baseball.

Prai decided in favor of sandwiching a baseball game between two football practices at Northeast High School again Tuesday, and Judds coach Bill Fagler was glad he did.

Prai's single in the bottom of the fourth inning drove in the only two runs of the game while the surprise Capital City entry sent another team packing with a 2-0 decision over Millard in the double elimination tourney.

The win marked the first time a Fagler coached team had beaten Millard in nine tries over the past four years.

Topping that off was the fact that Millard had captured the state high school tournament this past spring with much the same lineup.

As late as Tuesday noon, there was still some doubt that Prai, one of three football players on the team, would make the trip.

"Joe got full backing from coach Els (Northeast football coach Bob Els)," Fagler said. "But I'm sure Joe is the type of kid who thinks it's nt fair to the other football players if he's missing practice. With that single, I'm sure he made the right decision."

Prai took off immediately after the game for Lincoln and the evening session of practice.

His single drove in Rocky Surface, who led off the inning with a walk and Bruce Reed, who doubled to send Surface to third base.

Another important factor in the game was Judds' pitcher Don Shelton's ability to go the full nine innings after losing a heartbreaker to Papillion in the first round 1-0 pitching all 12 innings Saturday.

"Papillion's pitcher (Mike Fantaski) still isn't ready to pitch and their coach said he probably wouldn't be able to Wednesday either," Fagler said.

Shelton allowed seven hits and was only in trouble twice, but got out of the trouble both times. Millard's most serious threat was in the top of the fourth when Shelton allowed two hits.

Millard pitcher Jeff Hunter opened with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice bunt. A sharp single to center by Tom Paasch was grabbed by Brad Lobeda and his throw to the plate caught Hunter trying to score.

"We ought to really find out what we're made of in that one," Fagler of the scheduled 8 p.m. contest. "We'll have to come back with our No. 3 pitcher (Tom Reinhart). He'll be fresh and he's a good pitcher, so it should be interesting. All the teams left are good ones."

In the second game, Papillion defeated Ralston, 7-3, behind the hitting of pitcher Dave Dame. Dame swatted a two-run home run in the sixth inning and added two more RBIs.

Dame allowed 10 scattered hits and three runs in advancing his pitching mark to 6-2.

In the final game, Creighton Prep blanked Omaha Westside, 5-0 behind pitcher Joe Franco.

Franco, who hurled a complete nine-inning game, struck out 11 Westsiders while walking only three. He allowed just three hits — a single, double and triple.

Nebraska Chooses Sanders

John Sanders, who had been head football coach at Arizona Western College in Yuma the past two years, was named assistant baseball coach at the University of Nebraska.

Sanders replaced Bob Gates, who last month was selected as the head baseball coach at the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

Sanders, a former prep standout at Grand Island High School, was picked as The Sunday Journal and Star's High School Athlete of the Year in 1964.

Last year at Arizona Western, the Matadors were 24-15 and qualified to compete in the National Junior College divisional playoffs.

Sanders was graduated from the University of Northern Colorado in 1969 and earned his Masters there a year later. While in Greeley, Sanders coached baseball at University High School.

A standout American Legion baseball player, he signed a professional contract with the Kansas City A's following his high school graduation. He played in Kansas City during 1965 and spent the next four years with the A's and the New York Mets' organization.

According to NU head coach Tony Sharpe, Sanders' experience help next year's Husker baseball squad. "His experience regarding professional and college baseball is endless," Sharpe said. "His appearance on our staff will be a definite plus for our team next year."

Sanders and his wife, Marilee, have two children, John Craig, 4, and Elizabeth Jane, 8.

In Tourney, Girls Were 'Swinging In The Rain'

By ALAN H. FALLICK
Star Sports Writer

It's too bad that Dick Reinmiller and his 14 Lincoln Swingers forgot to bring their umbrellas to Binghamton, N.Y., last Wednesday.

"I question the idea of holding a tournament where they have only three days of sunshine a year," said Reinmiller, who coached his team to a seventh-place finish in the National Junior High Girls Softball Tournament last weekend.

"Every time they would get ready to play it would rain," he said.

Torrential downpours, however, did not stop Nebraska's state champion in the girls' junior high tourney from winning four of six games in New York.

An opening-day 8-4 trouncing of host Binghamton did more than advance the Swingers into the second round of the double-elimination tournament. "We were the town's favorite team after that," Reinmiller said.

The New York crowd, whose spirit was not dampened by the many game postponements, cheered as the Swingers edged Orlando (Fla.) 7-6 on Friday and walloped Kansas City Metro 11-1 on Saturday.

"It seemed like all the good hits were caught," Reinmiller said. "In some games, we just plain lucked out."

Finishing seventh of 40 teams — the best finish ever for any Nebraska team — was surprising since only one Swinger is 15 years old and the others are 13 and 14 years old.

"The majority of girls on the other teams were 15, real powerhouses," said Reinmiller, who feared the tourney would become a single-elimination contest after the rains interfered with the schedule.

With three triumphs by Saturday, the Swingers waited for their fourth game against Dallas. And they waited. And waited. Until 2 a.m. Sunday, when the rain let up.

"Most of the day Saturday we slept," said pitcher Penny Pappas, who started all six games for Lincoln.

Girls' softball, however, was not meant to be played with a moon above your shoulder and sleep in your eyes. Dallas seemed to be wider awake and gave the Swingers their first loss, an 11-1 belting.

Lincoln rebounded for a 9-8 victory over New York State later Sunday morning but fell out of the tournament on Monday with a 5-1 loss to Illinois. "The Illinois coach said we were too small to be in the tournament," Reinmiller said.

Pappas won four games but said the Swingers were not confident. "Everybody was nervous because none of us had been to the Nationals before," said the 14-year-old lefthander.

Although they are a newly formed unit, the Swingers have been in the national tourney three of the last four years. This summer, the Swingers played more games than any other tourney entry and won 52 of 74 contests before the tournament. They almost didn't get there.

"We didn't expect to have enough money to go," Pappas said. "I think it was great that all the businesses helped us raise enough money."

Raising funds helped players like Swinger center fielder Kelly Erisman show off their defensive talents. "She made catches which had the crowds talking," Reinmiller said.

Some teams spent a lot but received little more than a quick hello and goodby after arriving in Binghamton. Alaska's entry in the tournament, for example, paid $9,000 in airfare alone only to lose its first two games and return to Anchorage.

Some of the luckier teams, like the Swingers, got chances to go sightseeing.

"I'd never been in New York before," Reinmiller said. "My idea of New York was paving and tall buildings. It wasn't like that all."

The swingers arrived in Lincoln Tuesday and were greeted by smiling, hugging and kissing relatives for the first time in six days. Although 14 girls were hoping for a rest, they soon learned otherwise.

"We have a game tonight at 8 at Muny Field," Reinmiller said.

Youngsters To Learn Bowhunting

Bowhunting has grown by leaps and bounds the past few years in Nebraska. Youngsters will have a chance to learn from veterans like state bowhunting champion Mike Swiggart (right) at Saturday's Lincoln Young Hunters Clinic, cosponsored by the Sunday Journal and Star and the Lincoln Ikes. It's free to youngsters 16 and younger. Signup, at the Ikes grounds seven miles east of Lincoln on Highway 2, will begin at 8 a.m. (Star staff photo)

Best Weed Control Herbicides Rated

Clay Center — Using standard herbicides and incorporating them into the soil when chilly appear to offer the best form of weed control, according to Dr. Fred Roeth, University of Nebraska Extension weed specialist.

Roeth led one of four tours during the University of Nebraska South Central Station's fifth annual field day near here Tuesday.

A record crowd of more than 300 men and 125 women attended separate programs during the day.

Roeth told farmers that combining Aatrex with Lasso, Prowl or Dual herbicides resulted in comparable weed control in corn during tests at the station. He said each of the three mixtures was more than 96% efficient.

In sorghum, he said, there was what he called a wider range in weed control, but standards herbicides again performed well.

Overall, Roeth said, combinations of Prowl and Aatrex, "which looks very good," Ramrod and Atrazine, and Bladex used alone were more than 90% efficient.

Roeth said control of soybean weeds was enhanced by using Sencor, which especially aids broadleaf control.

As was the case in sorghum, Lorox, a new herbicide, failed to achieve performance rates as high as standard herbicides, he said.

Roeth told those on the tour that incorporation of the herbicide "gets the chemical into the soil right away, when weeds are first getting started. If we can get four to six weeks of control out of the herbicide, we consider it has done a good job."

Grand Jury Indicts Grain Firm Officials

New Orleans (UPI) — A federal grand jury indicted seven officials of a Tennessee firm Tuesday on charges they cheated foreign customers of more than 800,000 bushels of grain during the past five years.

The indictments were the latest in a two-year investigation into the grain export industry along the lower Mississippi River. The investigation has led to 56 convictions.

All seven of the latest defendants were past or present employes of Cook Industries, Inc., a Memphis-based grain exporter. Cook was fined $370,000 last May after pleading no contest to grain-fraud charges.

Those indicted Tuesday were Phillip H. McCaul, a Cook vice president until March 1972; Michael E. Ragen, a Cook vice president until November 1974; Raymond M. Fretz, a Cook vice president since Aug. 1, 1972; Melvin L. Hibbets, a Cook vice president; Jack A. Coleman, a former superintendent at Cook's Bayside grain elevator in Reserve, La.; Rodney C. Waguespack, Bayside barge traffic manager; and Billy Hall, former assistant superintendent at Bayside.

The indictments alleged grain shipments were short-weighed from mid 1970 to 1975 by rigging scales.

Feathered Racers Lost Somewhere Over N.Y.C.

New York (UPI) — Ten top racing pigeons left the Empire State Building in a promotional stunt Tuesday to show it was just a short hop to the new Meadowlands Sports Complex in East Rutherford N.J.

They got lost.

"The pigeon race was expected to be completed in about 10 minutes, or roughly half the time it will take motorists to reach" the new $300 million sports complex, a statement from the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority said.

"I can't understand it," said one publicity agent waiting impatiently for word of the pigeons' arrival.

"Good thing they're not heading for Central Park at night, they'd get mugged," replied one of the 30 or so reporters covering the event.

Defector Returns To USSR

MONTREAL (UPI) — Sergei Nemtsanov, a 17-year-old Soviet Olympic diver whose defection touched off a diplomatic row between Canada and the Soviet Union, Tuesday returned to the USSR.

An immigration spokesman said Nemtsanov, his lawyer, an interpreter and two friends met for 15 minutes in the coffee shop of the Holiday Inn in downtown Montreal. After a brief conversation the teenager left with the Soviets.

Nemtsanov's lawyers said the youth "last night, at his request, expressed the wish to the Canadian immigration authorities to return.

"He expressed to them that he had been considering returning for the past couple of days.

"After a lengthy interview last night, which concluded early in the morning, he decided that he would rest overnight and make a final decision.

"His final decision was to return to the USSR," the lawyers David I. Matheson and Alex K. Paterson said in a joint statement.

Nemtsanov's defection in the midst of the already politically troubled Olympics put the Canadian government under pressure as the Soviets demanded his return and charged the youth was kidnapped and brainwashed by professionals.

Canada denied the charge and refused to return the boy against his will.

The Soviet ambassador in Ottawa delivered two stiff notes of diplomatic protest and USSR sports officials threatened to pull their hockey team out of the Canada Cup series next month.

Nemtsanov remained in hiding throughout his Canadian stay, refusing to speak with news media. But spokesmen for the youth said he had defected seeking freedom, and planned to remain in Canada.

Soviets delivered to him, however, letters from his mother who he had not seen since age five and from the aged and ailing grandmother with whom he lived.

The lawyers said Tuesday Nemtsanov, who had been staying in Toronto with the John Fleming family, was motivated to return by his grandmother's illness.

They said "throughout Sunday and Monday, he told the Fleming family that he was concerned over the health of his aging grandmother and accordingly wanted to return, and he confirmed this at the interview with the Canadian Immigration authorities.

Soviet officials declined to say when Nemtsanov would leave the country. The next scheduled Aeroflot flight to Moscow from Montreal leaves Thursday.

In all, nine persons defected to Canada during the games. All but one were from Eastern Bloc states.

Salem Wins AA Crown

The Salem Oilers scored a run in the bottom of the seventh inning to down Marie's Oasis, 2-1, in the championship game of the Men's AA Fast Pitch Softball Tournament Tuesday night at Holmes North.

Salem loaded the bases with no outs in the seventh on two bunt hits and a walk. Don Everett then singled to right field to produce the winning run.

Marie's, the defending champion, defeated Salem, 4-3, last Thursday to force the deciding game in this double-elimination affair.

Salem has won championships four of the last six years.

Dave Taladay hurled the complete seven innings for Salem, allowing just three hits.

Deeter, Benish In Golf Lead

Norfolk (AP) — Debbie Benish of Norfolk and Jane Deeter of Lincoln, both University of Nebraska golfers, took the lead in the first day of the annual State Women's Best Ball golf tournament at the Norfolk Country Club.

They led the gross scoring with a two-under-par 72 and were in a four-way tie for the net handicap lead with 10 under par 64.

All 54 teams are competing in both events over the three-day, 54-hole tourney.

Omahans Sharon Slattery and Barb Burton are second in gross with even par 74 and one of the four groups in the net with 64.

Marian Howard and Mary Bookstrom of Lincoln and Pat Vogel and Jerre Mallory of Grand Island have 64s to tie the net.

Omaha Loses To Iowa, 5-3

Des Moines, Iowa (AP) — Sam Ewing knocked in three runs with two doubles and Mike Squires hit a two-run home run with two out in the eighth to give Iowa a 5-3 American Association victory over Omaha Tuesday.

The Royals had gained a 3-3 tie on Jim Ottens' balk with the bases full in the top of the eighth. Two home runs by Dave Gripe accounted for the other two Omaha runs.

Auerbach Eyes New Prospects

BOSTON (UPI) — What could the Red Auerbach be looking for when he greets recruits and free agents later this week at his rookie camp?

The Celtics are coming off their 13th NBA title and expect to have everyone back except Don Nelson, who announced his retirement last January and has been reconsidering since. Since it is doubtful the Celtics want the 36-year-old forward back, one roster spot at most is open.

Auerbach, however, looks at the situation differently.

"There are so many free agents around" because of the ABA's demise and the outpouring of undrafted but hopeful collegians "that all the training camps should be more competitive this year. After the first five or six players on your team, you will have lots and lots of players who could fill out a roster."

Let's see how Auerbach's remark applies to the Celtics. The players assured of jobs are Dave Cowens, Paul Silas, Jo Jo White, Charlie Scott and John Havlicek — provided he is healthy and still determined to play another season.

After two seasons, the management is still puzzled about the inconsistency of Glenn McDonald, Jim Ard and Kevin Stacom. It says here McDonald certainly will be around for another season and that Ard, whose best performance as a Celtic came in the 1976 playoffs, will stay unless an unknown 7-footer materializes in training camp.

The enigma is Tom Boswell, last year's top draft choice. Heinsohn swears Boswell is not another Steve Downing, that he does have special talent and that he will round into a tough cornerman.

However, the Celtics picked up many of the same qualities in 1976 top choice Norm Cook of Kansas. He comes recommended by White, a former star at Kansas who has seen him several times, and by Providence Coach Dave Gavitt, who called Cook the best player in the 1975 Pan American Games. Heinsohn also has seen Cook twice and likes him very much.

With third round choice Jerry Fort, who also comes well recommended out of the University of Nebraska, and six other picks, the Celtics seem overloaded with potential players. Yet Auerbach said he expects four free agents at the camp, including second-timer Ed Searcy and Freddy Saunders, Phoenix' second round choice in 1974.

Public Interest Groups Attempt To Influence Government Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The giant industries that provide free travel, recreation and perhaps sex to lobby for their causes capture most of the headlines, but there are hundreds of smaller public interest groups also trying to influence policy.

Representatives of these organizations say they depend on the average citizen, sometimes poor and sometimes wealthy, to support their causes which range across the political spectrum.

Their sworn financial statements, filed with various state agencies, with the clerk of the House and the secretary of the Senate and the Federal Elections Commission, tend to bear this out.

"We're having an effect on public policy," says President David Cohen of Common Cause, "so we feel there should be full accounting, with no ifs, ands or buts."

Cohen said in an interview that anyone can drop into Common Cause's headquarters in downtown Washington and look at everything: the budget, list of members, other contributors, copies of official financial reports, expenditures and the like.

He cites with pride an in-house study which showed that three-fourths of the staff output last year was contributed by volunteers.

Common Cause, which describes itself as a citizens' lobby, is dedicated to basic reforms. It claims a measure of credit for changes in campaigning financing, the opening up of many House committee meetings, and elimination of the strict seniority system in Congress.

It initiated the process which resulted in the recent House reprimand of Rep. Robert L.F. Sikes, D-Fla., for conflict of interest.

It is one of the largest of the public interest groups, with an annual budget of about $5.5 million. F. Robert Meier, secretary-treasurer, says the current membership is about 256,000, down from a peak of 325,000 at the height of Watergate.

Dues are $15 a year, and Meier says dues and contributions of less than $100 account for 94 per cent of the group's income. Common Cause does not accept corporate or union support of more than $100, but Meier says many such groups pay that amount in order to receive its literature.

There is a large constituency for the AFL-CIO's COPE — Committee for Political Action — with its access to a claimed 14 million union members.

A spokesman said COPE has an administrative budget of about $1 million yearly, contributed from union dues by its affiliates, and that in addition the union contributes from $1 million to $1.2 million to candidates.

COPE traditionally does not contribute to presidential campaigns, but the spokesman said it usually gives donations to 330 to 350 candidates for the House and 25 to 30 for the Senate. There normally are about 34 Senate races every two years.

COPE's report to the Federal Elections Commission through June 30 shows receipts of $1,529,870 and expenditures of $689,122, with cash on hand at the end of the month of $840,747.

During the month of June, it reported, it made contributions aggregating $82,800 to 28 candidates for the House and Senate. Some were for $1,000, some for $5,000, most for around $2,500.

Two groups which attract considerable media attention because they rate members of Congress on their voting records are ACA and ADA — Americans for Constitutional Action and Americans for Democratic Action.

As far as it is possible to attach labels, ACA is conservative and ADA liberal. A member of Congress who scores 6 out of a possible 100 on the ACA index may rate 94 with ADA, and vice versa.

Chairman Charlene Baker of Americans for Constitutional Action says her group's budget is about $100,000 a year, and that it has a membership of around 5,000 which has remained fairly stable.

There are no fixed dues, but anyone who contributes $10 or more a year receives the group's literature, including a newsletter and the ACA Index listing members of Congress.

Miss Baker says her organization helps candidates of its choice by handling mailings and by fund-raising receptions at which guests are charged $100.

In 1974, she said, ACA was responsible for raising $455,000 which went directly to candidates.

Americans for Democratic Action says it wants to elect candidates in tune with its political philosophies, although not through direct contributions. The election help comes from lobbying and education efforts.

"We are a political organization; there's no doubt of that," said a spokeswoman. She said the group's largest expenditure is for publications, and that with mounting costs the task of attracting non-tax exempt contributions to supplement dues income is marked "by great agony."

ADA has an annual budget of about $350,000. Dues are levied on something called a unit of membership, which may be one person or a couple, usually at $20 a year, although some local chapters may charge different fees.

Like Common Cause, an organization with similar aims but a somewhat different approach, ADA saw its membership climb somewhat during the Vietnam war and Watergate, the spokeswoman said. Membership now has pretty well stabilized, she said.

The National Committee for an Effective Congress, with headquarters in New York City, is a direct political action committee which supports candidates of its choice — mostly progressive, a spokeswoman said.

It has no dues, depending entirely on contributions which she estimated average $17 to $18 per contributor. The committee's report to the Federal Elections Commission as of June 30 listed receipts for the year, plus cash on hand, at $493,502, and its expenditures at $386,201.

During June, it reported receiving $28,507 from 55 contributors and about $20,000 from fund-raising dinners. Many of its donations were listed as political research projects for candidates, most of them costing no more than $20 to $25.

Liberty Lobby claims to be the oldest of such groups still active and, says Treasurer Willis Carter, "the most broadly based — I hate to use the word conservative — organization."

Liberty Lobby claims 25,000 members who pay $16 a year, as well as 100,000 others who subscribe to its newsletter. It also distributes free to stations a radio program which Carter says is heard 300 times a day, five days a week. It also has income from contributions and the sale of books.

10 Pigeons Get Lost In Clouds

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ten top racing pigeons left the Empire State Building in a promotional stunt Tuesday to show it was just a short hop to the new Meadowlands sports complex in East Rutherford, N.J.

The pigeons got lost.

"The pigeon race was expected to be completed in about 10 minutes, or roughly half the time it will take motorists to reach" the new $300 million sports complex, a statement from the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority said.

"I can't understand it," said one publicity agent waiting impatiently for word of the pigeons' arrival.

"Good thing they're not heading for Central Park at night, they'd get mugged," replied one of the 30 or so reporters covering the event.

Thirty-seven minutes after takeoff, the only arrivals at the Meadowlands — the new home of pro football's Giants — were a reporter and a "wayward seagull," a promotion official said. The reporter had left downtown New York just after the pigeons were released and had "been mired in traffic," he said.

"When we had a dry run on July 30, one of the birds made it in 5 minutes and 40 seconds, but it was very foggy then," Woertz said.

After circling the 86th floor observation deck of the Empire State Building, the 10 birds disappeared to the north in the direction of Central Park.

Finally, an hour and 47 minutes after takeoff, the 10 pigeons found their way home.

Pigeons are released from the Empire State Building in a promotional stunt Tuesday to show it was just a short hop to the new Meadowlands Sports Complex in East Rutherford, N.J. But the pigeons got lost.

Baseball Holds Fan Interest

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball will survive its cold divisional races and the hot final days of summer because of its fascination with the decimal point.

Baseball plays twice as many games as any of the other major American sports. It doesn't hold any allegiance to a clock and it can get boring, especially in the absence of divisional races.

The 24 major league teams have gone through three-fourths of the season and have six weeks and some 40 games left. Football, basketball and hockey are already crowding baseball for media attention.

But don't count baseball out yet. When the national pastime's pace slows down even more than it's supposed to, the true fan reaches for a bottle of beer and a slew of statistics. For example:

—Will George Foster of Cincinnati win the triple crown? If he does he will become the first player to accomplish the feat of taking the titles in batting average, home runs and runs batted in since Carl Yastrzemski in 1967 and the first National Leaguer to win all three since Joe Medwick in 1937?

—Will Hal McRae of Kansas City become the first designated hitter to win the American League batting title? If he does he'll end Rod Carew's streak of four straight AL batting crowns. Carew, from Minnesota, currently trails McRae, the league leader, by 30 points.

—Who will win 20 games? Randy Jones of San Diego, already with 19 victories, could join the club for the second straight year. Jim Palmer of Baltimore leads the AL with 16 victories. Catfish Hunter of the New York Yankees, seeking his sixth straight 20-victory season is 14-12 with, perhaps, a dozen starts left.

And when the fans get tired of batting around the record book, they can take a couple of swipes at the managerial directory. Will Earl Weaver be answering Baltimore's phone next year? Will rookie manager Karl Kuehl of Montreal stick around for Round 2? Will Charles O. Finley of Oakland keep Chuck Tanner or name his unlucky 13th field boss since 1961?

Only second-place managers still believe in pennant races. Philadelphia and Cincinnati hold commanding leads in the NL, while the Yankees and Kansas City have plenty of breathing space in the AL.

Tanner, however, still is talking division race in the AL West, where the A's have won the past five years. "It's my dream to be in a World Series and I still think we're gonna do it," he said.

To get past the regular season, the A's must win big while the Royals have to lose big. If Kansas City plays .500 baseball the rest of the season, Oakland must win nearly 75 per cent of its games to take the division flag.

The odds are even worse for the other second-place teams, Baltimore in the AL East, Pittsburgh in the NL East and Los Angeles in the NL West.

These four runners-up probably will have to be satisfied with their place money, probably over $1,000 per man.

The top three teams in each division get a cut of the playoff money. Last year that amounted to $43,373 for each of the four second-place teams and $11,414 for the third-place clubs.

Other questions:

—Will Dave Kingman of the Mets win the NL home run crown? He's been out one month with a torn thumb ligament and is expected back soon. Despite the layoff, Kingman still leads the NL with 32 homers. Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia, bidding for his third straight home run championship, has 31 and Foster, well ahead in the RBI race and close to the top in hitting, has 27.

—Will Reggie Jackson of Baltimore be the home run king in the AL? With 100 fewer at bats than the other leaders because of injuries and an early season holdout, Jackson has predicted he would lead the league in both home runs and RBI. He's not far behind in either.

—Will Mark Fidrych of Detroit, 13-4, become the first rookie to win 20 games since Bob Grim in 1954?

Landry Views Longley Future

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Coach Tom Landry said Wednesday that suspended reserve quarterback Clint Longley had telephoned him regarding the training camp feud with Roger Staubach but added "nothing has changed."

"Clint called me Sunday night and said he felt bad about the embarrassment the incident had caused the Cowboys," said Landry. "His loss has been a great blow to our football team."

Landry refused to be specific over whether Longley had asked to be forgiven for punching Staubach last Thursday but there was every indication the Cowboys were attempting to comply with Longley's desire to be traded.

"I don't know what will happen," said Landry. "There is no timetable. Hopefully, something will happen during the week."

Asked point blank if he would take Longley back, Landry said, "I'm not sure at this point. I'm leaning a certain way but it wouldn't be fair to say which way."

Landry said the Cowboys just may go into the regular season with Staubach and Danny White as the only two quarterbacks.

If Landry did take Longley back, Longley would have to face Staubach's wrath. Staubach feels Longley took a cheap shot at him. Staubach said Longley punched him when Staubach had his arms over his head putting on his shoulder pads for practice. Staubach suffered a nine-stitch gash over his left eye when he hit some training room scales.

Longley's version of the incident was that Staubach shoveled chairs at him to provoke the fight.

The Cowboys, runnersup in Super Bowl X, have lost all three of their preseason games and Landry said, "It is coming to the point where a win is important. You can establish a trend. We haven't been losing badly but losing is losing."

Fonner Slates Grandstand Work

Grand Island (UPI) — The president of the Hall County Livestock Improvement Association announced Tuesday approval of final plans for a $500,000 addition to the grandstand at Fonner Park.

H. W. Harrington said Mid-Plains Construction Co. of Grand Island was the low bidder on the project and workmen will start work this week.

The addition will be a new third level, measuring 280 feet long by 80 feet wide, over the existing concourse and will connect at the top of the current grandstand bleacher seating.

Al Swihart, general manager, said the new third level was designed and developed to alleivate congestion by providing grandstand patrons with additional betting windows, concession stands and rest rooms.

The area immediately behind the existing grandstand bleachers will have table and chair seating for about 450 persons and will offer a view of the entire race track.

Harrington said the project is scheduled for completion Feb. 1, 1977. Fonner Park's thoroughbred racing season begins March 3, 1977.

Hobby Cards Lucrative Business

GEORGETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Bruce Yeko started collecting hobby cards when he was eight years old. Today, Yeko is 36 and not only is he still collecting the cards, he is making his living by selling them.

Yeko claims he has the largest collection of hobby cards in the country — 20 million of them. They spill over his eight-room house — on the pool table, in the linen closet, behind the door.

A former accountant, Yeko sells the cards of baseball players, football players and a mulitude of others to mail-order customers. He says that in his best year he sold more than one million cards.

Yeko declines to say exactly how much he makes from his cards. He says only he made more than $20,000 last year and expects to make more than $20,000 this year.

As new sets of baseball cards are issued by such companies as Topps for sale in retail stores, Yeko buys them in cases of 24 boxes of 500 cards each from the company. Each case costs him about $44, he says.

Some of his most expensive items are Goudey baseball cards issued in 1933 and 1934 and selling for $4 each. Other baseball cards which cost a penny each in the 1950's and 1960's are listed in Yeko's catalog for 75 cents apiece.

Other items in his catalog include cards of football, basketball and hockey players, Batman, Soupy Sales, The Three Stooges and Elvis Presley. It also lists cards of The Flying Nun and Casper The Friendly Ghost at 10 cents apiece.

Yeko says his wife Doris is "very realistic" about the mess that comes with the business. "She's in favor of anything that's lucrative."

Yeko himself says: "I'm happy as long as I can get to things, as long as you have a path to get to things."

Yeko, who also sells records by mail, has been selling cards since he was 16 and has been doing it full-time for 14 years.

He began collecting cards at the age of 8 in his home town of Milwaukee. "There was something magical about the way the cards looked," he recalls. His mother took a more down-to-earth approach. She asked him "what are you throwing away our money for," he says.

When he was 16, Yeko and a friend began selling cards to a dealer in New York whose collection Yeko eventually bought. The friend's interest waned, leaving Yeko with his own business.

Today, he says, enthusiasm for the cards is concentrated in the East, Midwest and California. People in areas which have no major league sports teams tend to have little interest, he adds.

Yeko says many customers are interested in the cards as an investment. Others, he says, are taken with their attractiveness, as he was.

"I just liked the look of the cards. I can remember having the cards in my school desk and if things were particularly dull I'd look at them," he says.

Yard Issues Sketch Of Swaggering Bully

London (UPI) — Scotland Yard Tuesday issued a sketch of a "swaggering bully" they believe was the ringleader of a trio who killed a defenseless boy at a swimming pool before 1,000 witnesses who ignored his screams for help.

It was the first major development in the nearly six-week-old murder of Enrico Sidoli, a friendly, talkative 15-year-old with a nervous tic, who was beaten and held under water while a crowd estimated at about 1,000 persons watched.

For a month, Scotland Yard detectives could not get a single witness to talk about the July 8 attack which resulted in young Enrico's death.

Then, a newspaper's offer of a reward brought forth a flood of information which enabled detectives to issue the drawing of their chief suspect whom they described as a "swaggering bully" in his late teens.

Their description is complete even to the kind of badges the 17- or 18-year-old suspect wears on his t-shirts and the kind of boots he wears.

Less detailed descriptions have been obtained of the other two youths involved in the attack. Scotland Yard sources said all three youths were believed to be still in the Kentish Town area where the slaying took place.

"At long last we are reaching them," Detective Chief Inspector Harry Clements said Tuesday, referring to the sudden surge of witnesses coming forward to talk about the killing.

"Groups of youngsters are now coming to their senses," Clement, who for 37 days had met what he called a "wall of silence" on the case, said.

"They are coming into the police station at Kentish Town and asking, 'What can we do to help?' They are stopping police in the street, asking for details of the youths we want to interview and then going off to look for them.

"The cooperation is wonderful," Clements said. "It is so different from what it was a few weeks ago."

Kentish Town, the North London area where Enrico lived, teems with teenage gangs who prey on younger children. Local people were not surprised at the complete "wall of silence" around Enrico's murder.

Jayhawks In Pads

Coach Bud Moore's Kansas Jayhawks got the jump on the rest of the Big Eight Conference football teams when they opened practice last Thursday. After three days in shorts, the pads went on Monday.

The early start came about because Kansas opens the season Sept. 4 against Oregon State in Corvallis, Ore., in a 6 p.m. (Pacific time) game. That's 8 p.m., Lincoln time. The rest of the league teams don't play until Sept. 11.

Kansas State began its search for a quarterback Monday. Opening workouts Thursday, in addition to Nebraska, will be Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and Missouri. Colorado will begin Friday while Iowa State waits until next Monday.

The "big games" for Big Eight schools on the first full weekend will be nighttime contests on the road. Nebraska goes to Louisiana State while Missouri begins it suicide preconference card against Southern California in Los Angeles. Colorado also will be under the lights at Texas Tech.

Oklahoma opens defense of its national championship, trying for three in a row, by playing Vanderbilt at Nashville. The Commodores went 7-4 overall last season.

Other first games include Drake at Iowa State, Brigham Young at Kansas State, Tulsa at Oklahoma State and Washington State at Kansas. All will be day games.

Depth Critical At KU

The final 1975 depth chart at Kansas showed only three players who wouldn't be back this season, but the situation has changed for various reasons, leaving Moore with what he says is "a critical situation — we don't have any."

Kansas has lost three veterans, all listed on the second unit, because of injuries. They are Dave Hentges, an offensive tackle who has quit football because of recurring knee problems; Eric Franklin, cornerback who is recuperating from a knee injury suffered in a pickup basketball game last spring; and Lloyd Sobek, tight end who suffered back injuries in an automobile accident this summer.

Some of the other backup people last year have been switched to other positions in efforts to bolster them. Included are Greg Woods and Mike Wellman, currently ranked 1-2 at center where John Morgan has completed his eligibility. Woods was No. 2 offensive tackle in 1975 while Wellman was a redshirt defensive end.

Kansas also lost defensive back John O'Rear to professional baseball. O'Rear was the Big Eight's leader in punt return yards last season and averaged 38 yards on 50 punts. Placekicker Dennis Kerbel, who handled the chores last year, is doubtful because of a knee injury.

Kansas, however, might not be in trouble in the kicking game if a couple of freshmen with good credentials can repeat their high school marks.

One is Mike Hubach of Cleveland, Ohio, who averaged 43.5 yards on 37 punts as a senior and also booted nine field goals, one from 42 yards out. The other, Guy McClure of Maplewood, Mo., averaged 42.8 yards on his punts.

LSU Offense Experienced

As Nebraska begins work Thursday for the 1976 season, the Huskers main point of concentration naturally will be the opener against Louisiana State in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, La.

It appears Coach Charlie McClendon's team will be likely to have carryover momentum from a 42-6 season-ending victory over Tulane.

The Bengal Tigers return 10 offensive starters, including both quarterbacks who saw all the action a year ago. Pat Lyons, who threw for almost 1,000 yards, is the probable starter with Bobby Moreau in reserve.

Terry Robiskie, a big 'un at 215 pounds, is less than 800 yards from the school rushing record. He gained 43 yards in 18 carries against Nebraska here last season. He's also a good pass receiver.

McClendon thinks the offensive line will be improved because of its size and experience. "We're optimistic about this bunch," he said.

Defensive leader is A. J. Duhe, who will lead a unit that McClendon says has more speed than last season. Like KU's Moore and most other coaches, McClendon says, "Depth will be a problem."

Ah, yes, the football season is here when you hear talk like that.

Moyer Prevails In USGA

University of Nebraska golfer Craig Moyer of Wood River won the USGA National Amateur Qualifying Tournament Tuesday at the Lincoln Country Club.

Moyer fired a 73-73—146 to earn a trip to Los Angeles for the National Amateur Tournament Aug. 31-Sept. 5.

First alternate was Mike Klein of Scottsbluff with a 79-72—151 and second alternate was Steve Statton of Lincoln with a 75-79—154.

Other scores included Tom Sieckmann of Millard with a 74-82—156, Tom Olson of Omaha had a 82-77—159, Ty Swan of Hastings had an 82-80—162 and Ing Maurstad of Beatrice had an 82-80—162.

Fred Gacek had an 81-82—163 while David Walker was disqualified.

Ogden Doesn't Let Kids Show Him Up

By BOB MOYER

At age 42, Derryl Ogden is not ready yet to let the young kids push him aside.

Stan's ageless first baseman has just finished one of his best seasons — leading the Lincoln AAA Softball League in hitting with a .424 mark.

"I'm still in pretty good shape," says Ogden. "I don't drink or smoke which helps. I'll keep on playing until I have a bad year.

"I guess the only difference between now and when I first started playing is I used to have more speed," Ogden adds. "I used to be able to stretch singles into doubles and now I stretch triples into doubles."

Ogden passes off his batting title by saying "I was just lucky," but he notes with pride that he has finished among the top batters in the league for the past several seasons — since complete records have been kept.

Ogden says he has been playing softball for 28 years, starting in AA ball when he was 15 years old.

"I don't think there is as much good pitching as there used to be back in the 1940s," says Ogden. "That helps oldsters like me.

"But I think the caliber of play in the league is getting better each year," he notes. "My son, Ron, played AA-1 ball this year and I saw some good young players down there too. I hope they'll get a chance in AAA ball."

In fact, Ogden is hoping his career will at least last long enough for him to form a father-son duo in the AAA league. Also, his daughter, Laurie, plays for the highly successful Joys girls softball team.

As far as the state tournament, which gets under way Wednesday evening at 6:30 p.m., goes, Ogden feels Stan's has a good chance to win in the wake of Stan's third consecutive league title.

"Maybe the third time's the charm," says Ogden. "I certainly think we're capable of winning."

Even when he is no longer able to play AAA ball, Ogden is hopeful of maintaining an active role. "I love it, I don't know what I'd do if I didn't play softball in the summertime. When I retire maybe I'll umpire or manage. I'll be out there for sure even if it's just to watch," says Ogden.

"You know, I played against the old-timers everybody talks about," says Ogden. "Now I'm the old-timer." That may be so, but he's still showing them how it's done.

The state tournament, won last year by Scottsbluff D & A Manufacturing, will feature 13 teams, seven from Lincoln including Dean's, Val's, Stan's Lounge, Citizens State Bank, Falstaff, Dick Flynn Buick and Misty Lounge.

Out-of-town teams entered include D & A, Scottsbluff Pioneer Lounge, Norfolk Mint Bar, Grand Island Claussens and two teams from Fremont, Koglin Oil and Budweiser.

The tourney runs through Sunday with three games Wednesday through Friday evenings, nine games on Saturday beginning at 9 a.m. and six tilts on Sunday, beginning at 10 a.m.

Finals for the double elimination tourney are set for 7 p.m. on Sunday, unless an extra game is needed to determine the champion. If the extra game is played, it will be at 8:30 p.m. on Sunday. The tourney is sponsored by the Northeast Lincoln Businessmen's Association.

Prai Returns From Football To Aid Judds

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

Ralston — Joe Prai wasn't so sure he could afford a return to Orval Smith Field after Lincoln Judds eliminated North Platte from the state American Legion baseball tournament Monday by a 4-0 count.

Prai was suffering from somewhat of an identity crisis and it didn't help to look at his uniform because it kept changing from baseball to football and back to baseball.

Prai decided in favor of sandwiching a baseball game between two football practices at Northeast High School again Tuesday, and Judds coach Bill Fagler was glad he did.

Prai's single in the bottom of the fourth inning drove in the only two runs of the game while the surprise Capital City entry sent another team packing with a 2-0 decision over Millard in the double elimination tourney.

The win marked the first time a Fagler coached team had beaten Millard in nine tries over the past four years.

Topping that off was the fact that Millard had captured the state high school tournament this past spring with much the same lineup.

As late as Tuesday noon, there was still some doubt that Prai, one of three football players on the team, would make the trip.

"Joe got full backing from coach Els (Northeast football coach Bob Els)," Fagler said. "But I'm sure Joe is the type of kid who thinks it's nt fair to the other football players if he's missing practice. With that single, I'm sure he made the right decision."

Prai took off immediately after the game for Lincoln and the evening session of practice.

His single drove in Rocky Surface, who led off the inning with a walk and Bruce Reed, who doubled to send Surface to third base.

Another important factor in the game was Judds' pitcher Don Shelton's ability to go the full nine innings after losing a heartbreaker to Papillion in the first round 1-0 pitching all 12 innings Saturday.

"Papillion's pitcher (Mike Fantaski) still isn't ready to pitch and their coach said he probably wouldn't be able to Wednesday either," Fagler said.

Shelton allowed seven hits and was only in trouble twice, but got out of the trouble both times. Millard's most serious threat was in the top of the fourth when Shelton allowed two hits.

Millard pitcher Jeff Hunter opened with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice bunt. A sharp single to center by Tom Paasch was grabbed by Brad Lobeda and his throw to the plate caught Hunter trying to score.

"We ought to really find out what we're made of in that one," Fagler of the scheduled 8 p.m. contest. "We'll have to come back with our No. 3 pitcher (Tom Reinhart). He'll be fresh and he's a good pitcher, so it should be interesting. All the teams left are good ones."

In the second game, Papillion defeated Ralston, 7-3, behind the hitting of pitcher Dave Dame. Dame swatted a two-run home run in the sixth inning and added two more RBIs.

Dame allowed 10 scattered hits and three runs in advancing his pitching mark to 6-2.

In the final game, Creighton Prep blanked Omaha Westside, 5-0 behind pitcher Joe Franco.

Franco, who hurled a complete nine-inning game, struck out 11 Westsiders while walking only three. He allowed just three hits — a single, double and triple.

Nebraska Chooses Sanders

John Sanders, who had been head football coach at Arizona Western College in Yuma the past two years, was named assistant baseball coach at the University of Nebraska.

Sanders replaced Bob Gates, who last month was selected as the head baseball coach at the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

Sanders, a former prep standout at Grand Island High School, was picked as The Sunday Journal and Star's High School Athlete of the Year in 1964.

Last year at Arizona Western, the Matadors were 24-15 and qualified to compete in the National Junior College divisional playoffs.

Sanders was graduated from the University of Northern Colorado in 1969 and earned his Masters there a year later. While in Greeley, Sanders coached baseball at University High School.

A standout American Legion baseball player, he signed a professional contract with the Kansas City A's following his high school graduation. He played in Kansas City during 1965 and spent the next four years with the A's and the New York Mets' organization.

According to NU head coach Tony Sharpe, Sanders' experience help next year's Husker baseball squad. "His experience regarding professional and college baseball is endless," Sharpe said. "His appearance on our staff will be a definite plus for our team next year."

Sanders and his wife, Marilee, have two children, John Craig, 4, and Elizabeth Jane, 8.

In Tourney, Girls Were 'Swinging In The Rain'

By ALAN H. FALLICK
Star Sports Writer

It's too bad that Dick Reinmiller and his 14 Lincoln Swingers forgot to bring their umbrellas to Binghamton, N.Y., last Wednesday.

"I question the idea of holding a tournament where they have only three days of sunshine a year," said Reinmiller, who coached his team to a seventh-place finish in the National Junior High Girls Softball Tournament last weekend.

"Every time they would get ready to play it would rain," he said.

Torrential downpours, however, did not stop Nebraska's state champion in the girls' junior high tourney from winning four of six games in New York.

An opening-day 8-4 trouncing of host Binghamton did more than advance the Swingers into the second round of the double-elimination tournament. "We were the town's favorite team after that," Reinmiller said.

The New York crowd, whose spirit was not dampened by the many game postponements, cheered as the Swingers edged Orlando (Fla.) 7-6 on Friday and walloped Kansas City Metro 11-1 on Saturday.

"It seemed like all the good hits were caught," Reinmiller said. "In some games, we just plain lucked out."

Finishing seventh of 40 teams — the best finish ever for any Nebraska team — was surprising since only one Swinger is 15 years old and the others are 13 and 14 years old.

"The majority of girls on the other teams were 15, real powerhouses," said Reinmiller, who feared the tourney would become a single-elimination contest after the rains interfered with the schedule.

With three triumphs by Saturday, the Swingers waited for their fourth game against Dallas. And they waited. And waited. Until 2 a.m. Sunday, when the rain let up.

"Most of the day Saturday we slept," said pitcher Penny Pappas, who started all six games for Lincoln.

Girls' softball, however, was not meant to be played with a moon above your shoulder and sleep in your eyes. Dallas seemed to be wider awake and gave the Swingers their first loss, an 11-1 belting.

Lincoln rebounded for a 9-8 victory over New York State later Sunday morning but fell out of the tournament on Monday with a 5-1 loss to Illinois. "The Illinois coach said we were too small to be in the tournament," Reinmiller said.

Pappas won four games but said the Swingers were not confident. "Everybody was nervous because none of us had been to the Nationals before," said the 14-year-old lefthander.

Although they are a newly formed unit, the Swingers have been in the national tourney three of the last four years. This summer, the Swingers played more games than any other tourney entry and won 52 of 74 contests before the tournament. They almost didn't get there.

"We didn't expect to have enough money to go," Pappas said. "I think it was great that all the businesses helped us raise enough money."

Raising funds helped players like Swinger center fielder Kelly Erisman show off their defensive talents. "She made catches which had the crowds talking," Reinmiller said.

Some teams spent a lot but received little more than a quick hello and goodby after arriving in Binghamton. Alaska's entry in the tournament, for example, paid $9,000 in airfare alone only to lose its first two games and return to Anchorage.

Some of the luckier teams, like the Swingers, got chances to go sightseeing.

"I'd never been in New York before," Reinmiller said. "My idea of New York was paving and tall buildings. It wasn't like that all."

The swingers arrived in Lincoln Tuesday and were greeted by smiling, hugging and kissing relatives for the first time in six days. Although 14 girls were hoping for a rest, they soon learned otherwise.

"We have a game tonight at 8 at Muny Field," Reinmiller said.

Youngsters To Learn Bowhunting

Bowhunting has grown by leaps and bounds the past few years in Nebraska. Youngsters will have a chance to learn from veterans like state bowhunting champion Mike Swiggart (right) at Saturday's Lincoln Young Hunters Clinic, cosponsored by the Sunday Journal and Star and the Lincoln Ikes. It's free to youngsters 16 and younger. Signup at the Ikes grounds seven miles east of Lincoln on Highway 2, will begin at 8 a.m. (Star staff photo)

Blue Chips Post Gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Several big-name blue chip and glamor issues led the stock market to a moderate gain Tuesday as the Republican party neared a decision on its candidate for president.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 6.57 to 999.34, its highest close in nearly five weeks.

The average last finished a session above 1,000 on July 14, at 1,005.16.

Dow Jones' transportation and utility averages recorded somewhat smaller gains than the industrials.

Advances outpaced declines by about a 5-4 margin in the daily tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume increased to a moderate 18.50 million shares from 16.21 million Monday.

Analysts said that, individual preferences aside, traders appeared to be doing some buying on the theory that the Republicans' decision on a candidate would settle an uncertainty that has been inhibiting the market.

The news came from the GOP convention in Kansas City during the day that President Ford had accumulated public commitments from one more delegate than he needs to win the nomination.

But the formal decision remained to be made Wednesday night.

The market also drew some support from individual corporate developments affecting some of the front-rank growth and blue chip stocks.

—Staying Ahead—

Study Shows Investments Did Better Than Savings

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Are you one of the record numbers of people cashing in your mutual fund shares? Or do you think you ought to?

With the stock market puffing and panting just to stay even, it seems that small investors can't bail out quickly enough. In the first half of this year, mutual funds gave $1.7 billion more back to investors than they took in in new sales — their worst six months ever. Between 1970 and mid-1975, mutual funds lost a total of one million shareholders (a 27% loss), while the stock market lost an additional 5.5 million investors (an 18% loss).

Much of the money that is coming out of the market has gone into savings accounts. The question is, have the stock-market dropouts done the right thing?

Yale Hirsch, publisher of the stock-market letter Smart Money, thinks not, especially if you're a long-term investor saving for retirement. No matter how bad things look now, he argues, if you hold on for the long term you'll come out ahead.

To prove his point, he made a study of all the 25-year periods in the market, beginning with 1928-1953, and compared them with returns from savings accounts over the same periods. In every instance, the long-term investor did better than the long-term saver, usually by a tremendous margin. After deducting a rough estimate for taxes, the long-term investor beat the competition by an average of 12 to 1.

The actual figures are shown in the table below. But first, a word on how they were derived.

The total return on the Dow Jones Industrials includes dividends reinvested at the end of each year. Hirsch assumed the dividends were taxed at 23%, and also deducted 2% for brokers' commissions. At the end of the period, he made a rough adjustment for capital gains taxes and sales commissions.

In the savings-account column, he worked with passbook rates, ranging from a low of 1½% to a high of 5¼% today. Again, interest was assumed to be taxed at 23%. The final result, then, fairly shows the appreciation you'd realize from a stock investment as compared with a savings account over that period. All the figures shown are percentage increases.

The fourth column shows the increase in consumer prices. As you can see, savings accounts kept ahead of inflation in only three of the periods, while the stock market always did, and by a wide margin.

25-Year Periods	Dow Return After Taxes	Savings Return After Taxes	Consumer Prices
1928-53	97.6%	58.0%	57%
1929-54	241.8%	55.6%	59%
1930-55	507.2%	53.6%	60%
1931-56	1,155.7%	52.4%	76%
1932-57	1,296.1%	51.9%	105%
1933-58	1,019.8%	52.2%	123%
1934-59	1,147.4%	52.7%	118%
1935-60	718.2%	53.9%	117%
1936-61	673.5%	55.9%	114%
1937-62	900.0%	58.3%	112%
1938-63	812.6%	60.7%	119%
1939-64	973.2%	63.4%	121%
1940-65	1,217.8%	66.2%	126%
1941-66	1,157.5%	70.0%	120%
1942-67	1,226.6%	73.9%	104%
1943-68	1,103.8%	77.8%	100%
1944-69	810.3%	81.9%	108%
1945-70	655.0%	86.7%	115%
1946-71	767.4%	91.7%	105%
1947-72	858.6%	96.8%	87%
1948-73	703.4%	102.4%	85%
1949-74	614.6%	107.8%	108%
1950-75	495.8%	112.9%	123%

Translating the above results into dollars, $1,000 invested in stocks grew an average of $9,239 after taxes, whereas $1,000 left in a savings account rose an average of only $1,712.

Even if you don't reinvest dividends, the appreciation in stocks alone usually outpaces inflation. In only two of the 25-year periods of this century (both ending in the early 1950s) did consumer prices run ahead of the gain in stocks, whereas they almost always ran ahead of savings accounts.

The doubling of consumer prices induced by World War I was followed by a roaring 50% market rise in the 1920s, Hirsch says. The 74% inflation during World War II and after preceded a gain in stocks of 523% between 1949 and 1965.

During the Vietnam years and after, we've so far had a 75% leap in consumer prices. Hirsch thinks the market will do as it has twice before, and rise some 500% off from its December 1974 bottom of 570 on the Dow. That, says Hirsch, would put the Dow at 3,420 sometime in the early to mid-1980s. A big number, indeed. But even if it's too big, the historical argument in favor of attractive long-term price gains looks good.

Farm Futures Post Declines

Chicago (AP) — Active liquidation and, later, a lack of buyers combined to produce limit declines in four of the major farm commodity futures on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

Soybeans were down 20 cents a bushel, soybean meal $10 a ton, soybean oil 100 points or 1 cent a pound and oats 6 cents a bushel — all limits. Wheat futures were down 9½ cents and corn 5¼.

Hogs, Cattle Lose Ground

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Both hogs and cattle lost ground on the Omaha livestock market Tuesday.

The day's hog run was estimated at about 4,300 head.

The trade on barrows and gilts opened slow, but closed fairly active.

The trend on butcher offerings weighing in from 200-to-260 pounds trended 50-to-75 cents lower, while heavier weights were called 25-to-50 cents off.

There were about 5,000 cattle and calves on offer.

Defector Returns To USSR

MONTREAL (UPI) — Sergei Nemtsanov, a 17-year-old Soviet Olympic diver whose defection touched off a diplomatic row between Canada and the Soviet Union, Tuesday returned to the USSR

An immigration spokesman said Nemtsanov, his lawyer, an interpreter and two friends met for 15 minutes in the coffee shop of the Holiday Inn in downtown Montreal After a brief conversation the teenager left with the Soviets

Nemtsanov's lawyers said the youth "last night, at his request, expressed the wish to the Canadian immigration authorities to return

"He expressed to them that he had been considering returning for the past couple of days

"After a lengthy interview last night, which concluded early in the morning, he decided that he would rest overnight and make a final decision

"His final decision was to return to the USSR," the lawyers David I Matheson and Alex K Paterson said in a joint statement

Nemtsanov's defection in the midst of the already politically troubled Olympics put the Canadian government under pressure as the Soviets demanded his return and charged the youth was kidnapped and brainwashed by professionals

Canada denied the charge and refused to return the boy against his will

The Soviet ambassador in Ottawa delivered two stiff notes of diplomatic protest and USSR sports officials threatened to pull their hockey team out of the Canada Cup series next month

Nemtsanov remained in hiding throughout his Canadian stay, refusing to speak with news media. But spokesmen for the youth said he had defected seeking freedom, and planned to remain in Canada.

Soviets delivered to him, however, letters from his mother who he had not seen since age five and from the aged and ailing grandmother with whom he lived

The lawyers said Tuesday Nemtsanov, who had been staying in Toronto with the John Fleming family, was motivated to return by his grandmother's illness

They said "throughout Sunday and Monday, he told the Fleming family that he was concerned over the health of his aging grandmother and accordingly wanted to return, and he confirmed this at the interview with the Canadian Immigration authorities

Soviet officials declined to say when Nemtsanov would leave the country The next scheduled Aeroflot flight to Moscow from Montreal leaves Thursday

In all, nine persons defected to Canada during the games All but one were from Eastern Bloc states

Deeter, Benish In Golf Lead

Norfolk (AP) — Debbie Benish of Norfolk and Jane Deeter of Lincoln, both University of Nebraska golfers, took the lead in the first day of the annual State Women's Best Ball golf tournament at the Norfolk Country Club

They led the gross scoring with a two-under-par 72 and were in a four-way tie for the net handicap lead with 10 under par 64

All 54 teams are competing in both events over the three-day, 54-hole tourney

Omahans Sharon Slattery and Barb Burton are second in gross with even par 74 and one of the four groups in the net with 64

Marian Howard and Mary Bookstrom of Lincoln and Pat Vogel and Jerre Mallory of Grand Island have 64s to tie the net

Omaha Loses To Iowa, 5-3

Des Moines, Iowa (AP) — Sam Ewing knocked in three runs with two doubles and Mike Squires hit a two-run home run with two out in the eighth to give Iowa a 5-3 American Association victory over Omaha Tuesday

The Royals had gained a 3-3 tie on Jim Ottens balk with the bases full in the top of the eighth Two home runs by Dave Gripe accounted for the other two Omaha runs

Auerbach Eyes New Prospects

BOSTON (UPI) — What could the Red Auerbach be looking for when he greets recruits and free agents later this week at his rookie camp?

The Celtics are coming off their 13th NBA title and expect to have everyone back except Don Nelson, who announced his retirement last January and has been reconsidering since Since it is doubtful the Celtics want the 36-year-old forward back, one roster spot at most is open

Auerbach, however, looks at the situation differently

"There are so many free agents around" because of the ABA's demise and the outpouring of undrafted but hopeful collegians "that all the training camps should be more competitive this year After the first five or six players on your team, you will have lots and lots of players who could fill out a roster "

Let's see how Auerbach's remark applies to the Celtics The players assured of jobs are Dave Cowens, Paul Silas, Jo Jo White, Charlie Scott and John Havlicek — provided he is healthy and still determined to play another season

After two seasons, the management is still puzzled about the inconsistency of Glenn McDonald, Jim Ard and Kevin Stacom It says here McDonald certainly will be around for another season and that Ard, whose best performance as a Celtic came in the 1976 playoffs, will stay unless an unknown 7-footer materializes in training camp

The enigma is Tom Boswell, last year's top draft choice Heinsohn swears Boswell is not another Steve Downing, that he does have special talent and that he will round into a tough cornerman

However, the Celtics picked up many of the same qualities in 1976 top choice Norm Cook of Kansas He comes recommended by White, a former star at Kansas who has seen him several times, and by Providence Coach Dave Gavitt, who called Cook the best player in the 1975 Pan American Games Heinsohn also has seen Cook twice and likes him very much

With third round choice Jerry Fort, who also comes well recommended out of the University of Nebraska, and six other picks, the Celtics seem overloaded with potential players Yet Auerbach said he expects four free agents at the camp, including second-timer Ed Searcy and Freddy Saunders, Phoenix' second round choice in 1974

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Wednesday, August 18, 1976

Jupiter is politics and so is the ninth horoscope sector — Saturn cannot be ignored, Mercury is in there "communicating," the planets, signs and houses all play a role if one will but look, analyze, delineate. Goodwin Knight, a governor of California, knew it and kept a file of horoscopes. Theodore Roosevelt knew it and kept his own horoscope mounted on a chess board in the White House. Many signers of the Declration of Independence also knew it. Obviously, astrology and politics are no strangers!

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on movement, action, ideas, trips, messages from relatives. Open lines of communication — check various factors so that you come up with complete story. Member of opposite sex plays important role. Gemini, Virgo individuals could be featured.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Money and how it gets that way — that is emphasized. Adjustment in domestic life indicated — gift, purchase of luxury item is likely to be on agenda. Gesture of reconciliation, involving family member, may be spotlighted.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lunar cycle coincides now with initiative, inventiveness, new starts, pioneering concepts. Make personal appearances. No need to take back seat — stand up and be counted. What seems a setback will boomerang in your favor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Study Gemini message. Be ready to engage in discreet conversations. Be responsible enough to keep confidences. You'll have more to do, more authority, more money. Relationship intensifies. If single, there is talk of marriage. Married or single, you may be investing money or time in a business.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Remind friend of promise. Don't permit pride to block progress. You have right to expect fair treatment. Get rid of burden not rightly your own. Finish what you start. Insist to better display, distribution. Aries, Gemini and Libra figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Highlight independence. Get to heart of matters. Accept responsibility. Open dialogue with professional associate, superior. Cooperate in civic project. Be aware of standing in community. Leo, Aquarius persons are part of your personal montage.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Long-range projects, communications could be spotlighted. One who taught you in past could make reappearance. Share knowledge. Think of security, basic necessities — and do something about it. Language, age barrier can be overcome.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You get chance to dig beneath surface indications. Be willing to recognize truth when you encounter it. Money and love probably will be involved. Diversify — be versatile, willing to socialize, experiment. Come out of shell. Gemini, Sagittarius could be in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lie low — play waiting game. Be positive concerning legal rights, permissions. Accent on partnership, long-term relationship and marital status. Let others take initiative. Be a shrewd, careful observer. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio persons could figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Change of routine may be necessary. Learn rules before attempting to break them. Means be familiar with homework, basic structures, issues. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius figure in picture. Keep medical, dental appointments — and remember diet resolutions!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good moon aspect coincides now with creativity, romance, change, variety, young persons, speculative ventures, new life and enthusiasm. Fun and games, happier domestic situation — these all are possible, even likely to occur. Libra and Gemini could be very much in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Real property, land, solid objects come into focus. Values, appraisals, security are of concern. You're able to build for future — if inner voice is heeded. You know what is true. Don't put yourself off track by rationalizing. You'll comprehend!

IF AUGUST 18th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you understand theater, law, basics of healing arts. You have great presence; when you come into a room, people are aware of it. When you walk, talk people watch and listen. You can be aggressive, overbearing; you can flaunt the rules and members of opposite sex spoil you. You want attention and when you don't get it . . . people kow about it. April was important — October will feature changes, chance for written expression of ideas. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

10 Pigeons Get Lost In Clouds

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ten top racing pigeons left the Empire State Building in a promotional stunt Tuesday to show it was just a short hop to the new Meadowlands sports complex in East Rutherford, N.J.

The pigeons got lost.

"The pigeon race was expected to be completed in about 10 minutes, or roughly half the time it will take motorists to reach" the new $300 million sports complex, a statement from the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority said.

"I can't understand it," said one publicity agent waiting impatiently for word of the pigeons' arrival.

"Good thing they're not heading for Central Park at night, they'd get mugged," replied one of the 30 or so reporters covering the event.

Thirty-seven minutes after takeoff, the only arrivals at the Meadowlands — the new home of pro football's Giants — were a reporter and a "wayward seagull," a promotion official said. The reporter had left downtown New York just after the pigeons were released and had "been mired in traffic," he said.

"When we had a dry run on July 30, one of the birds made it in 5 minutes and 40 seconds, but it was very foggy then," Woertz said.

After circling the 86th floor observation deck of the Empire State Building, the 10 birds disappeared to the north in the direction of Central Park.

Finally, an hour and 47 minutes after takeoff, the 10 pigeons found their way home.

Baseball Holds Fan Interest

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball will survive its cold divisional races and the hot final days of summer because of its fascination with the decimal point.

Baseball plays twice as many games as any of the other major American sports. It doesn't hold any allegiance to a clock and it can get boring, especially in the absence of divisional races.

The 24 major league teams have gone through three-fourths of the season and have six weeks and some 40 games left. Football, basketball and hockey are already crowding baseball for media attention.

But don't count baseball out yet. When the national pastime's pace slows down even more than it's supposed to, the true fan reaches for a bottle of beer and a slew of statistics. For example:

—Will George Foster of Cincinnati win the triple crown? If he does he will become the first player to accomplish the feat of taking the titles in batting average, home runs and runs batted in since Carl Yastrzemski in 1967 and the first National Leaguer to win all three since Joe Medwick in 1937?

—Will Hal McRae of Kansas City become the first designated hitter to win the American League batting title? If he does he'll end Rod Carew's streak of four straight AL batting crowns. Carew, from Minnesota, currently trails McRae, the league leader, by 30 points.

—Who will win 20 games? Randy Jones of San Diego, already with 19 victories, could join the club for the second straight year. Jim Palmer of Baltimore leads the AL with 16 victories. Catfish Hunter of the New York Yankees, seeking his sixth straight 20-victory season is 14-12 with, perhaps, a dozen starts left.

And when the fans get tired of batting around the record book, they can take a couple of swipes at the managerial directory. Will Earl Weaver be answering Baltimore's phone next year? Will rookie manager Karl Kuehl of Montreal stick around for Round 2? Will Charles O. Finley of Oakland keep Chuck Tanner or name his unlucky 13th field boss since 1961?

Only second-place managers still believe in pennant races. Philadelphia and Cincinnati hold commanding leads in the NL, while the Yankees and Kansas City have plenty of breathing space in the AL.

Tanner, however, still is talking division race in the AL West, where the A's have won the past five years. "It's my dream to be in a World Series and I still think we're gonna do it," he said.

To get past the regular season, the A's must win big while the Royals have to lose big. If Kansas City plays .500 baseball the rest of the season, Oakland must win nearly 75 per cent of its games to take the division flag.

The odds are even worse for the other second-place teams, Baltimore in the AL East, Pittsburgh in the NL East and Los Angeles in the NL West.

These four runners-up probably will have to be satisfied with their place money, probably over $1,000 per man.

The top three teams in each division get a cut of the playoff money. Last year that amounted to $43,373 for each of the four second-place teams and $11,414 for the third-place clubs.

Other questions:

—Will Dave Kingman of the Mets win the NL home run crown? He's been out one month with a torn thumb ligament and is expected back soon. Despite the layoff, Kingman still leads the NL with 32 homers. Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia, bidding for his third straight home run championship, has 31 and Foster, well ahead in the RBI race and close to the top in hitting, has 27.

—Will Reggie Jackson of Baltimore be the home run king in the AL? With 100 fewer at bats than the other leaders because of injuries and an early season holdout, Jackson has predicted he would lead the league in both home runs and RBI. He's not far behind in either.

—Will Mark Fidrych of Detroit, 13-4, become the first rookie to win 20 games since Bob Grim in 1954?

Landry Views Longley Future

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Coach Tom Landry said Wednesday that suspended reserve quarterback Clint Longley had telephoned him regarding the training camp feud with Roger Staubach but added "nothing has changed."

"Clint called me Sunday night and said he felt bad about the embarrassment the incident had caused the Cowboys," said Landry. "His loss has been a great blow to our football team."

Landry refused to be specific over whether Longley had asked to be forgiven for punching Staubach last Thursday but there was every indication the Cowboys were attempting to comply with Longley's desire to be traded.

"I don't know what will happen," said Landry. "There is no timetable. Hopefully, something will happen during the week."

Asked point blank if he would take Longley back, Landry said, "I'm not sure at this point. I'm leaning a certain way but it wouldn't be fair to say which way."

Landry said the Cowboys just may go into the regular season with Staubach and Danny White as the only two quarterbacks.

If Landry did take Longley back, Longley would have to face Staubach's wrath. Staubach feels Longley took a cheap shot at him. Staubach said Longley punched him when Staubach had his arms over his head putting on his shoulder pads for practice. Staubach suffered a nine-stitch gash over his left eye when he hit some training room scales.

Longley's version of the incident was that Staubach shoveled chairs at him to provoke the fight.

The Cowboys, runnersup in Super Bowl X, have lost all three of their preseason games and Landry said, "It is coming to the point where a win is important. You can establish a trend. We haven't been losing badly but losing is losing."

Fonner Slates Grandstand Work

Grand Island (UPI) — The president of the Hall County Livestock Improvement Association announced Tuesday approval of final plans for a $500,000 addition to the grandstand at Fonner Park.

H. W. Harrington said Mid-Plains Construction Co. of Grand Island was the low bidder on the project and workmen will start work this week.

The addition will be a new third level, measuring 280 feet long by 80 feet wide, over the existing concourse and will connect at the top of the current grandstand bleacher seating.

Al Swihart, general manager, said the new third level was designed and developed to alleviate congestion by providing grandstand patrons with additional betting windows, concession stands and rest rooms.

The area immediately behind the existing grandstand bleachers will have table and chair seating for about 450 persons and will offer a view of the entire race track.

Harrington said the project is scheduled for completion Feb. 1, 1977. Fonner Park's thoroughbred racing season begins March 3, 1977.

AUDIENCE ENGROSSED . . . as villain J.D. Stewart tries to trick unwitting heroine Kathy Rothenberger.

Mellerdrammers . . .

They're insulted, ridiculed, oohed, aahed, booed and hissed night after night, week after week . . . and they keep coming back for more.

To performers in the Theatre Inc. of Lincoln mellerdrammers the catcalls and cheers are a sure sign of success. And they love it.

Supporters of and actors in Theatre Inc. productions have been staging these brouhahas in 12-week summer sessions for nearly 14 years.

It takes dedication, hours and weeks of rehearsals, not to mention the time put in on performance days. Many of those involved — actors, technical and production crews — do this in addition to a full day at work.

"It's lots of fun — good, cheap fun," said Lee Schoonover, longtime member who directs many of the productions.

One thing that keeps the mellerdrammers going is each participant's "love of the theater."

"As a volunteer thing, it can be very grueling," he continued. "But there are some really die-hard people who are here year after year."

"I think I grow bigger with each show," said Marie Muffley, a longtime member of Theatre Inc. who helps with makeup and costuming for every performance. "I find myself more involved after every season."

Many actors also find mellerdrammers appealing because previous acting experience is not of prime importance. Performing in mellerdrammers is a good "crash course in learning (about acting) in the most pleasant possible way," Schoonover said.

"This is one place to get rid of inhibitions," Mrs. Muffley added.

"Some mellerdrammer performers have to be coached to lose their inhibitions, but it is almost impossible to be too dramatic on the mellerdrammer stage," Schoonover said. "It is a stylized overacting. For example, the villain walks and gestures in a certain way. He has a certain tempo of speech."

"You don't need to be a great actress" to be in the mellerdrammers, said Brandee Dworsky, who has performed at the Lincoln Community Playhouse for several years.

"It's such a put-on compared to real life," added the actress who made her mellerdrammer debut this year in the musical production "No Sooner Won Than Wed." "The heroine has to be overly sweet and the villain has to be real evil. But if you have done mellerdrammer, you could go to playhouse (performing) easily. You get over all kinds of shyness."

In mellerdrammers, the audience has an active role in the entire skit. They boo, hiss and aah respective characters; and sometimes ad lib.

"People in the audience, bless them, do come up with gems that really shake up the actors," Schoonover added.

But if the actors are sometimes caught off-guard, so too are some people in the audience, especially when one finds an actor or actress sitting in his lap; when the performers say their lines directly to one person in the audience rather than to the characters on stage; or when the performers leave the script to exchange barbs with the audience.

Some mellerdrammer-goers are more involved in the on-stage antics than others. Mike Luenenborg became an actor in the mellerdrammers simply by being in the audience when one of the actors wasn't able to perform that evening. Luenenborg was handed the script and told to get on stage.

He did. He enjoyed it and has since performed in other mellerdrammers. Now Luenenborg plans to try out for Lincoln Community Playhouse productions.

Sometimes the audience gets involved in even more unusual ways. Like the time a certain actor lost his contact in the popcorn that was thrown on stage. "We had the whole audience down on the floor looking for it," Mrs. Muffley said. "And we found it, too!"

But like any other theater, no matter what happens, the show must go on. Even the time, Schoonover recalls, when two young women in a chorus line for "Fireman's Flame" danced right out of their halter tops.

WILES . . . Carol Gamble works on Bill Rothenberger.

Theater Inc. Serious Business

Since their inception in 1963, the Theatre Inc. of Lincoln mellerdrammers have become a summertime tradition.

And while most of mellerdrammer participants are volunteers — only the director and pianist are paid — they "don't take mellerdrammer lightly," said Marie Muffley, president of the organization. The group even has been asked to go on tour.

"We give the public the best of mellerdrammers," she said. "We pay high royalties for our plays."

Initially, Theatre Inc. was an outgrowth of the Lincoln Community Playhouse, when it was being directed by Rolland Reed, explained Lee Schoonover, director of several of the mellerdrammer productions.

The mellerdrammer group was started because the playhouse only had a fall and winter season, and when that season was over Reed's salary stopped, he said.

"We wanted to do something, so we sold stock — $25 per share — in Theatre Inc. and started the mellerdrammer season," he added.

The mellerdrammers originally were held in the Leionnaire Club in the old Lincoln Hotel and "were the only summer entertainment in Lincoln," said Marceil Dreier, who handles Theatre Inc. publicity.

In 1965, the group moved its productions to a vacated garage beside the Gas Light Theatre. Later, the garage and the theatre were combined and Theatre Inc. mellerdrammers were continued there until this year. Now, the mellerdrammers are back in their 9th and P St. "home," now the Lincoln Hilton Hotel.

The mellerdrammers have come a long way from their cramped quarters at the old Lincoln Hotel. Last year, approximately 6,000 people attended the summer performances.

"Lincoln couldn't support the mellerdrammers all year round," Mrs. Muffley said.

But on Saturday night's it's not unusual to find standing room only in Fanny's Pink Garter at the Hilton.

Nielsen's 'Boomtown' Now Playing

What do you call a person who writes a mellerdrammer?

A mellerdrammertist? A heroine addict? A hiss-man?

None of the above. All of the above. Alan Nielsen.

Right on the last response.

Alan Nielsen — known to Howell Memorial Theater patrons as the author of "Home Front" and "Portraits" — did, in his early period, write a mellerdrammer.

"Bad Day At Boomtown, Or Frontier Justice Is Far-Reaching And All-Encompassing and the Sheriff'll Getcha If You Don't Watch Out" is what he called it. But not all in one breath.

And those interested in early Nielsen in particular, or mellerdrammers in general, can catch a performance of "Boomtown," Wednesday through Saturday nights, until Aug. 28, at Fanny's Pink Garter in the Lincoln Hilton.

Nielsen, who is working on a master's degree in theater at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, wrote "Boomtown" ten years ago.

A sophomore at Concordia College in Seward at the time, he created the play for a Concordia homecoming celebration.

Although "Boomtown" has brought Nielsen neither fame nor fortune, it did provide him with the dubious distinction of having written a play that was banned in Clarinda, Iowa.

Seems that Nielsen had a friend who was in charge of a Clarinda church's youth group.

Nielsen gave his friend permission to use the play. But some of the parents objected to some of the parts, and . . . you know the rest.

Despite that "setback," Nielsen speaks fondly of the play, which, in addition to its Seward performance, also was staged at a Detroit, Mich., high school.

The hero has "a mother problem"; the heroine is not of lily-white virtue; in fact, "they (the characters) are all kind of opportunistic," he said of the play.

All of which is in keeping with Nielsen's belief that a good mellerdrammer "provides the audience with something new."

Defining the difference between "melodrama" and "mellerdrammer," Nielsen said a melodrama is a "play in which the plot drives the characters." "The Poseidon Adventure" and television shows like "Hawaii Five-O" are good examples of melodrama, he explained.

"The characters are at the mercy of what happens to them." The characterization is "really not very deep, there are no psychological insights" and there's "lots of action."

Western melodramas, popular from about 1850 to 1900, lend themselves well to mellerdrammer interpretation.

The dialogue in these melodramas, taken seriously during the 19th century, "now seems very stilted," Nielsen said. "So we turn it into a mellderdrammer, we farce it up."

GOOD VS. EVIL . . . showdown draws popcorn from audience.

Yard Issues Sketch Of Swaggering Bully

London (UPI) — Scotland Yard Tuesday issued a sketch of a "swaggering bully" they believe was the ringleader of a trio who killed a defenseless boy at a swimming pool before 1,000 witnesses who ignored his screams for help.

It was the first major development in the nearly six-week-old murder of Enrico Sidoli, a friendly, talkative 15-year-old with a nervous tic, who was beaten and held under water while a crowd estimated at about 1,000 persons watched.

For a month, Scotland Yard detectives could not get a single witness to talk about the July 8 attack which resulted in young Enrico's death.

Then, a newspaper's offer of a reward brought forth a flood of information which enabled detectives to issue the drawing of their chief suspect whom they described as a "swaggering bully" in his late teens.

Their description is complete even to the kind of badges the 17- or 18-year-old suspect wears on his t-shirts and the kind of boots he wears.

Less detailed descriptions have been obtained of the other two youths involved in the attack. Scotland Yard sources said all three youths were believed to be still in the Kentish Town area where the slaying took place.

"At long last we are reaching them," Detective Chief Inspector Harry Clements said Tuesday, referring to the sudden surge of witnesses coming forward to talk about the killing.

"Groups of youngsters are now coming to their senses," Clement, who for 37 days had met what he called a "wall of silence" on the case, said.

"They are coming into the police station at Kentish Town and asking, 'What can we do to help?' They are stopping police in the street, asking for details of the youths we want to interview and then going off to look for them.

"The cooperation is wonderful," Clements said. "It is so different from what it was a few weeks ago."

Kentish Town, the North London area where Enrico lived, teems with teenage gangs who prey on younger children. Local people were not surprised at the complete "wall of silence" around Enrico's murder.

All For One Brick's Width

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

You don't need a sociologist to tell you that we're living in a complex, interdependent world.

Evidence abounds. Take the case of the L&L Investment Co. and what happened when they decided to put a new brick front on the Terminal Building at 10th and O St.

The path of their quest for official approval took them through three levels of government — city, state and federal — and past a sundry lot of public servants including volunteer committee members.

It's a story that offers insight into the growth of forests of bureaucrats, the cutting of forests of trees and the continual demand for secretaries.

"It's the damnedest thing I ever saw," marvels Ronald Rosenberg, an owner in the investment company.

Rosenberg, who is an attorney and versed in dealing with intricate matters, knew something of the governmental maze that lay ahead when the company decided to put on a new brick front.

It meant infringing a bit on the public land surrounding the building, although Rosenberg notes, "We're only asking a brick's width."

You may not think of the sidewalk around the Terminal Building as your own land, but it is.

This does not mean, however, that you should take to loitering on your property at this particular spot. Before you know it one of Lincoln's persons in blue may take an official interest in your habits.

At any rate, Rosenberg knew the public had an interest in the matter of his company putting a brick front on its building.

So he started at the city attorney's office. He was referred to the public works, department where someone took charge.

But, as sometimes happens, a file was lost; Rosenberg supplied more plans of his firm's intended improvements.

Time passed. In routine fashion came the approval of the "Highway Access Control Officer, Right of Way Division, State Department of Roads."

In similar routine fashion came the approval of the "Highway Administrator, Federal Highway Administration, U.S. Department of Transportation."

At this point, Rosenberg recalled, "I thought, 'Not too bad.' "

Suddenly events took an unexpected turn. His firm's request was guided toward the pheriphery of municipal government.

There the Urban Design Committee awaited. The committee, composed of volunteers and chaired by an architect, is one of the more than 100 advisory committees that maintain a vague existence in city affairs.

"I had never heard of them," Rosenberg recalled. But he went to the meeting and the project was approved, although the committee dallied for a time waiting for a member to appear for a quorum.

Actually the quorum may never have been attained, because one of the members disqualified himself from voting because of a conflict of interest. But then procedures are not always chiseled in stone in the matters of advisory committees.

Monday, almost three months after the quest began, the issue went to the City Council, accompanied by a respectably thick sheaf of documents.

With hardly a word, in a matter of seconds, the council applied its stamp of approval. But the brief, anticlimatic scene does not end the story.

Rosenberg is afraid that the bids for the project that he solicited weeks ago will no longer be good. If it gets into winter before the work can be done, "they'll really be no good," he observed.

He is left asking:

"Why do we have to put up with all this bullshit to get something done?"

Take A Look At The Night Sky

By DICK LITTLETON

Most Nebraskans, like their cousins in the other 49 states, live daily in oblivion of the glories that burn nightly above their heads. Events like the moon landings, and now the Viking missions to Mars, help to re-alert us to "what's up top." Natural events too, such as the expected appearance of the comet Kohoutek in 1973 and the "aurora borealis" visible in Nebraska this spring catch folks' attention and draw their eyes upward and their minds outward.

But we don't have to wait for a multimillion dollar space effort or the infrequent arrival of some cosmic phenomenon to wonder at the stars and planets in our sky. In fact, this month and the next are good months for wondering since there are a number of common (yet uncommon) things to see . . . at no charge.

The evening star low in the west just after sundown this time of year, is not a star at all. That's Venus and you have to look quick because she speedily ducks below the horizon each night and is gone by 10:30 p.m.

Jupiter, that bright "star" that rises in the east, is up and about by midnight and hanging high in the sky come dawn. If you look at him with average-to-strong pair of binoculars, you can see tiny points of light suspended very near the disk-like image of this planet. Those tiny points of light are four of Jupiter's twelve moons.

If you want to catch Saturn, you'll have to be an early riser (or make it one heck of a long night) because the ringed planet (which is lighter than water and therefore would float if you could find an ocean big enough) will be easiest to locate just about sunrise on Monday, Aug. 23. Look left of the crescent moon. Once you find it, you can show your friends because Saturn will hang around the eastern sky, just before dawn, through most of September. With an average amateur telescope, you will see the rings.

The bonus package comes the evening of Aug. 27. Get out your binoculars again and, just after it gets dark, look between the moon and Venus and you will find Mercury and Mas. Yes, that's the same Mars that Viking I is on and Viking II is orbitting.

On Sept. 5, Mercury and Venus are in conjunction at 11 p.m., so look for them to draw closer on the preceding nights. By 11 p.m., however, on the 5th, they will have dropped out of sight but in early twilight you should be able to see them very close together.

Five days later, on Sept. 10, it will be Mars in conjunction with Venus. Again, look for them to approach each other in the nights that lead up to the 10th.

All this time, Jupiter will have been moving easterly in relation to its background stars and the nearby constellation, the Pleides. But, if you measure its motion carefully, you will notice that it slows as Sept. 19 approaches., On the 19th, the king of planets will appear to begin to move backwards; that is, to the west. This interesting reversal, known among astronomers as "retrograde" motion, was noticed by early star watchers and was one clue that led Gallileo to theorize that the earth orbitted inside of Jupiter and that both orbitted around the sun. This perceptive observation cost him the Man of the Year award back then.

Talk over this retrograde phenomenon with your friends and see if you can figure out how it happens and why it indicates our orbital relation with Jupiter.

Remember that Mercury was to be in the west, hanging around Venus in the evening during late late August and early September? Well, during the first half of October, you will be able to see Mercury in the east in the pre-dawn sky. This points up the changeableness of the planets. (The word "planet" comes from a Greek word meaning "wanderer.") No planet is THE evening star or THE morning star. All you can say is, "It varies."

There are several ways to learn more about what's going on above us each night. Relevant magazines and books are good. If you are lucky enough to live in a town having an observatory or a planetarium, make frequent use of them because they are obviously first-rate sources. However, the source is incidental as long as it is reliable. The main thing is the mind-broadening, soul-stirring, eye-filling reality of . . . the night sky.

Mom Would Lie Now If Phoned By School

DEAR ABBY: So a teacher was upset because a student skipped school and her mother lied to protect her. Well, listen to this:

When my son was 15, he skipped school and I was called at work and asked if he was home sick. I said, "No, if he's not at school, he's playing hooky."

dear abby

I was then informed that because he had skipped school three times before, he was kicked out of school for the remainder of the semester.

After trying for two and one half months to get him back in, I found out it was against the law to suspend a student for that long, but by then, he was so far behind, he couldn't catch up, so he lost a whole semester.

I always thought honesty was the best policy, but that's the thanks I got for being honest.

If I had known then what I know now. I'd have lied to protect my son and punished him in my own way.

UPSET PARTIN IN HELENA, MONTANA

DEAR UPSET: Although I think suspension is a most inappropriate punishment for skipping school, I can't condone lying to cover up a child's truancy.

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the husband and wife who allowed their small son into the bedroom during their most intimate moments interested me. This is a far cry from the way I was raised.

I was taught that sex was invented by the devil and was dirty, disgusting and sinful.

Now, at middle age, after two marriages and two children, I still haven't been able to think of sex as anything else.

Perhaps if my parents had invited me into their bedroom, I would have been less frustrated, self-conscious and guilt-ridden where sex is concerned.

JUST JOHN

DEAR JOHN: Sex education can and is taught to include an honest explanation without live demonstrations.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	1 NT
Pass	3 NT

Opening lead - jack of hearts.

To be a good bridge player, one must acquire the habit of making assumptions. Very often these assumptions turn out to be wrong, but that doesn't necessarily mean it was wrong to make them; it simply means that you can't be right all the time.

Here is a typical case. Let's say you're East and partner leads the jack of hearts. South wins with the queen and plays a spade to the jack. It doesn't matter whether you win this spade or the next one with the ace; what does matter is what you play next.

It's easy to see — if you look at all four hands — that if you return a low diamond to partner's ace you can snatch four diamond tricks and put the contract down one. But if you don't return a low diamond at trick three — perhaps because you were taught not to lead away from a king — declarer comes home with eleven tricks.

The fact is, regardless of what you've been taught, that in this particular case you must assume that West has the ace of diamonds and base your low diamond return on that assumption.

To assume that South has the ace of diamonds — or to ignore the question of who has the ace — and blindly or ceremoniously return partner's lead, a heart, would be giving up. It is obvious that declarer will score at least nine tricks — five spades, two hearts and two clubs — if you play "safe" and return a heart.

It is true that West must also have somewhat more strength in diamonds than simply four to the ace — he must have at least the jack with it — but this is merely an extension of the original assumption.

Blue Chips Post Gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Several big-name blue chip and glamor issues led the stock market to a moderate gain Tuesday as the Republican party neared a decision on its candidate for president.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 6.57 to 999.34, its highest close in nearly five weeks.

The average last finished a session above 1,000 on July 14, at 1,005.16.

Dow Jones' transportation and utility averages recorded somewhat smaller gains than the industrials.

Advances outpaced declines by about a 5-4 margin in the daily tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume increased to a moderate 18.50 million shares from 16.21 million Monday.

Analysts said that, individual preferences aside, traders appeared to be doing some buying on the theory that the Republicans' decision on a candidate would settle an uncertainty that has been inhibiting the market.

The news came from the GOP convention in Kansas City during the day that President Ford had accumulated public commitments from one more delegate than he needs to win the nomination.

But the formal decision remained to be made Wednesday night.

The market also drew some support from individual corporate developments affecting some of the front-rank growth and blue chip stocks.

Study Shows Investments Did Better Than Savings

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Are you one of the record numbers of people cashing in your mutual fund shares? Or do you think you ought to?

With the stock market puffing and panting just to stay even, it seems that small investors can't bail out quickly enough. In the first half of this year, mutual funds gave $1.7 billion more back to investors than they took in in new sales — their worst six months ever. Between 1970 and mid-1975, mutual funds lost a total of one million shareholders (a 27% loss), while the stock market lost an additional 5.5 million investors (an 18% loss).

Much of the money that is coming out of the market has gone into savings accounts. The question is, have the stock-market dropouts done the right thing?

Yale Hirsch, publisher of the stock-market letter Smart Money, thinks not, especially if you're a long-term investor saving for retirement. No matter how bad things look now, he argues, if you hold on for the long term you'll come out ahead.

To prove his point, he made a study of all the 25-year periods in the market, beginning with 1928-1953, and compared them with returns from savings accounts over the same periods. In every instance, the long-term investor did better than the long-term saver, usually by a tremendous margin. After deducting a rough estimate for taxes, the long-term investor beat the competition by an average of 12 to 1.

The actual figures are shown in the table below. But first, a word on how they were derived.

The total return on the Dow Jones Industrials includes dividends reinvested at the end of each year. Hirsch assumed the dividends were taxed at 23%, and also deducted 2% for brokers' commissions. At the end of the period, he made a rough adjustment for capital gains taxes and sales commissions.

In the savings-account column, he worked with passbook rates, ranging from a low of 1½% to a high of 5¼% today. Again, interest was assumed to be taxed at 23%. The final result, then, fairly shows the appreciation you'd realize from a stock investment as compared with a savings account over that period. All the figures shown are percentage increases.

The fourth column shows the increase in consumer prices. As you can see, savings accounts kept ahead of inflation in only three of the periods, while the stock market always did, and by a wide margin.

25-Year Periods	Dow Return After Taxes	Savings Return After Taxes	Consumer Prices
1928-53 ..	97.6%	58.0%	57%
1929-54 ..	241.8%	55.6%	59%
1930-55 ...	507.2%	53.6%	60%
1931-56	1,155.7%	52.4%	76%
1932-57	1,296.1%	51.9%	105%
1933-58	1,019.8%	52.2%	123%
1934-59	1,147.4%	52.7%	118%
1935-60 .	718.2%	53.9%	117%
1936-61 .	673.5%	55.9%	114%
1937-62 .	900.0%	58.3%	112%
1938-63 ..	812.6%	60.7%	119%
1939-64 .	973.2%	63.4%	121%
1940-65	1,217.8%	66.2%	126%
1941-66	1,157.5%	70.0%	120%
1942-67	1,226.6%	73.9%	104%
1943-68 .	1,103.8%	77.8%	100%
1944-69 .	810.3%	81.9%	108%
1945-70 ..	655.0%	86.7%	115%
1946-71 .	767.4%	91.7%	105%
1947-72	858.6%	96.8%	87%
1948-73	703.4%	102.4%	85%
1949-74	614.6%	107.8%	108%
1950-75	495.8%	112.9%	123%

Translating the above results into dollars, $1,000 invested in stocks grew an average of $9,239 after taxes, whereas $1,000 left in a savings account rose an average of only $1,712.

Even if you don't reinvest dividends, the appreciation in stocks alone usually outpaces inflation. In only two of the 25-year periods of this century (both ending in the early 1950s) did consumer prices run ahead of the gain in stocks, whereas they almost always ran ahead of savings accounts.

The doubling of consumer prices induced by World War I was followed by a roaring 50% market rise in the 1920s, Hirsch says. The 74% inflation during World War II and after preceded a gain in stocks of 523% between 1949 and 1965.

During the Vietnam years and after, we've so far had a 75% leap in consumer prices. Hirsch thinks the market will do as it has twice before, and rise some 500% off from its December 1974 bottom of 570 on the Dow. That, says Hirsch, would put the Dow at 3,420 sometime in the early to mid-1980s. A big number, indeed. But even if it's too big, the historical argument in favor of attractive long-term price gains looks good.

Farm Futures Post Declines

Chicago (AP) — Active liquidation and, later, a lack of buyers combined to produce limit declines in four of the major farm commodity futures on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

Soybeans were down 20 cents a bushel, soybean meal $10 a ton, soybean oil 100 points or 1 cent a pound and oats 6 cents a bushel — all limits. Wheat futures were down 9½ cents and corn 5¼.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Wednesday, August 18, 1976

Jupiter is politics and so is the ninth horoscope sector — Saturn cannot be ignored. Mercury is in there "communicating," the planets, signs and houses all play a role if one will but look, analyze, delineate. Goodwin Knight, a governor of California, knew it and kept a file of horoscopes. Theodore Roosevelt knew it and kept his own horoscope mounted on a chess board in the White House. Many signers of the Declration of Independence also knew it. Obviously, astrology and politics are no strangers!

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on movement, action, ideas, trips, messages from relatives. Open lines of communication — check various factors so that you come up with complete story. Member of opposite sex plays important role. Gemini, Virgo individuals could be featured.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Money and how it gets that way — that is emphasized. Adjustment in domestic life indicated — gift, purchase of luxury item is likely to be on agenda. Gesture of reconciliation, involving family member, may be spotlighted.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lunar cycle coincides now with initiative, inventiveness, new starts, pioneering concepts. Make personal appearances. No need to take back seat — stand up and be counted. What seems a setback will boomerang in your favor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Study Gemini message. Be ready to engage in discreet conversations. Be responsible enough to keep confidences. You'll have more to do, more authority, more money. Relationship intensifies. If single, there's talk of marriage. Married or single, you may be investing money or time in a business.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Remind friend of promise. Don't permit pride to block progress. You have right to expect fair treatment. Get rid of burden not rightfully your own. Finish what you start. Insist on better display, distribution. Aries, Gemini and Libra figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Highlights independence. Get to heart of matters. Accept responsibility. Open dialogue with professional associate, superior. Cooperate in civic project. Be aware of standing in community. Leo, Aquarius persons are part of your personal montage.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Long-range projects, communications could be spotlighted. One who taught you in past could make reappearance. Share knowledge. Think of security, basic necessities — and do something about it. Language, age barrier can be overcome.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You get chance to dig beneath surface indications. Be willing to recognize truth when you encounter it. Money and love probably will be involved. Diversify — be versatile, willing to socialize, experiment. Come out of shell. Gemini, Sagittarius could be in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lie low — play waiting game. Be positive concerning legal rights, permissions. Accent on partnership, long-term relationship and marital status. Let others take initiative. Be a shrewd, careful observer. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio persons could figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Change of routine may be necessary. Learn rules before attempting to break them. Means be familiar with homework, basic structures, issues. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius figure in picture. Keep medical, dental appointments — and remember diet resolutions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good moon aspect coincides now with creativity, romance, change, variety, young persons, speculative ventures, new life and enthusiasm. Fun and games, happier domestic situation — these all are possible, even likely to occur. Libra and Gemini could be very much in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Real property, land, solid objects come into focus. Values, appraisals, security are of concern. You're able to build for future — if inner voice is heeded. You know what is true. Don't put yourself off track by rationalizing. You'll comprehend.

IF AUGUST 18th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you understand theater, law, basics of healing arts. You have great presence, when you come into a room, people are aware of it. When you walk, talk, people watch and listen. You can be aggressive, overbearing, you can flaunt the rules and members of opposite sex spoil you. You want attention and when you don't get it, people know about it. April was important — October will feature changes, chance for written expression of ideas. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Lifescape

AUDIENCE ENGROSSED . . . as villain J.D. Stewart tries to trick unwitting heroine Kathy Rothenberger.

Mellerdrammers . . .

They're insulted, ridiculed, oohed, aahed, booed and hissed night after night, week after week . and they keep coming back for more

To performers in the Theatre Inc of Lincoln mellerdrammers the catcalls and cheers are a sure sign of success And they love it

Supporters of and actors in Theatre Inc productions have been staging these brouhahas in 12-week summer sessions for nearly 14 years

It takes dedication, hours and weeks of rehearsals, not to mention the time put in on performance days Many of those involved — actors, technical and production crews — do this in addition to a full day at work

It s lots of fun — good, cheap fun," said Lee Schoonover longtime member who directs many of the productions

One thing that keeps the mellerdrammers going is each participant's "love of the theater "

' As a volunteer thing, it can be very grueling," he continued ' But there are some really die-hard people who are here year after year "

' I think I grow bigger with each show," said Marie Muffley, a longtime member of Theatre Inc. who helps with makeup and costuming for every performance "I find myself more involved after every season "

Many actors also find mellerdrammers appealing because previous acting experience is not of prime importance Performing in mellerdrammers is a good "crash course in learning (about acting) in the most pleasant possible way," Schoonover said

"This is one place to get rid of inhibitions," Mrs Muffley added

"Some mellerdrammer performers have to be coached to lose their inhibitions, but it is almost impossible to be too dramatic on the mellerdrammer stage," Schoonover said "It is a stylized overacting For example, the villain walks and gestures in a certain way He has a certain tempo of speech "

"You don t need to be a great actress" to be in the mellerdrammers, said Brandee Dworsky, who has performed at the Lincoln Community Playhouse for several years

"It's such a put-on compared to real life," added the actress who made her mellerdrammer debut this year in the musical production "No Sooner Won Than Wed " "The heroine has to be overly sweet and the villain has to be real evil But if you have done mellerdrammer, you could go to playhouse (performing) easily. You get over all kinds of shyness "

In mellerdrammers, the audience has an active role in the entire skit They boo, hiss and aah respective characters, and sometimes ad lib

"People in the audience, bless them, do come up with gems that really shake up the actors," Schoonover added

But if the actors are sometimes caught off-guard, so too are some people in the audience, especially when one finds an actor or actress sitting in his lap, when the performers say their lines directly to one person in the audience rather than to the characters on stage, or when the performers leave the script to exchange barbs with the audience

Some mellerdrammer-goers are more involved in the on-stage antics than others Mike Luenenborg became an actor in the mellerdrammers simply by being in the audience when one of the actors wasn't able to perform that evening Luenenborg was handed the script and told to get on stage

He did He enjoyed it and has since performed in other mellerdrammers Now Luenenborg plans to try out for Lincoln Community Playhouse productions.

Sometimes the audience gets involved in even more unusual ways Like the time a certain actor lost his contact in the popcorn that was thrown on stage ' We had the whole audience down on the floor looking for it," Mrs Muffley said "And we found it, too!"

But like any other theater, no matter what happens, the show must go on. Even the time, Schoonover recalls, when two young women in a chorus line for "Fireman's Flame" danced right out of their halter tops.

WILES . . . Carol Gamble works on Bill Rothenberger.

VILLAIN . . . J.D. Stewart (by day a bellboy) victimizes innocent Judy Susman.

Theater Inc. Serious Business

Since their inception in 1963, the Theatre Inc of Lincoln mellerdrammers have become a summertime tradition

And while most of mellerdrammer participants are volunteers — only the director and pianist are paid — they "don't take mellerdrammer lightly," said Marie Muffley, president of the organization The group even has been asked to go on tour

"We give the public the best of mellerdrammers," she said "We pay high royalties for our plays "

Initially, Theatre Inc was an outgrowth of the Lincoln Community Playhouse, when it was being directed by Rolland Reed, explained Lee Schoonover, director of several of the mellerdrammer productions

The mellerdrammer group was started because the playhouse only had a fall and winter season and when that season was over Reed s salary stopped, he said

' We wanted to do something so we sold stock — $25 per share — in Theatre Inc and started the mellerdrammer season, ' he added

The mellerdrammers originally were held in the Leionnaire Club in the old Lincoln Hotel and "were the only summer entertainment in Lincoln," said Marcel Dreier, who handles Theatre Inc publicity

In 1965, the group moved its productions to a vacated garage beside the Gas Light Theatre Later, the garage and the theatre were combined and Theatre Inc mellerdrammers were continued there until this year Now, the mellerdrammers are back in their 9th and P St "home," now the Lincoln Hilton Hotel

The mellerdrammers have come a long way from their cramped quarters at the old Lincoln Hotel Last year, approximately 6,000 people attended the summer performances

' Lincoln couldn't support the mellerdrammers all year round," Mrs Muffley said

But on Saturday night's it's not unusual to find standing room only in Fanny's Pink Garter at the Hilton

Nielsen's 'Boomtown' Now Playing

What do you call a person who writes a mellerdrammer?

A mellerdrammertust? A heroine addict? A huss-man?

None of the above All of the above Alan Nielsen

Right on the last response

Alan Nielsen — known to Howell Memorial Theater patrons as the author of "Home Front" and "Portraits" — did, in his early period, write a mellerdrammer

' Bad Day At Boomtown, Or Frontier Justice Is Far-Reaching And All-Encompassing and the Sheriff'll Getcha If You Don t Watch Out" is what he called it But not all in one breath

And those interested in early Nielsen in particular, or mellerdrammers in general, can catch a performance of "Boomtown," Wednesday through Saturday nights, until Aug 28, at Fanny's Pink Garter in the Lincoln Hilton

Nielsen, who is working on a master's degree in theater at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, wrote "Boomtown" ten years ago

A sophomore at Concordia College in Seward at the time, he created the play for a Concordia homecoming celebration

Although ' Boomtown" has brought Nielsen neither fame nor fortune, it did provide him with the dubious distinction of having written a play that was banned in Clarinda, Iowa

Seems that Nielsen had a friend who was in charge of a Clarinda church s youth group

Nielsen gave his friend permission to use the play But some of the parents objected to some of the parts, and you know the rest

Despite that "setback," Nielsen speaks fondly of the play, which, in addition to its Seward performance, also was staged at a Detroit, Mich , high school

The hero has "a mother problem ', the heroine is not of lily-white virtue, in fact, ' they (the characters) are all kind of opportunistic ' he said of the play

All of which is in keeping with Nielsen s belief that a good mellerdrammer "provides the audience with something new

Defining the difference between ' melodrama and "mellerdrammer Nielsen said a melodrama is a ' play in which the plot drives the characters " ' The Poseidon Adventure ' and television shows like "Hawaii Five-O" are good examples of melodrama, he explained

"The characters are at the mercy of what happens to them " The characterization is "really not very deep there are no psychological insights ' and there's ' lots of action '

Western melodramas popular from about 1850 to 1900 lend themselves well to mellerdrammer interpretation

The dialogue in these melodramas, taken seriously during the 19th century, now seems very stilted, Nielsen said So we turn it into a melliderdrammer we farce it up

GOOD VS. EVIL . . . showdown draws popcorn from audience.

All For One Brick's Width

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

You don't need a sociologist to tell you that we're living in a complex, interdependent world.

Evidence abounds. Take the case of the L&L Investment Co. and what happened when they decided to put a new brick front on the Terminal Building at 10th and O St.

The path of their quest for official approval took them through three levels of government — city, state and federal — and past a sundry lot of public servants including volunteer committee members.

It's a story that offers insight into the growth of forests of bureaucrats, the cutting of forests of trees and the continual demand for secretaries.

"It's the damnedest thing I ever saw," marvels Ronald Rosenberg, an owner in the investment company.

Rosenberg, who is an attorney and versed in dealing with intricate matters, knew something of the governmental maze that lay ahead when the company decided to put on a new brick front.

It meant infringing a bit on the public land surrounding the building, although Rosenberg notes, "We're only asking a brick's width."

You may not think of the sidewalk around the Terminal Building as your own land, but it is.

This does not mean, however, that you should take to loitering on your property at this particular spot. Before you know it one of Lincoln's persons in blue may take an official interest in your habits.

At any rate, Rosenberg knew the public had an interest in the matter of his company putting a brick front on its building.

So he started at the city attorney's office. He was referred to the public works, department where someone took charge.

But, as sometimes happens, a file was lost; Rosenberg supplied more plans of his firm's intended improvements.

Time passed. In routine fashion came the approval of the "Highway Access Control Officer, Right of Way Division, State Department of Roads."

In similar routine fashion came the approval of the "Highway Administrator, Federal Highway Administration, U.S. Department of Transportation."

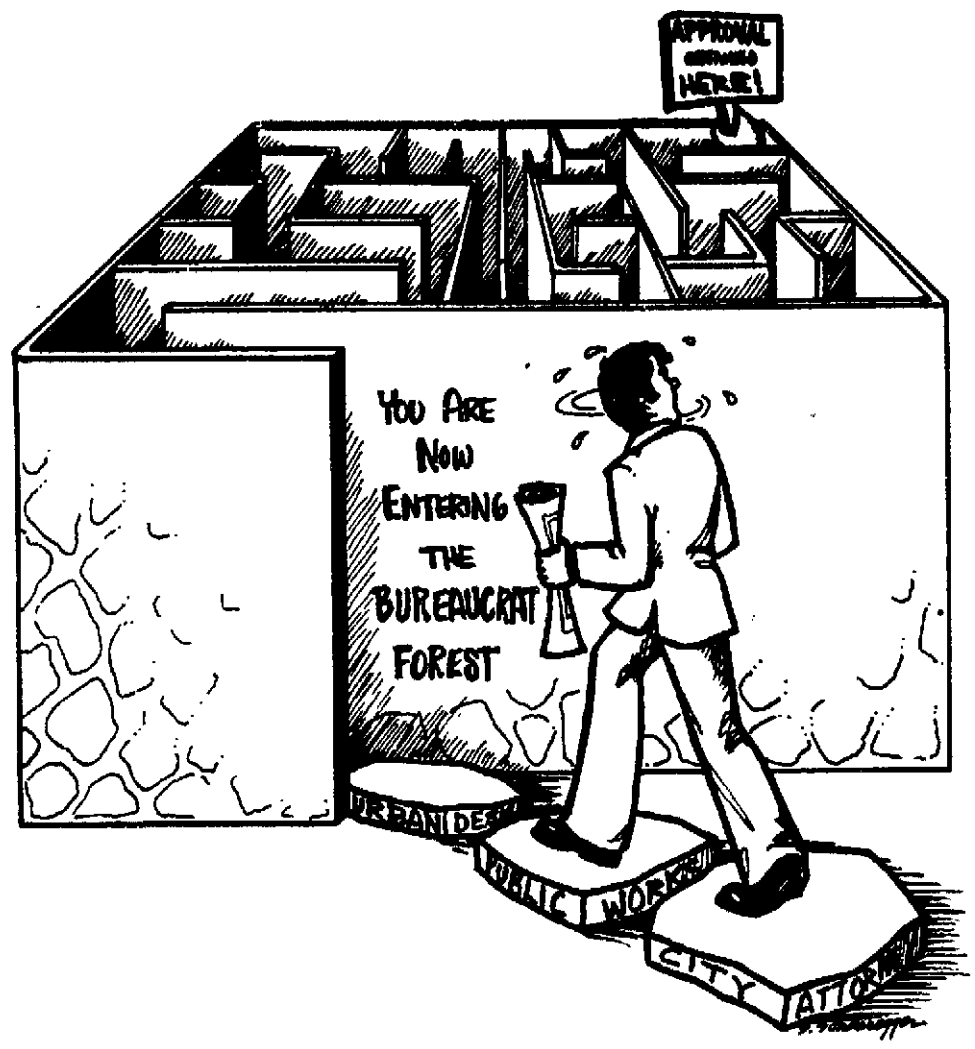
At this point, Rosenberg recalled, "I thought, 'Not too bad.' "

Suddenly events took an unexpected turn. His firm's request was guided toward the pheripery of municipal government.

There the Urban Design Committee awaited. The committee, composed of volunteers and chaired by an architect, is one of the more than 100 advisory committees that maintain a vague existence in city affairs.

"I had never heard of them," Rosenberg recalled. But he went to the meeting and the project was approved, although the committee dallied for a time waiting for a member to appear for a quorum.

Actually the quorum may never have been attained, because one of the members disqualified himself from voting because of a conflict of interest. But then procedures are not always chiseled in stone in the matters of advisory committees.



Monday, almost three months after the quest began, the issue went to the City Council, accompanied by a respectably thick sheaf of documents.

With hardly a word, in a matter of seconds, the council applied its stamp of approval. But the brief, anticlimatic scene does not end the story.

Rosenberg is afraid that the bids for the project that he solicited weeks ago will no longer be good. If it gets into winter before the work can be done, "they'll really be no good," he observed.

He is left asking:

"Why do we have to put up with all this bullshit to get something done?"

Take A Look At The Night Sky

By DICK LITTLETON

Most Nebraskans, like their cousins in the other 49 states, live daily in oblivion of the glories that burn nightly above their heads. Events like the moon landings, and now the Viking missions to Mars, help to re-alert us to "what's up top." Natural events too, such as the expected appearance of the comet Kohoutek in 1973 and the "aurora borealis" visible in Nebraska this spring catch folks' attention and draw their eyes upward and their minds outward.

But we don't have to wait for a multimillion dollar space effort or the infrequent arrival of some cosmic phenomenon to wonder at the stars and planets in our sky. In fact, this month and the next are good months for wondering since there are a number of common (yet uncommon) things to see . . . at no charge.

The evening star low in the west just after sundown this time of year, is not a star at all. That's Venus and you have to look quick because she speedily ducks below the horizon each night and is gone by 10:30 p.m.

Jupiter, that bright "star" that rises in the east, is up and about by midnight and hanging high in the sky come dawn. If you look at him with average-to-strong pair of binoculars, you can see tiny points of light suspended very near the disk-like image of this planet. Those tiny points of light are four of Jupiter's twelve moons.

If you want to catch Saturn, you'll have to be an early riser (or make it one heck of a long night) because the ringed planet (which is lighter than water and therefore would float if you could find an ocean big enough) will be easiest to locate just about sunrise on Monday, Aug. 23. Look left of the crescent moon. Once you find it, you can show your friends because Saturn will hang around the eastern sky, just before dawn, through most of September. With an average amateur telescope, you will see the rings.

The bonus package comes the evening of Aug. 27. Get out your binoculars again and, just after it gets dark, look between the moon and Venus and you will find Mercury and Mas. Yes, that's the same Mars that Viking I is on and Viking II is orbitting.

On Sept. 5, Mercury and Venus are in conjunction at 11 p.m., so look for them to draw closer on the preceding nights. By 11 p.m., however, on the 5th, they will have dropped out of sight but in early twilight you should be able to see them very close together.

Five days later, on Sept. 10, it will be Mars in conjunction with Venus. Again, look for them to approach each other in the nights that lead up to the 10th.

All this time, Jupiter will have been moving easterly in relation to its background stars and the nearby constellation, the Pleides. But, if you measure its motion carefully, you will notice that it slows as Sept. 19 approaches., On the 19th, the king of planets will appear to begin to move backwards; that is, to the west. This interesting reversal, known among astronomers as "retrograde" motion, was noticed by early star watchers and was one clue that led Gallileo to theorize that the earth orbitted inside of Jupiter and that both orbitted around the sun. This perceptive observation cost him the Man of the Year award back then.

Talk over this retrograde phenomenon with your friends and see if you can figure out how it happens and why it indicates our orbital relation with Jupiter.

Remember that Mercury was to be in the west, hanging around Venus in the evening during late late August and early September? Well, during the first half of October, you will be able to see Mercury in the east in the pre-dawn sky. This points up the changeableness of the planets. (The word "planet" comes from a Greek word meaning "wanderer.") No planet is THE evening star or THE morning star. All you can say is, "It varies."

There are several ways to learn more about what's going on above us each night. Relevant magazines and books are good. If you are lucky enough to live in a town having an observatory or a planetarium, make frequent use of them because they are obviously first-rate sources. However, the source is incidental as long as it is reliable. The main thing is the mind-broadening, soul-stirring, eye-filling reality of . . . the night sky.

Mom Would Lie Now If Phoned By School

DEAR ABBY: So a teacher was upset because a student skipped school and her mother lied to protect her. Well, listen to this:

When my son was 15, he skipped school and I was called at work and asked if he was home sick. I said "No, if he's not at school, he's playing hooky."

dear abby

I was then informed that because he had skipped school three times before, he was kicked out of school for the remainder of the semester.

After trying for two and one half months to get him back in, I found out it was against the law to suspend a student for that long, but by then, he was so far behind, he couldn't catch up, so he lost a whole semester.

I always thought honesty was the best policy, but that's the thanks I got for being honest.

If I had known then what I know now I'd have lied to protect my son and punished him in my own way.

UPSET PARTIN IN HELENA, MONTANA

DEAR UPSET: Although I think suspension is a most inappropriate punishment for skipping school, I can't condone lying to cover up a child's truancy.

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the husband and wife who allowed their small son into the bedroom during their most intimate moments interested me. This is a far cry from the way I was raised.

I was taught that sex was invented by the devil and was dirty, disgusting and sinful.

Now, at middle age, after two marriages and two children, I still haven't been able to think of sex as anything else.

Perhaps if my parents had invited me into their bedroom, I would have been less frustrated, self-conscious and guilt-ridden where sex is concerned.

JUST JOHN

DEAR JOHN: Sex education can and is taught to include an honest explanation without live demonstrations.

Opening lead - jack of hearts.

To be a good bridge player, one must acquire the habit of making assumptions. Very often these assumptions turn out to be wrong, but that doesn't necessarily mean it was wrong to make them; it simply means that you can't be right all the time.

Here is a typical case. Let's say you're East and partner leads the jack of hearts. South wins with the queen and plays a spade to the jack. It doesn't matter whether you win this spade or the next one with the ace; what does matter is what you play next.

It's easy to see — if you look at all four hands — that if you return a low diamond to partner's ace you can snatch four diamond tricks and put the contract down one. But if you don't return a low diamond at trick three — perhaps because you were taught not to lead away from a king — declarer comes home with eleven tricks.

The fact is, regardless of what you've been taught, that in this particular case you must assume that West has the ace of diamonds and base your low diamond return on that assumption.

To assume that South has the ace of diamonds — or to ignore the question of who has the ace — and blindly or ceremoniously return partner's lead, a heart, would be giving up. It is obvious that declarer will score at least nine tricks — five spades, two hearts and two clubs — if you play "safe" and return a heart.

It is true that West must also have somewhat more strength in diamonds than simply four to the ace — he must have at least the jack with it — but this is merely an extension of the original assumption.
